POETRY.

WOMAN.

There is a language by the virgin made,
Not read but felt, not uttered but betrayed;
A mute companion, yet so wondrous sweet,
Eyes must impart what tongue can ne'er repeat,
Tis written on her cheek and meaning brows,
In one short glance whole volumes it avows;
In one short moment tells of many days,
In one short speaking silence all conveys;
Joy, sorrow, love recounts, hope, pity, fear,
And looks a sigh, and weeps without a tear;
Oh, 'tis so chaste, so touching, so refined;
So soft, so wistful, so sincere, so kind,
Were eyes melodious, and could music shower
From orient rays now striking on a flower,
Such heavenly music from that glance might rise,
And angels own the language of the skies.

THE YOUNG MOTHER.

She stands amidst the glittering crowd,
The same in form and face,
As when at first her sweet cheek glowed,
Even in this very place.
The same bright tresses bind her brow,
The same rich pearls her hair,
Her lip is just as roseate now,
Her hands as soft and fair.

She looks the same young radiant bride
As when we saw her first,
When in her flash of happiest pride
Upon our eyes she burst,
And even now she leans, as then,
Upon her husband's arm:
Yes—'tis the very same again,
With every faultless charm.

Yet there's a change—her eyes are still
Most beautiful and bright;
But they seem beneath their lids to fill
With softer, tenderer light.
Her voice is sweet, and rich, and low,
But just as musical;
But 'tis grown more like a river's flow
Than a fountain's laughing fall.

Still, still she smiles as radiantly,
When friends are speaking near;
But in her smile there's less of glee,
And more of bliss sincere.
'Tis not the brilliant scene around
That her quiet heart beguiles;
In her pure spirit may be found
The fountain of her smiles.

Now, ever and anon, her eye
Is fixed on vacancy,
And she seems to listen earnestly;
For, 'midst the revelry,
In fancy comes an infant's wail,
Or its murmuring in its sleep;
And the splendid hall seems cold and pale,
When such visions o'er her creep.

And though the scene is very fair,
She wearies for her home,
And thinks the hour to take her there
Will never, never come!
She, who once watched time in pain,
That would too quickly flow,—
Oh, sure she might be gayer then,
But she is happier now!

THE BLIND BOY.

The day was bright and beautiful—
The boys to play had gone—
Save one, who sat beside the door,
Dejected and alone:
And as the tone of merry sport
Came faintly to his ear,
He sighed, and from his swelling lids
He brushed the falling tear.

His little heart was rent with pain—
He could not join their play;
He could not run about the fields,
And by the brook side stray;
The rolling hoop—the bounding ball—
The kite borne by the wind—
The acorn hunt—were naught to him;
For he, alas, was blind.

He could not see the setting sun,
And watch the glowing skies—
The beauty of the moon and stars
Fell not upon his eyes.
The rainbow when it spanned the clouds
Was lost unto his sight—
And waving woods and sparkling streams—
For all to him was night!

These truths came fresh into his mind,
While sitting thus apart:
No wonder that the tear drop fell,
And heavy was his heart.
Ah, little did the youthful throng,
Whose hearts were full of joy,
Reflect upon the lonely state,
Of that poor sightless boy!

The Burial of the King of Spain, occupied a good deal of various papers, with a detail of its ceremonies. The Pantheon was illuminated, and the body was placed on a table in front of the altar. The Lord Steward addressed the Monteross, and said in a raised voice, "Do you swear to God and to this cross that the corpse here present is that of our beloved Sovereign of GLORIOUS memory, Don Ferdinand 7th, which I delivered into your charge at the balance on the 29th?"—To which all replied, "We do swear."

The Lord Steward then turned to the reverend Prior, and said "Father Prior, I here deliver to your Reverence the body of our beloved Monarch of glorious memory, Don Ferdinand VII, who is in heaven, that you may give burial in the proper place and in the usual form. Please to recognize the body." The Steward then removed a pannel of the outer coffin, and, taking from the leaden one, a small moveable sheet of this metal, which covered an aperture over the king's face, the Prior was enabled to recognize the countenance (or was supposed to do so) through a pane of crystal placed in the aperture. The Prior then said "I am satisfied," and gave a certificate of the same in due form. The Captain of the Body Guard now approached the coffin, and in a loud voice called the king three times, saying "Sire, Sire, Sire." A pause ensued, and then the Captain, turning to the officers present, said "The King is dead;" whereupon he broke his baton, and scattered the pieces on the ground. After a few other ceremonies of less interest, the cortege prepared to return to Madrid; and the garde de corps, on quitting the monastery, started off at a gallop, firing each a pistol, on passing before the principal gate of the building.

