WHEN THE HICKORY NUTS ARE FALLING.

'Bout the first days of Novem.ber seems the world is at its best,
With its ca'm an' stately bearin', in its gorg'us beauty dress'd.
True, the flower scents are scarcer than in leafy days of June,
An' the bird songs ain't as plenty as some summer afternoon;
But they's somethin' in the silence with your better nature chimes—
Like the Lord was somewhat closer then than at all other times!
An' you walk about the woodlands full er
memories an' dreams,
While the hickory nuts are fallin' with a spatter in the streams.

Roamin' by the hazy pastures whar the sagegrass spreads away
Like a muddy inland river er a slowly wav-
in' bay,
You can mighty nigh see faces that have long been hid from view,
An' the skies er old-time Aprils in the jay-bird's coat er blue.
While the whistle er the partridge brings
yer boyhood back again,
When you romped along the byways minus
care an' much er pain;
An' you half wush life had faded with the glad old boyhood dreams,
When the hickory nuts are fallin' with a
spatter in the streams.
—Will T. Hale in New York Times.

THE SENSE OF HONOR.

From Home Magazine.

The hoproom at Fort McKibbon was gay with flags; the floor was like a burnished mirror; nearly all the married officers were there with their wives and daughters, and, of course, not a bachelor was missing; the gold lace on the uniforms glittered in the blaze of many lights; women who in the daytime were merely ordinary mortals had taken on with their evening gowns an air of spirituelle beauty; a waltz had just ended, and the dancers were collected in groups, talking and laughing; the cornetist of the band was playing a solo, when Capt. and Mrs. Kingsley came into the room.

The cornetist caught his breath and lost a note, but no one noticed. The talking and laughing ceased. Everyone knew that Mrs. Kingsley was the most beautiful woman in the army, but no one had ever seen her as beautiful as she was that night.

Everyone looked at her, but she loooked at Capt. Howard only, who was standing alone, and who after gazing at her a moment as if spell-bound, went toward her.

Her eyes were solemn, her mouth unsmiling, as she gave him her hand.

"Well, Howard," said Capt. Kingsley, cordially, laying his hand on Capt. Howard's shoulder. They had been roommates at West Point and firm friends from that time on.

"How are you, Rob," said Capt. Howard, constrainedly.

"Why, what's the matter?" said Capt. Kingsley. "You look as wise as an owl."

"I feel just as I look," said Capt. Howard. "Mrs. Kingsley, may I have the next dance?"

The music began and Mrs. Kingsley nodded and smiled to her husband as she danced away with Capt. Howard.

"Great heavens! This is terrible!" Mrs. Kingsley whispered.

"I wonder if you can imagine how like a traitor I feel?" said Capt. Howard. "I am devoted to Rob, yet here I am, trying to steal his wife."

"But you cannot feel as much like a traitor as I do, for after all his goodness to me—his unfailing love—I want to be stolen."

He stopped dancing and offered her his arm. They went out on the porch. At the farther end of it he turned toward her, and she stepped back from him a little way.

"This cannot go on forever," he said.

"Do you really love me?" she asked.

"You know it."

"And do you know how I love you?"

"Yes."

For a moment she looked into his eyes, then she held out her hands to his.

"No," he said, firmly, taking them, but holding her away from him. "I still have some sense of honor. If Rob were not my friend it would be different, but as it is you must either go away with me and be mine altogether or you must stay here and be only his."

"But if I go away with you it will break Rob's heart."

"I can break his heart without compunction, but I cannot kiss his wife out here in the dark and then go back into the hoproom and speak to him as a trusted friend."

She looked at him scrutinizingly.

"What a curious thing a man is," she said. "My sense of honor would be satisfied if I could keep him from knowing, for I would hate to hurt his feelings."

"Then I am afraid that you have no sense of honor," he said, smiling.

"Yes, I have," she said, without the slightest resentment in her voice. "I wouldn't do anything if he were away, but when he is here to take care of me and to defend his own honor, I really don't think that it is wrong for me to do anything I can without his finding out."

"What a curious thing a woman is," he said, mockingly, but leniently. "However, it is easy for a man to overlook a great many weaknesses and shortcomings in the woman he loves."

"And when a woman loves a man she overlooks nothing," said Mrs. Kingsley. "It would grieve me to death if you were willing to deceive Rob. I am happy in my love for you because I believe that if I did run away with you, you would be as true to me as you are to him."

"And will you go with me?"

"Won't you kiss me unless I do?"

"No," he answered, looking at her steadily. She thought for a moment.

"Then—I will go," she said.

"Alice," said Capt. Kingsley's voice close beside her, "I unintentionally overheard what you said. I was bringing your wrap to you." He laid the cape about her shoulders as he spoke. Come home with me. Howard, meet me in the morning at half an hour before the reveille, at the target range."

