CAMBRIDGE—MD.

SATURDAY MORNING April 5, 1845.

The Orphans' Court of Dorchester County will sit on the 8th inst.

V. B. PALMER,

No. 59 Pine st. Phila., and 160 Nassau st. (Tribune Buildings.) N. Y., and S. E. corner of Balt. and Calvert st., Baltimore, is our authorized Agent for receiving Advertisements and subscriptions to the "CAMBRIDGE CHRONICLE," and collecting and receipting for the same.

☞ A boy of good moral character and about 16 or 17 years of age, is wanted immediately at this office as an apprentice to the Printing business.

REVENUE LAWS.—We commenced last week the publication of the Revenue Laws, passed at the last session of the Legislature. The two laws contained in to days paper, are a further supplement to the general tax law, passed 1841, and the law imposing a tax upon promissary notes &c. commonly called the stamp tax. These laws are so long that we are prevented from furnishing our readers with the usual variety.

THE STAMP TAX AND CANAL BILL.—We are glad to see that the excitement which was produced in the city of Baltimore by the passage of these laws has in a great measure subsided, and that the intelligent citizens of that place begin to talk and act like rational men—understanding their own interests. We predict that the measures of the last Legislature, if fully and fairly carried out, will accomplish a great deal to redeem the credit of the State, and that at the close of the present year, such result will be manifested by the increased confidence of the Bond holders and consequently the increased value of State Stock.

EX-Governor THOMAS of Maryland, made his appearance yesterday before the Circuit court for this county, and gave security in the sum of one thousand dollars to appear at the next term of the court to answer to the charge of libel as presented by the Grand Jury. H. G. S. KEY, Esq. of St. Mary's county, Maryland, is the bail of ex-Governor THOMAS in this libel case. Gen. WALTER JONES is counsel for Mr. THOMAS.—Nat. Int.

RESISTANCE OF LAW. The Maryland Republican has a long and very able article over the signature of "Maryland," on the proposition made by writers in this and other Baltimore papers, to resist the law of the last session of the Legislature in relation to stamps upon notes, &c. The writer gives a correct review of the influences which led to the passage of the eight millions bill, which is very properly attributed to the exertions of citizens of Baltimore.—It will be recollected that Gov. Pratt was then a member of the Legislature, and the part which he took in regard to the eight millions bill must be well remembered. But, lest some persons should have forgotten the events connected with that bill, we make the following extracts from the communication of "Maryland."

"You know that the eight millions bill was passed as a Baltimore measure, and by the overpowering influence from the city of Baltimore, brought to bear upon the Legislature. You must recollect that our present Governor was then a member of the Legislature, and was one of the most strenuous opponents of that measure. He predicted the very state of things which now exists. He insisted upon the impolicy of the State engaging in the construction of two works, running for eighty miles side by side. He insisted, if the Canal was to be carried to the West, that it should be made a Maryland work, by having its Eastern terminus in Maryland; he advocated successfully, as one of the sections of that bill (see the 8th section of the act of 1835, chap. 395,) a provision that unless it should be first ascertained by an actual survey, that the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal could be extended to Baltimore, by the waters of the Monocacy and Patapsco, or by a route diverging from the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal at the mouth of Seneca river, and unless enough should be actually subscribed to make such Canal to the city of Baltimore, that the subscriptions on the part of the State to the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal should be void. The Treasurer was expressly prohibited from making the subscriptions to the Canal, &c., 'until the Maryland Canal Co. should, by their President and Directors, have certified to the Treasurer that a sufficient amount had been subscribed to justify the commencement and insure the completion of the Canal to Baltimore.' Who were the President and Directors of the Maryland Canal Company? They were citizens of Baltimore. How and by whom was this provision, by which Baltimore was made the Eastern terminus of the Canal defeated? How and by whom was this State saddled with the subscriptions authorized by the act of 1835, without securing to the State the terminus of the Canal at Baltimore?

"Three of the prominent citizens of Baltimore subscribed for the entire stock of the Maryland Canal Company, (some $3,000,000,) without possessing the ability to pay as many cents, and the President and Directors of the Maryland Canal Company (Baltimoreans) certified that they had secured a sufficient subscription to justify the commencement and insure the completion of the Canal to Baltimore."

In regard to the proposed resistance of the Stamp Act, the communication takes the ground, that the resistance of this law by Baltimore, will justify the people of Frederick or Allegany counties in resisting other laws connected with the railroad. The writer says:

"If the people of Baltimore are permitted to resist the Stamp Law, or any other law, the people of Allegany or of Frederick might with equal right claim to nullify the law by which the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company are authorised to have their road to pass through those counties. They would have the same plea and the same justification, for with the same truth they believe that the passage of the road through the limits of these counties is injurous to their interests.

"Now, Baltimore commences the work of resistance to the law, and refuses to obey some one law of the last session, because of its supposed injurious bearing upon her interests. The people of Cumberland; equally excited and equally impressed with the belief that the railroad is detrimental to their interests, assumes the right which is exercised by Baltimore of disregarding the law, and they pull up a mile or more of the road, so as to prevent all communication with their city. Could Baltimore complain? and may not such a course be naturally expected if Baltimore commences this dangerous doctrine?"

We do not believe, that there need be any apprehension of an open resistance of the Stamp or any other law of the legislature in this city. The "sober second thought" will convince the most violent, that such resistance would result in the ruin of the interests of Baltimore, and of the State at large. The amount to be paid under the Stamp Law is utterly insignificant when compared to the loss which would follow the resistance of the law. Reason and discretion are not banished from Baltimore.—Am. Republican.

FOR THE DORCHESTER FARMER'S CLUB.

Published by order of the Club.