Ground Swell in the Polar Regions.—The ice in the Polar regions, accommodates itself to the surface by bending; but when several yards in thickness, it refuses to yield beyond a certain extent, and it is broken in pieces with dreadful explosions. The best account that we know of the appearances presented on such an occasion, is given by a party of Moravian Missionaries, who were engaged in a coasting expedition on the ice along the northern shore of Labrador, with sledges drawn by dogs. They narrowly escaped destruction from one of those occurrences, and were near enough to witness all its grandeur.—We extract it from the recent interesting compilation of the Rev. Dr. Brown, on the History of the Propagation of Christianity. The missionaries met a sledge with Esquimaux, turning in from the sea, who threw out some hints that it might be as well for them to return; after some time, their own Esquimaux hinted that there was a ground-swell under the ice. It was then scarcely perceptible except on lying down and applying the ear close to the ice, when a hollow, disagreeable, grating noise was heard ascending from the abyss.—Maine Wesleyan Journal.

"As the motion of the sea under the ice had grown more perceptible, they became alarmed, and began to think it prudent to keep close to the shore. The ice also had fissures in many places, some of which formed chasms of one or two feet; but these are not uncommon even in its best state, and the dogs easily leap over them; they are frightful only to strangers. As the wind rose to a storm, the swell had now increased so much that its effects on the ice were extraordinary and really alarming. The sledge, instead of gliding smoothly along on an even surface, sometimes ran with violence after the dogs, and sometimes seemed with difficulty to ascend the rising hill; noises, too, were now distinctly heard in many directions, like the reports of cannon, from the bursting of the ice at a distance. Alarmed at this frightful phenomenon, our travellers drove with all haste towards the shore, and as they approached it, the prospect before them was tremendous; the ice having burst loose from the rocks, was tossed to and fro, and broken into a thousand pieces against the precipices, with a dreadful noise, which, added to the raging of the sea, the roaring of the wind, and the driving of the snow, so completely overpowered them as almost to deprive them of the use of both their eyes and ears.

"To make the land, now was the only resource that remained; but it was with the utmost difficulty that the frightened dogs could be driven forward; and as the whole body of the ice frequently sunk below the summit of the rocks, and then rose above them, the only time for landing was at the moment it gained the level of the coast—a circumstance which rendered the attempt extremely nice and hazardous. Both sledges, however, succeeded in gaining the shore, and were drawn up on the beach, though not without great difficulty. Scarcely had they reached it, when the part of the ice from which they had just escaped burst asunder, and the water rushing from beneath it, instantly precipitated it into the ocean. In a moment, as if by a signal, the whole mass of ice for several miles along the coast, and extending as far as the eye could reach, began to break and to be overwhelmed with waves. The spectacle was awfully grand. The immense fields of ice rising out of the ocean, clashing against one another, and then plunging in the deep with a violence which no man can describe, and a noise like the discharge of ten thousand cannons, was a sight which must have struck the most unreflecting mind with solemn awe. The brethren were overwhelmed with amazement at their miraculous escape, and even the pagan Esquimaux expressed gratitude to God for their deliverance.

THE STUTTERER.

During the revolutionary war, when drafts were made from the militia, to recruit the continental army, a certain captain gave liberty to the men who were drafted from his company, to make their objections, if they had any, against going into the service; accordingly, one of them, who had an impediment in his speech, came forward and made his bow. What is your objection? said the captain. I ca-ca-cant go, answers the man, because I st-st-stutter. Stutter! said the captain, you dont go there to talk but to fight. Aye, but they'll p-p-put me on g-g-guard, and a man may go ha-ha-half a mile before I can say wh-wh-wh-who goes there? Oh, that is no objection, for they will place some sentry with you—he can challenge and you can fire. Well, b-b-but I may be taken and run thr-thr-through the g-g-guts before I can cry qu-qu-qu-quarters! This last plea prevailed, and the captain, laughing heartily, dismissed him.

Among the modes of attraction enjoined on Persian females, is this: "Let their crimson-tinted toes be exposed, in order that the young men may see and admire them with wounded hearts."

"I like a child that cries," said the Abbe Morellot. "Why?" "Because then it will be taken away."

Bergamot, every body knows, is a fragrant essence, extracted from a fruit which is produced by ingrafting a branch of a lemon tree upon the stock of a bergamot pear. This essence is obtained by cutting the rind of the fruit into pieces, and squeezing them into a glass vessel, in the same manner as the juice of a lemon is squeezed out.

