POETRY.

From the Standard.

It is, perhaps, by this time, generally well known, that large numbers of the South Carolinians have, within the last year, emigrated from that State. The terrible excitements in that quarter having divested society of all attractions, embittered all its relations, fettered all its freedoms, and the sources of wealth and emolument having already, even before the occurrence of recent events, become extremely few, and those rapidly failing, we may readily understand the cause of this abandonment of their homes by those who are in the minority. Immense numbers have gone to the southwest—to Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi; and it has been calculated, that, in this way, in the progress of the last six months of her petty experiments, South Carolina has sustained a loss, in freemen and slaves, of at least fifty thousand souls. One of these, in the wilds of Mississippi, sings as follows:

Give us shelter, wild and wood,
Give us shelter, cave and tree—
We're the homeless few who stood
For our country's loyalty.
Nor in that dark hour which saw
Reckless anarchy arise,
Vainly did we keep the law
Left us by the good and wise.
But, for sacrifice we stood,
And in exile now we roam—
Give us shelter, wild and wood,
Yield us country, yield us home!

Not for lucre—not for power,
Did we, like the Roman, leap
Down the breach, in fearful hour,
Which ambition made so deep.
We beheld the land's decay,
And it grieved our spirits then—
We were 'neath the tyrant away,
And we battled it like men,
And our country took the good,
But our service did not see—
Give us shelter, wild and wood,
Dark and desert though it be!

From the soil which gave us birth,
Lo! a mournful band, we come,
From that dearest spot on earth,
Seeking in the wilds a home.
There oppression's arm is high,
There a bitter spirit raves,
And for peace and liberty
Roam we now the rocks and caves.
In a sad and sleepless mood,
Fly we from the land so dear—
Give us shelter, wild and wood,
And the peace denied us there.

In the temple Freedom built,
Long the glory of our land,
We have seen, all stained with guilt,
Lawless men in armor stand.
And from forth the sacred shrine
We have seen the spirit dart,
Crying, "'Tis no home of mine,
Let the freemen now depart."
Hopeless, then, of further good,
From our toil for freedom there—
Give a shelter, wild and wood,
We will build her temple here.

DEATH OF THE RED BIRD.*

BY A LADY OF THE GREEN MOUNTAINS.

O! where is the mighty one—say, where is he?
The Chief of the fearless, the Chief of the free,
The pride of the chosen and boast of the strong,
The grace of the banquet, the dance and the song;
The war-cry has sounded, he heeds not the strain;
The bravest are armed, but he's not in the train;
So fierce in the battle, so fleet in the chase,
O! where does he sleep in his dark resting place?

The red deer are bounding thro' green wood and glade,
But he comes not with spoils from the deep forest shade;
His bow lies unstrung and his saddle unprest,
His light bark is moor'd and the oar is at rest;
His lodge is no more—'round the place where it stood,
The white man is ranging the paths that he trod;
The foe and the faithless his footsteps may trace,
But he'll come not again from his dark resting place.

O! sleep on thou fallen one—proud is the tread
Of the haughty usurper above thy low bed—
But thy war-shout is silent, thy death-song is o'er,
And the wrongs of thy nation shall rouse thee no more.
Sleep on, noble warrior—deep, deep be thy rest,
No dreams of fell vengeance shall harrow thy breast,
For the last of thy kindred, the last of thy race,
Shall soon find a home in thy dark dwelling place.

Concession to Popular Clamor.—We may as well hope to slake a fever-thirst by wine, as to appease popular clamor by concession. Statesmen, who make no distinction between public opinion, the offspring of reason and right, born in full time, and a clamor, the spurious abortion of treason and folly, destroy the rock upon which the government is based, and found it upon a bed of sand.—Gleanings from a Scrap Book.

While the learned Francis Morell was busy preparing his edition of Libanus for the press, he was told that his wife was taken ill. "I have but two or three periods," said Morell, "to translate and then I'll come to her." Presently after, he was informed she was dying, "I have only two words to write, I'll be with her immediately." Presently they brought him word she was dead—with great calmness he said: "I am very sorry, for she was really a mighty good woman."

Constantinople, July 10.—Two Turkish women, who had been tempted to encourage the familiarity of two Russian officers, were seized in one of the places of assignation but a very few days since, and both of them, as well as the woman (the owner of the house) were tied in sacks, and thrown into the Bosphorus. One of the women is described to have been young and lovely.

Flesh and the spirit.—Miss Drummond, the late famous preacher among the quakers, being asked by a getleman if the spirit had never inspired her with the thoughts of marriage; 'No, friend,' said she, 'but the flesh often has!'

A good reason.—A man being overtaken by a shower sought shelter from the rain in the house of a negro fiddler. On entering, he found the negro in the only dry spot in the house—the chimney corner—as happy as a clam, fiddling most merrily. Our traveller tried to keep dry, but the rain came in from all quarters. "Jack," said he, "why don't you fix your house?" "O cause er rain so I cant." "But why don't you fix it when it don't rain?" "O wen er don't rain, er don't need no fixin."