Requested under a resolution of the last Club meeting, I submit to them a few additional remarks, in support of the mode of culture of Indian corn, indicated in my last paper, on that subject.

It will be unnecessary for me, before the members of this club, to urge the point of the indispensable necessity of the presence of Nitrogen, for the perfection of all plants, designed for animal enchancement; it is sufficient to demonstrate, that the sources of this essential, elementary material, are more economically appropriated under that culture, than by the usual practice of recent plowing, and cross plowing, &c., &c.

The two great sources of this useful element, are 1st the direct product of all organic bodies, in a state of decomposition—united with Hydrogen, in the form of Ammonia; and with Oxygen, as nitric acid—2nd. the indirect supply from the atmosphere, at large, when it has been diffused, from bodies decaying, on the surface of our lands.

From the infinite accumulation of these materials, it is unquestionable, that the atmosphere must be loaded with these gaseous products, as well as with all other vaporable substances—and it is equally so, that being soluble in water, they will of necessity mix, and descend with the rain, and snow, which may fall upon the earth, from the regions in which they were floating.

Notwithstanding this obvious necessity, of the presence of these gases, and others, occasioned by the causes named, yet, being not apparent to the senses, Farmers, indeed, in general, will not acknowledge the fact; and many others do not appreciate their quantity; which, at the first falling of rain, or snow, and especially after their long suspension, is greater than would be imagined, without actual examination—as I assure you, I have frequently witnessed, on analysis, for my own assurance and gratification.

I have alluded to this important fact, in my former paper, and I renew it, with the more earnestness, because it forms the chief basis, or principle of the mode of culture th rein advocated; and if admitted, the conclusion is unavoidable, that, as before explained, it is better adapted to economise the atmospheric supply of vegetable nutriment, as well as to prevent the waste, by dissipation of the products of the decomposing sward, than the usual practice of recent, and cross plowing.

The soil, too, will be improved, not only by the artificial fixity, given to these volatile substances—the gasses—but by the salts and alkales of the putrescent sward which is placed and preserved in a condition to promote fermentation.

In point of fact, results have accorded to theory a large share of corroboratory evidence.

Tho' motives may be misconstrued, I will venture in aid of the problem, I have proposed for solution to adduce cases of results, in comparison with those of the usual methods—for which I refer to the publications of the facts—sct. 12, the Delaware Advertiser, Wilmington;—and in the American Farmer, Baltimore.

The first named paper notices a sweep-stake, made up by several gentlemen in Delaware, who admitted me, as a member—for the best crop of Indian corn, on one acre;—the Am. Farmer, perhaps more accessible, also published it, at the same time—1829 vol. 11, p 314: my method then, differed from the present, only in the planting of double-drill; and one plant left in place of single drill and two left, which latter I have found to be preferable;—I think, too, in one deep bar furrow, which I have discontinued.

The product of my acre was something more than one hundred bushels, shelled corn—and I obtained the stake—a silver pitcher;—I understood that my competitors all cross plowed.

The Files of the Am. Farmer, also, in 1827 vol 9, page 257 contains a notice of my success, in a competition for two premiums offered by the Md. Agricultural Society—for the best products of Indian corn, on ten acres, and on five acres; both of which, I had the gratification to receive—in evidence of the preference of my mode of culture—which gave me ninety bu. per acre on the five acres—and seventy six per acre on the ten.

On the second—the Maryland case, there happened a considerable drouth—and my neighbours predicted destruction to my crop—but it suffered less than theirs, which was cross plowed; which is well attested by a sweep stake silver pitcher inscribed to that effect—which I received from them: and some of you, gentlemen happen to be of the number, that made the handsome contribution; and I hope, that we may long live to enjoy the festive libations of that, and similar trophies, which some of you have obtained, on similar occasions—for similar achievements, on that arena of competition, where victory leads to the comfort and happiness of mankind.

The inveteracy of custom and prejudice, may long continue the practice of recent, and cross plowing—but I beg of you, generally, to make the experiment, fairly, on a small square of your fields, if you please; and I am fully convinced, you will find the results, which I have stated, and the reasons, on which they were founded most fully and satisfactorily sustained.

This inveteracy of custom, and prejudice has done much to retard the onward march of agriculture: and while its influence continues, it is a vain hope, that we shall see, in general practice, a system, based on principles of science and unerring philosophic induction;—while this impediment continues, the charge of "Book-learning" will be, as it now is, a popular theme of derision; a synonim of folly with the most of our Farmers;—while it continues, the fact of printing, or writing down an established truth, will be, as it now is, enough to discredit it, with a large class of our countrymen at home, and abroad, possessing in other respects, an ordinary sagacity: it is our business—It is our purpose, to ameliorate this unfortunate condition of fatuity—and teach by ocular process—by results, which may be viewed in comparison that they have not attained that ultimate pinnacle of skill, which they fancy they have, innately, derived from their forefathers and that one higher step may, yet be taken by them to advantage: —if successful in the reclamation, we may claim a portion of public gratitude;—if not, yet by the effort, we have performed our duty.

STAINBURN'S MEDICATED SOAP.

THIS truly elegant accompaniment to a Ladies Toilet for removing all eruptions of the skin (has created quite a sensation in the fashionable circles in all the large Cities of the Union) Messrs. White & Anderson desirous of promoting the health, comfort and happiness of the Ladies of Cambridge, have obtained the agency for selling this celebrated Medicated Toilet Soap. Its fragrance is more grateful and reviving than the choicest exotics of the Green House—it only can be used to be justly appreciated—yet at the same time its medicinal virtues are the most prominent feature in its composition—the first trial of it produces a happy change, and so magic and pleasant are its effects that wonder and surprise increase as experience grows older.