PROSPECTUS OF PEABODY'S

Parlour Journal.

With splendid line Engravings, elegant wood Embellishments, the most popular Music, and richly colored Plates of the London, Parisian and New York Fashions.

MESSRS. PEABODY & CO., having received repeated proposals to establish in the City of New York a weekly Journal of elegance and utility, beg to announce to their numerous patrons, and the people of the United States, that they will publish, every Saturday, a new, cheap and elegant Periodical, under the title of

PEABODY'S PARLOUR JOURNAL.
A WEEKLY MAGAZINE OF ELEGANCE AND UTILITY.

Edited by several literary and fashionable characters, and dedicated to High Life, Fashionables, Fashions, Polite Literature, Criticisms on New Works, the Fine Arts, the Opera, Theatres, Exhibitions, and containing general information upon every subject, Embellished with the London, Parisian and New York fashions, and spirited wood engravings of the novelties of the past and present generation, with copious and early selections from the most approved foreign journals, and from numerous other valuable English works, arrangements for which have been made to secure the earliest copies sent to America, and the contents will be immediately selected, and distributed to the patrons of the PARLOUR JOURNAL, at a much earlier period than they could possibly be obtained from any other source.

☞Exclusive of the literary Department, which will be of the most interesting nature, the EMBELLISHMENTS alone, which are now ready and in progress, for the PARLOUR JOURNAL, will render the Work of great interest and value to its subscribers, as EVERY WEEK will be given at least FOUR and frequently SEVEN EMBELLISHMENTS, and every other month a splendid line engraving, or richly coloured quarto plate of the London, Parisian, and New York Fashions, making six superb quarto plates during the year, and upwards of three hundred other first rate interesting Engravings, with a popular piece of MUSIC, selected and arranged expressly for the PARLOUR JOURNAL.

☞The EMBELLISHMENTS and MUSIC, which will be published in the PARLOUR JOURNAL, if purchased separately, would cost at least TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS; but, the Subscribers to this Work are possessed of the whole at the trifling yearly sum of THREE DOLLARS. At this low price, the Proprietors can only expect to be remunerated for their immense expenditures by a subscription list of over seven thousand names and by the extra sales of single copies at just double the subscription price; the price to subscribers is only SIX CENTS per number (the mere cost of paper and print,) but to non-subscribers 12½ cents per number and plate numbers 25 cents. The whole stitched in a pink cover, for only Six Cents, which is even cheaper than that cheapest of all Periodicals, THE PENNY MAGAZINE, and of ten times its interest and value, as the PARLOUR JOURNAL is got up in a manner at once useful, entertaining and fascinating.

IN CHANCERY,

December 23, 1833.

THE Complainant in this cause states that some time in the year 1827, he received three several executions, amounting to one hundred and eleven dollars and seventy-nine cents, from Francis Webb, Administrator of Thomas Simmons, against Henry Carmain, Levin Jones and Thomas Reagan, to be collected by him who was officiating as Sheriff, according to law—that, in consequence of indulgence extended to the said Henry Carmain, Levin Jones and Thomas Reagan, the Complainant became liable to, and in fact paid, the aforesaid sum of money, to the said Francis Webb, and that no part has been received from Henry Carmain, Levin Jones and Thomas Reagan or either of them—that Levin Jones was the principal debtor, and the other two securities—that the said Levin Jones' personal estate was administered by a certain Samuel Phillips, and that the said personal estate was insufficient to pay the debts, and that Levin Jones died seized of real estate lying in Dorchester county, and the Complainant prays that the same may be sold for the payment of his debts—that Mary E. Jones, who is the only child and heir at law, resides without the limits of this State.

It is thereupon ordered, That the Complainant give notice to the absent Defendant, of the substance and object of the said bill, by inserting a copy of this order in some newspaper, once in each of three successive weeks, before the first day of February next, warning the said Mary E. Jones to be and appear in the Court of Chancery, on or before the first day of May next, to shew cause why a decree should not pass as prayed; otherwise the bill may be taken pro confesso.

PROSPECTUS.
Parley's Magazine,
FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH.

THE design of the publishers, in this Magazine, is to offer to the public an entertaining work for children and youth; one that may become with them a favorite; one that will please and instruct them; one that they will regard not as a thing which they must read as a task, but which they will love to consult as a companion and friend; one, in short, the reading of which may be permitted to good children as a reward, but the denial of which may be felt as a punishment by those who are bad. It will consist chiefly of matters of fact, and the editors will endeavor to present truth and knowledge in a guise, as attractive to the youthful mind, as that in which fiction has generally been arrayed.

