CYCLONE HITS INDIANA

A cyclone swept over Warrick county, Ind., Sunday, wrecking more than 50 business houses in Boonville, adjoining towns, homes and barns, tearing down trees, breaking telephone and telegraph poles and damaging the fruit crop. The loss probably will reach $100,000. The wind, accompanied by rain and lightning, swept over a wide area.

In the home of Thomas Hart at Tennyson, Ind., a (crowd of young people gathered. The house was demolished and several persons were seriously injured. It was reported that more than 100 horses and cattle were killed. No fatalities have so far been reported.

Mrs. E. R. Baer is spending the summer with the Misses Wroth, at Winchester Place, this city.

MILLINERY LOBBY

Feather Men Are Deceiving The Senate

The Finance Committee which has been working on the Tariff Bill has recommended to the United States Senate that the proviso which prohibits the importation of the feathers of wild birds for commercial purposes shall be all but destroyed. Heeding the importunities of the hired agents of the wholesale milliners and feather importers who have been waxing rich by the slaughter of wild bird life throughout the world, this committee has agreed to change the Bill as passed by the House of Representatives so that the feathers of those species of birds which are killed for food or are killed as pests may be imported.

At a casual glance this may appear to be a perfectly fair provision, but what does it really mean?

First, it would permit the importation of the feathers of birds usually killed for food.

If we make a list of the various birds legally regarded as game birds in the various States of our country, we find that it includes all species and varieties of snipe, sandpipers, plovers, oystercatchers, grebes, loons, ducks, geese, brant, swan, rails, coots, gallinules, quail, grouse, wild turkeys, doves, pigeons, robin and bobolinks; also the chewink, meadok lark, and, in Ohio, a court decision has declared herons to be game birds. Note, however, that the provision of this amendment does not refer to birds legally regarded as game birds, but refers to birds usually killed for food purposes. This being the case, we will have to add to the above list the nighthawk, roseate spoonbill, limpkin, sandhill crane, cormorant, white isbi, pileated woodpecker, flicker and others. The above catalogue contains the names of a number of the most valuable forms of wild bird life in the United States, for many of them are among the most ravenous consumers of injurious insects and noxious weed seeds which are to be found on earth. If feathers of these birds can be imported, it will be easy to substitute the feathers of the same species killed in the United States. With the exception of a few small countries in the world, where it is contrary to the religion of the people to kill birds, there is not a nation in the world which has such strong sentiment against the slaughter of birds or such restrictive measures for their protection as to be found in the United States.

To the above list of birds we must, therefore, add the names of all the birds in all the countries throughout the world which are usually killed for food purposes, and the resultant list is simply enormous.

There is another matter to which we would call attention. Feathers to be of value to the millinery trade must, as a class, be collected during the season of the year when the birds are engaged in nesting and caring for the young, for it is at that season that their feathers have their brightest hues and are in an unworn and unfrayed condition. Let no one be misled with the idea that game birds taken during the legal season for hunting possess feathers which are to any marked extent attractive to the millinery trade. We know of no evidence tending to show that the plumage of birds killed for food purposes is used to any extent in the millinery trade. On the other hand, we would call attention to the fact that Hon. William L. Finley, Game Warden of the State of Oregon, found that the Chinese Pheasants, which have been acclimaed in that State, were being killed out of season for the feather trade. He found that the plumage of the cock Chines Pheasant in good conditon was worth $7.50 in the local market Portland, which was far in excess of what the dead bird would bring in the market a few months later.

Second, the amendment would allow the importation of the feathers of birds killed as pests.

No authority, however, is citied as to who shall determine what may be regarded as pests. Clearly this matter would be left largely to the discretion of the man who desires to kill pest birds and dispose of their feathers for commercial purposes. There is practically no limit to the privileges which this would give to those people engaged in commercializing the plumage of wild birds. We have known men in the Southern States who hired their sons to shoot mockingbirds, because these birds ate grapes and were, therefore, regarded as pests. Similarly jays and woodpeckers are considered pests by some farmers because they occasionally attack the corn in the milk. Catbirds, robins and others of the thrush and thrasher families are regarded as pests by some strawberry growers, and are killed accordingly. Herons, egrets and kingfishers are frequently declared pests by men who are interested in fish hatcheries. Among other pests in the minds of people of whom we have personal knowledge are the shrikes, warblers, crows, black birds of all varieties, hawks, falcons, owls, eagles, vultures, pelicans, sea gulls of all species and terns. Think of the thousands of birds throughout the world that can easily be killed as pests by interested parties and their feathers legally brought to this country if the Clapp amendment to Schedule "N" should be adopted.

A great crisis in the cause of bird protection is now squarely before the American people. Let everyone who cares for wild life write or wire his Senator at once asking that this amendment proposed by the Finance Committee shall be killed. There is not a moment to spare!

SUFFRAGISTS AND ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS

The fundamental principle of our Republic is this: In deciding what is to be done, where everybody's interests are concerned, we take everybody's opinions and then decide according to the wish of the majority as expressed through the casting of votes.

In getting at the wish of the majority certain persons, whose opinions evidently are not worth counting, are passed over.

In Maryland these persons are idiots, lunatics, criminals (not pardoned) and women.

Maryland Suffragists believe women's opinions are worth counting and want to be promoted from a class made up of the offscourings of the earth to the dignity of citizenship.

Anti-Suffragists are not only willing to be ranked politically with the cursed and degraded, but publicly plead and petition against promotion. They do not want their own opinions counted and they are endeavoring to prevent other women's opinions from being counted.

WILL REPUBLICANS GET TOGETHER? MR. FAIRBANKS COUNSELS IT

Omaha, Neb., June 23—Making "forget and forgive" the keynote of his speech tonight former Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks was given close attention at a banquet tendered him by 300 Republican leaders of Nebraska. The gathering was fairly representative of both wings of the party in this state and good fellowship prevailed.