The dawn was glimmering in the east, the birds twittered in a desultory fashion, the dew was heavy on the trodden grass, when Capt. Kingsley and Capt. Howard met on the target range.

"You brought your pistol?" said Capt. Kingsley.

"No," said Capt. Howard.

"That is just like you," said Capt. Kingsley. "I suspected that you would not bring one, so I brought two." He handed one to Capt. Howard.

Capt. Kingsley walked five paces away from Capt. Howard.

"Are you ready?" he said, turning toward him.

"Yes."

"Then count three and fire."

The two shots rang out simultaneously. Neither man was touched.

"Why did you do that?" said Capt. Kingsley, frowning.

"Why did you?" said Capt. Howard. "I gave you a chance to revenge yourself."

"What good would revenge do me?" said Capt. Kingsley. "I think that my only wish is to put myself out of the way. Do you mean to shoot me or not?"

"I do not," said Capt. Howard.

"You leave me no alternative. I must do it myself," said Capt. Kingsley.

And he did.

He was buried with military honors in the post cemetery. The papers announced that while he and his friend, Capt. Howard, were shooting at a mark his pistol had gone off accidently and killed him.

The evening after the funeral Mrs. Kingsley was sitting in her drawingroom when Capt. Howard came in.

"Alice," he said, "dreadful as this has been, I cannot regret it, for it gives you to me."

She looked at him, but blankly, as if she did not see.

"What is the matter?" he said. "Don't you love me any more?"

"Love you? Yes, but that has nothing to do with it?" she answered.

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that I am going away tomorrow."

"And when may I come?"

"You? Why, never."

"Aren't you going to marry me?"

"You don't suppose that I could marry you after this? When Rob was alive and at home I would have done anything—anything—but, as I have told you before, if he had been away I would have behaved in a most exemplary manner. Now that he can never come back—now that I am left alone to uphold the honor of his name, do you dream that I would marry you, of all people? My sense of honor forbids it."

She smiled wanly, but there was unflinching resolve in her eyes.

Big Fortunes from Little Inventions.

Geo. Ethelbert Walsh in Cssier's Magazine.

It has become almost an axiom with the majority that larger fortunes are to be raised from some simple invention than from difficult and expensive inventions that involve a great outlay of money to manufacture. This is to a certain extent true. A certain American patent for fastening kid gloves has yielded a fortune of several hundred thousand dollars for its fortunate owner, and the inventor of a collar clasp enjoys $20,000 royalty a year as the reward for his endeavor. A new kind of sleeve button has made $50,000 in five years for its patentee, and the simple twisting of safety pins in such a way that there is no possible danger of the point sticking in the child promises to enrich its owner beyond any of his early dreams of wealth. A man one day turned a piece of wire so as to hold a cork more securely in a bottle, and forthwith somebody saw a brilliant idea, and patented the modern wire stopple-holder, which is now used annually on several million bottles. The accidental bending of a hairpin by a woman to prevent it from sliding out of her hair also easily produced a fortune for her husband, who immediately saw the possibility of a crinkled harpin for women.

Instances could be multiplied indefinitely of large fortunes being made from small inventions; but fortunately for those inventors who make a life study of intricate problems of mechanics, and disdain to waste their talents upon trivial, popular articles of the day, there is often also ample reward held in store for the products that take years to produce, and which revolutionize existing methods of industry and mechanics. Edison has reaped honors and riches of a princely character from his discoveries; McCormick has realized in his reaper the fortune of a millionaire; the Corliss engine brought honors and decorations to its inventor, and enabled him to amass a great fortune in a few years; Prof. Bell found in his telephone not only the consummation of his early hopes and ambitions, but a substantial pecuniary reward; Harveyized steel armor has become synonymous with the inventor's name, and it brings an annual income of huge proportions to its discoverer; Elias Howe, the inventor of the sewing-machine, realized over $2,000,000 from his inventions; and Nikola Tesla, though still young and rich in promises, finds an abundance of money in his work.

Cost of Living in the Yukon.

From Scientific American.

The last report of the United States consul ot Dawson City, speaking of conditions in this most remarkable of all "mushroom cities," states that the large amount of supplies which have lately been brought in has had a tendency to reduce prices on a few commodities. What the higher prices must have been we may judge from the fact that a 50-pound sack of flour at the reduced rate cost, at the date of the consul's letter—Aug. 31—was $50. A hope is expressed that the price of hotel accommodations will be reduced, as none but the wealthy is able to command the luxuries of hotel accommodations, $6 50 per night being the price for a room containing a bed of straw and husks, with a candle for a light, and board costing the moderate sum of $12 per day. If the citizens of this metropolis of the frozen North prefer suburban to city life, they can rent a log cabin for $50 per month and upward, according to location and distance from the center of the town.