The title of the work is chosen, as an indication of what it is intended shall be its character. The style which the author of Peter Parley's Tales has chosen as a vehicle of instruction for youth, will be adopted in its pages, and Peter Parley, in his proper character of story teller and traveller, will often appear as a contributor. The work will comprise pieces adapted to all stages of the youthful faculties from childhood upwards. It may thus pass from hand to hand in the family circle, and the parents will not disdain to find amusement in what they are called upon to explain to their children; while the elder branches will be induced to try to lead on, by easy steps, their still younger companions to that enjoyment which they have already experienced themselves.

The contents of the work will be too various to be enumerated in this place; but in order to convey some idea of the intentions of the conductors, the following may be mentioned as forming a portion of the more prominent subjects.

I. Geographical Descriptions, of manners, customs, and countries.—II. Travels, Voyages, and Adventures, in various parts of the world.—III. Interesting Historical Notices and Anecdotes of each State, and of the United States, as well as of foreign countries.—IV. Biopraphy, particularly of young persons.——V. Natural History, as birds, beasts, fishes, &c.; as well as plants, trees, flowers, &c.—VI. A familiar description of the Objects that daily surround Children in the Parlor Nursery, Garden, &c.—VII. Original Tales, consisting of Home Scenes, Stories of Adventure, &c., calculated to stimulate the curiosity, exercise the affections, and improve the judgment.—VIII. An account of various trades and pursuits, and some branches of commerce.—IX. Cheerful and pleasing Rhymes, adapted to the feelings and comprehension of youth.

The publishers have made arrangements to have the work abundantly illustrated with spirited engavings, and every effort will be made to render it a useful auxiliary to the cause of education.

CONDITIONS.

The work will be issued every other Saturday, and 26 numbers will constitute the yearly volume. The price will be One Dollar a year, payable in advance.

To all who take six or more copies, a reasonable discount will be made.

LILLY, WAIT & COMPANY PUBLISH THE

People's Magazine.

PROSPECTUS.

THE public are here presented with the first number of a work, which certainly has the claim of novelty upon their attention. Its object is to present the greatest amount of useful information and of solid instruction in the most pleasing and convenient form, and at the lowest possible price. The publishers have it in view to furnish a work for families; one which shall not only satisfy the curiosity and amuse the fancy, but which shall at the same time store the mind with useful knowledge, and prove as attractive to every reader as books of fiction. To effect this purpose, the pages of the work will embrace whatever is most interesting in books of modern travels; entertaining memoirs and biographical anecdotes; curious geographical topics; historical events and details, ancient and modern; remarkable adventures, both by sea and land; valuable discoveries and inventions, particularly in the useful arts; notices of the progress of improvement in all that relates to the comforts and conveniences of life; Natural History, with descriptions of the most remarkable quadrupeds, birds, fishes, reptiles, &c.; also trees, shrubs and plants, together with minerals, including the arts of mining, and descriptions of the most celebrated mines in the world. The various phenomena of nature likewise present subjects of unfailing interest, and to them due attention will be paid.

Such are some of the topics to which the work will be devoted, and no diligence or expense will be spared on the part of the conductors to fill its pages with the most recent and valuable intelligence relating to the various departments of knowledge.

In order to render this Magazine more useful and interesting to readers, a large number of highly-finished Engravings will be inserted, which may serve to convey more accurate ideas of the forms of animals, trees, plants, buildings, cities, and scenes, than any verbal descriptions could do.

The editors will be particularly attentive, in the discharge of their duties, to subjects of interest relating to our own country; and will introduce into each number a brief view of passing events, both domestic and foreign.

On the whole, it is the desire of the publishers to produce a work, that, by its low price and obviously useful and entertaining character, shall secure the favor of the public, and become an inmate of every family.

To assist in the undertaking, the "Penny Magazine," of which two hundred thousand copies are sold weekly in England, besides many other similar publications, are regularly received, and whatever is useful and appropriate in their pages will appear in the pages of this. These resources, with the original contributions, will enable the conductors to fulfil any just expectation that may be formed in regard to the work.

CONDITIONS.—The People's Magazine is published every other Saturday, at One Dollar a year, payable in advance. The postage will be three-fourths of a cent, if under 100 miles, and for the greatest distance one cent and a quarter, only. To all who take six or more copies a reasonable discount will be made. Boston, May 25.