Mr. Fairbanks reviewed the achievements of the party at some length, detailing the result of Republican legislation mentioning particularly the Interstate Commerce Law and the Sherman Anti-trust Law. These two laws, he declared, had served to protect the people against railroads and industrial monopoly as has no other legislation ever enacted. Speaking of the future, he said:

"Now and then we have heard it said that the Republican party has ended its career; that it is a party of the past rather than of the future. Such prophecy is not new; we have heard it proclaimed in other days.

"Circumstances which unfortunately, led to party division a year ago no longer exist. The Democratic party is in full power and it can be overthrown only by the united effort of the great body of those who believe in the coundness and efficacy of Republican principles. Republicans, that is to say those who believe in the political doctrine of the Republican party, are largely in the majority throughout the country. I have no doubt whatever that the logic of events will bring them into co-operation again. This much-to-be-desired result cannot be accomplished by coercion of any sort; it must come about naturally by the exercise of a spirit of tolerance and patience; old scores should be forgotten. As President McKinley happily put it: 'It does not do to keep books in politics.' "

The speaker then came to the question of the tariff and spoke of the equalizing of the burden of taxation. He referred particularly to the income tax, which, he declared, should be so fixed as to distribute its result in a manner which would not be discriminatory against a particular few.

"The requirements of better citizenship and common justice demand that the minimum be placed at a figure which will give it the proper distribution," he declared. The tariff should be revised with discriminating judgment. The light of the best possible tax should be ascertained by a board of experts so as to safeguard American production without imposing any unjust burdens on the people."

Mr. Fairbanks declared the Republican party should stand firm for the integrity of the courts in the exercise of their judicial functions.

"We do not believe," he said, "that the ends of justive will be subserved by undermining our judicial system, directly or indirectly."

The Dietrics

MAGIC AND MUSIC. AT THE 1913 CHAUTAUQUA.

Of these two wonder-workers, Mr. Dietric takes the lead with magic. While he keeps his audience breaking into smiles at his witty comment, gay flags unfurl, tangles of ribbons swirl about, baskets of flowers bloom out of the nowhere! The gorgeous and the mystifying is supreme! Sly balls, coins, handkerchiefs, defy to be traced. All the old hints at how things are done are no help at all in explaining the Dietrics, for every spectacular trick is a fresh one.

In the musical half of the entertainment, where Mrs. Dietric is star, the same variety and novelty of performance is found. How one small person can whistle, and play the piano, and sing, and recite, and jingle the tambourine all at once is hard to understand. For sheer genius with impersonations, for clever trickery, for the serious rendering of instrumental music, there is no one like her on the Chautauqua platform, east or west.

STORM AREA TEN MILES LONG

The area of damage at New Market from Saturday's storm is greater than was supposed. The path of the storm was nearly two miles wide and extended from New Market to four miles below Ridgeville, a distance of ten miles.

Outside of New Market the greatest damage was sustained by William Hardy, two miles below Ridgeville. The roof was blown off Mr. Hardy's house, a large stone structure. The walls were wrenched from the foundation. His barn was blown over. Pieces of timber were carried by the wind to adjoining farms. His loss is estimated at $3,000.

At Ridgeville, between 3,500 and 4,000 panes of glass were broken in the green house of Jesse King. Windows were broken in the Masonic Building, hotel and a number of residences at Mount Airy. Nineteen telephone wires were put out of commission from the New Market exchange.

A SURE LOSS

Mrs. Johnson—Jes' hide youah money in a Bible, Mis' Jackson. Nobody evah looks at a Bible, you know.

Mrs. Jackson (with a gasp)—Oh Lawd! I'd lose it shuah! Mah ole man's very religious, an' reads de Bible twice a day.—Puck

The jury of inquest in the Florence Wainwright case will meet tonight at Salisbury. The jurors favor a public investigation, but the State's Attorney will ask that the hearing be behind closed doors.

STORM HITS PEN-MAR

This section of the Blue Ridge Mountains was visited Saturday afternoon by a violent wind and electric storm. The wind swept the Cumberland Valley and in many places played havoc with small buildings and fruit trees.

At Pen-Mar three trees near the Mount Royal Inn owned by Mrs. Geo. Ladd, were struck by lightning. In Waynesboro a large shade tree in the yard of Henry Bonebrake was struck by lightning. Several hundred dollars' worth of damage was done to Sabillasville and Foxville, Md.

WHO'S WHO AT CHAUTAUQUA

There's the band group from Italy. But Miss Melrose is "U. S." distinctly.

The Tyroleans hail from a village in the Austrian Alps. The boy of the troupe, Gus Oschner, is Swiss.

Frank Dixon babbled rebellious things as a baby in North Carolina. He grew up down south with the author of "The Leopard's Spots."

Pearson caught the Chautauqua fervor in Kansas.

Dr. Nacy McGee is from the Middle West, via New York.

Welbourn, science lecturer, is the pride of Union City, see-sawing on the fence between Indiana and Ohio.

Battis is suspected of having wriggled out of a Dickens book in the first place.

Rosani began balancing his teething ring on his small head in New York some years ago.

Mr. Such, violinist, took his first petting at the hands of European royalty.

The Dietrics, like their magic, defy explaining.

Lindsey began his preparation for the Denver Juvenile Court judgeship by being a bad little boy in Jackson, Tennessee.

Chautauqua's cosmopolitan, you see. Then there are the superintendent and the crew boys to account for, but that is another story.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John Skelton Williams, addressed the Maryland State Bankers' Association at the Blue Mountain House. The association took no action on the currency reform measure. William C. Page was elected president of the association.