Meanwhile it is evi dent that the percentage of successful gold seekers in the Yukon is probably smaller than that in any previous gold excitement of magnitude, and the perils and privations are incomparably greater. The future of Dawson City is said to depend greatly upon new discoveries of gold being made during the coming winter. The cost of taking food up to the mining camps and the high price of labor render it so expensive to work the claims that they have to be rich in order to return any profit.

LaGrippe,
Followed by Heart Disease, Cured by DR. MILES' HEART CURE.

MR. C. C. SHULTS, of Winterset, Iowa, inventor and manufacturer of Shults' Safety Whiffletree Coupling, writes of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. "Two years ago an attack of LaGrippe left me with a weak heart. I had run down in flesh to mere skin and bone. I could not sleep lying down for smothering spells; frequent sharp darting pains and palpitation caused a constant fear of sudden death, nothing could induce me to remain away from home over night. My local physician prescribed Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and in a few days I was able to sleep well and the pains gradually lessened, and finally ceased. I reduced the the doses, having gained fifteen pounds, and am now feeling better in every way than I have for years."

Dull Boys.

From New York Ledger.

Dull boys often become clever and successful men, but this is simply on account of the fact that dull boys are only slow boys, and it takes more time for their brains to grow than the others. It is steady work, ceaseless endeavor that tells. Then, again, we forget that a bright boy may be handicapped by other qualities. He may not have the physical strength or energy of the other, while the dull boy is carried forward by never-failing energy and strength, for it is often his dullness at school that makes the dull boy's subsequent success so conspicuous. How many dull boys have become still duller men, and how many bright boys still brighter men! Like the old reproach about ministers' sons, one bright boy that turns out ill is made to stand for the whole class, and one dull boy that turns out well glorifies his whole class. Notwithstanding all our inventions, all our progress, the old Scripture doctrine still holds good—that men reap what they sow and cannot gather grapes of thistles nor figs of thorns. It can be set down, therefore, as an established rule that bright boys generally do turn out to be bright men and dull boys generally do turn out to be dull men. This, you see, gives the latter a chance, which can be fortified by declaring that good boys always turn out good men and generally successful men.

"Ma, I'm at the head of my class."

"How's that, Dick?"

"Teacher says I'm the worst of all the bad boys in school."

The Hero of the "Merrimac," Will tell his wonderful story in three numbers of
THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.
This will be a full account of the sinking of the "Merrimac" at Santiago, and the experiences of the writer and his men in Spanish prisons. It will be read by every American in the land. This is only one of many richly illustrated personal narratives in THE CENTURY'S new Spanish War Series. These men will write for no other magazine. In the November CENTURY begins
CAPTAIN SIGSBEE'S STORY
Of the Destruction of the "MAINE," the arrival in Havana harbor, the insults to her captain, the explosion and wreck. The whole story of the destruction of Cervera's fleet will be told by Admirals Sampson and Schley, Captain "Bob" Evans, Captain Taylor, and others.
If you do not take THE CENTURY in 1899, you will miss the greatest reading of the year. The November number begins the volume and has the opening chapters of a splendidly illustrated life of Alexander the Great, and of Marion Crawford's great historical novel of the Crusades. Lieut. Hobson's articles begin in the December number. $4.00 a year.

Two Ways
of getting Glasses:
ONE,
to go to a first-class optician, have your eyes properly tested and get what you need;
THE OTHER,
to go to a merchant who keeps spectacles, make a "grab in the bag," as it were, get a pair that don't fit you (although it may seem so for the moment), run the risk of ruining your eye-sight entirely, and all for a very small difference in expense.
If you need the services of a good optician, we can serve you well and cheaply.

You may buy a shoe at the price you want to pay when the style does not suit you. When you go to a shoe store you find a dozen styles at any price. You get the one you want, it fits you, and you always like it.
Prices on Men's Shoes that you cannot resist—$1.00 to $4.00 in black and tan colors. Never before have we been able to offer so large an assortment of Women's, Misses' and Children's Shoes at such low prices.

WALL PAPER!
Up to date Paper Hangers and Wall Paper Dealers. We don't claim to be the only firm in the county that carries a stock of
WALL PAPER,
but we are, as everybody knows, the largest dealers. We buy goods direct from the factory just as cheap as these New York Wall Paper Stores that say they give you Paper at 3 cts. per piece. We do the same and you DON'T pay any FREIGHT.
It costs more to do business in a large city and they don't give goods away and live at the same time. We WORK AS CHEAP
as any of the Paper Hangers, when you take quality of goods into consideration, and have best facilities for doing so. We are prompt. We carry a line of CHEAP READY MADE WINDOW SHADES, from 10 cts. to 50 cts. Also make them to order. Look us up. Examine our goods and you will then come to the conclusion that we are up to the times. Work done anywhere in the county without extra charge.