LILLY, WAIT & COMPANY PUBLISH THE

People's Magazine—

PROSPECTUS.

THE public are here presented with the first number of a work, which certainly has the claim of novelty upon their attention. Its object is to present the greatest amount of useful information and of solid instruction in the most pleasing and convenient form, and at the lowest possible price. The publishers have it in view to furnish a work for families; one which shall not only satisfy the curiosity and amuse the fancy, but which shall at the same time store the mind with useful knowledge, and prove as attractive to every reader as books of fiction. To effect this purpose, the pages of the work will embrace whatever is most interesting in books of modern travels; entertaining memoirs and biographical anecdotes; curious geographical topics; historical events and details, ancient and modern; remarkable adventures, both by sea and land; valuable discoveries and inventions, particularly in the useful arts; notices of the progress of improvement in all that relates to the comforts and conveniences of life; Natural History, with descriptions of the most remarkable quadrupeds, birds, fishes, reptiles, &c.; also trees, shrubs and plants, together with minerals, including the arts of mining, and descriptions of the most celebrated mines in the world. The various phenomena of nature likewise present subjects of unfailing interest, and to them due attention will be paid.

Such are some of the topics to which the work will be devoted, and no diligence or expense will be spared on the part of the conductors to fill its pages with the most recent and valuable intelligence relating to the various departments of knowledge.

In order to render this Magazine more useful and interesting to readers, a large number of highly-finished Engravings will be inserted, which may serve to convey more accurate ideas of the forms of animals, trees, plants, buildings, cities, and scenes, than any verbal descriptions could do.

The editors will be particularly attentive in the discharge of their duties, to subjects of interest relating to our own country; and will introduce into each number a brief view of passing events, both domestic and foreign.

On the whole, it is the desire of the publishers to produce a work, that, by its low price and obviously useful and entertaining character, shall secure the favor of the public, and become an inmate of every family.

To assist in the undertaking, the "Penny Magazine," of which two hundred thousand copies are sold weekly in England, besides many other similar publications, are regularly received, and whatever is useful and appropriate in their pages will appear in the pages of this. These resources, with the original contributions, will enable the conductors to fulfil any just expectation that may be formed in regard to the work.

CONDITIONS.—The People's Magazine is published every other Saturday, at One Dollar a year, payable in advance. The postage will be three fourths of a cent, if under 100 miles, and for the greatest distance one cent and a quarter, only. To all who take six or more copies a reasonable discount will be made. Boston, May 25.

PROSPECTUS.

Parley's Magazine

FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.

THE design of the publishers, in this Magazine, is to offer to the public an entertaining work for children and youth; one that may become with them a favorite; one that will please and instruct them; one that they will regard not as a thing which they must read as a task, but which they will love to consult as a companion and friend; one, in short, the reading of which may be permitted to good children as a reward, but the denial of which may be felt as a punishment by those who are bad. It will consist chiefly of matters of fact, and the editors will endeavor to present truth and knowledge in a guise, as attractive to the youthful mind, as that in which fiction has generally been arrayed.

The title of the work is chosen, as an indication of what it is intended shall be its character. The style which the author of Peter Parley's Tales has chosen as a vehicle of instruction for youth, will be adopted in its pages, and Peter Parley, in his proper character of story teller and traveller, will often appear as a contributor. The work will comprise pieces adapted to all stages of the youthful faculties from childhood upwards. It may thus pass from hand to hand in the family circle, and the parents will not disdain to find amusement in what they are called upon to explain to their children; while the elder branches will be induced to try to lead on, by easy steps, their still younger companions to that enjoyment which they have already experienced themselves.

The contents of the work will be too various to be enumerated in this place; but in order to convey some idea of the intentions of the conductors, the following may be mentioned as forming a portion of the more prominent subjects.

I. Geographical Descriptions, of manners, customs, and countries.

II. Travels, Voyages, and Adventures, in various parts of the world.

III. Interesting Historical Notices and Anecdotes of each State, and of the United States, as well as of foreign countries.

IV. Biography, particularly of young persons.

V. Natural History, as birds, beasts, fishes, &c.; as well as plants, trees, flowers, &c.

VI. A familiar description of the Objects that daily surround Children in the Parlor, Nursery, Garden, &c.

VII. Original Tales, consisting of Home Scenes, Stories of Adventure, &c., calculated to stimulate the curiosity, exercise the affections, and improve the judgment.

VIII. An account of various trades and pursuits, and some branches of commerce.

IX. Cheerful and pleasing Rhymes, adapted to the feelings and comprehension of youth.

The publishers have made arrangements to have the work abundantly illustrated with spirited engavings, and every effort will be made to render it a useful auxiliary to the cause of education.

CONDITIONS.

The work will be issued every other Saturday, and 26 numbers will constitute the yearly volume. The price will be One Dollar a year, payable in advance.

To all who take six or more copies, a reasonable discount will be made.
