POETRY.

The Broken Heart.

How many bright eyes grow dim—how many soft cheeks grow pale—how many lovely forms fade away into the tomb, and none can tell the cause that blighted their loveliness. As the dove will clasp its wings to its side, and cover and conceal the arrow that is preying upon its vitals, so it is the nature of woman to hide from the world the pangs of her wounded affection. The love of a delicate female is always shy and silent. Even when fortunate, she scarcely breathes it to herself, but when otherwise, she buries it to cower and brood among the ruins of her peace. * * * Look for her after a little, and you find friendship weeping over her untimely grave, and wondering that one who but lately glowed with all the radiance of health and beauty, should so speedily be brought to darkness and the worm.

Pale as the white rose, withering she lay,—
Lovely, though dying,—and her eye divine
Gleamed o'er the deepening shadows of decay,
Like a stray sunbeam on a ruined shrine.
She seemed too beautiful for death's embrace,
And holiness engirt her as a zone;
Language had fled, but Music's pictured grace
Hung on those lips that late had breathed its tone.

Oh thou! the perjured, cruel, faithless, blind!
How couldst thou bow such sweetness to the dust?
How break the heart, where thy loved image, shrined,
Dwelt in the beauty of undoubting trust?
But thou didst break it. Nature could not cope
With love neglected, whose undying power,
E'en from the very sepulchre of Hope,
Gushed forth like perfume from a trampled flower.

Tears for thy absence, sighs at thy neglect,
Prayers for thy safety, smiles at thy return,
And a fond blindness to thy worst defect,—
Thou didst repay with undissembled scorn.
Yet there she lay, and on her dying bed
She bless'd thy name,—then kiss'd the lock of hair
That from thy brow in happier days she shred,
Then look'd to heaven, and pray'd to meet thee there!

And with a holy look of hope and peace,
She bowed her head—the parting pang was o'er,
Yet no convulsion marked the soul's release,
The pallid lip a smile of rapture wore;
Her fleeting soul one radiant beam had caught,
Warm from the fountain of Eternal Day,
And left the image of the breathing thought
Impressed in beauty on the breathless clay.

I saw her buried with patrician state;
The sable plumes waved proudly o'er her bier,
With all the pomp that riches arrogate,
To deck the dust, to which they yield no tear.
And as I gazed upon the formal scene,
Where all was cold collectedness and art,
I thought one tear of secret grief had been
A fitter tribute to a broken heart.

Is it not the Fashion.—Many excellent females, whose hearts prompt them to adopt and practice the most decided self denial, in relation to established usages which are more or less of a luxurious or selfish character, are destroyed by the overwhelming influence of fashion. Their conscience would approve the banishing of wine from their tables, or the abandonment of expensive and sumptuous entertainments, and many similar indulgencies, regarded by all to impair something of the force of the christian example, and to deduct something from the pecuniary ability to do good. The true reason why many christians do not enter at once and fully upon this system of retrenchment and self-denial, is, such is not the fashion—and the excuse they make to their own conscience, frequently is, "if I adopt such a course, I shall be reckoned among fanatics, and shall lose all power to do good in the circle where my influence in favor of virtue and religion is most needed." The plausibility of this manner of reasoning is that which makes it dangerous. Our adversary can assume the form and garb of an angel of light, and his suggestions are often addressed to us in the language of piety, or even the words of inspiration. It becomes the christian to inquire with deep solicitude, into the direct and unavoidable, as well as the remote and incidental consequences of every course of conduct, and if he find himself doing that by which a brother stumbleth or is made weak, to abandon unhesitatingly any such course. Many questions agitate the minds of christians, which could be at once decided by the application of some great religious principle, were it not for probable or apprehended consequences. In those cases it would be better, after having ascertained the dictate of the great law of love, to yield thereto an implicit and prompt obedience, leaving the care of consequences to Him who established the law, and whose wisdom discerneth the end from the beginning.—N. Y. Sun.

Freedom of Mind.—I call that mind free which is not imprisoned in itself or in a sect which recognises in all human beings the image of God and the rights of his children, which delights in virtue and sympathises with sufferings, whenever they are seen, which conquers pride and sloth, and offers itself up a willing victim to the cause of mankind.

I call that mind free, which is not passively framed by outward circumstances, which is not the creature of accidental impulse, but which bends events to its own improvement, acts upon an inward spring, for an immutable principle which it has deliberately espoused.

I call that mind free which protects itself against the usurpations of society, which does not cower to human opinions, which feels accountable to a higher law than fashion, which respects itself too much to be a slave of the many or the few.

FRUITS OF PHRENOLOGY.

We have received from Messrs. Marshall and Co., a volume entitled "Phrenology known by its Fruits," written by David Meredith Reese, M. D., of New York.

The author of this volume has been uncommonly severe upon Phrenology and its professors, and he has no hesitancy in saying that the science is the productive source of infidelity. The volume is also an examination of a work some time since issued in Boston, entitled, "Observations on the influence of religion upon the health and physical welfare of mankind," by Dr. Brigman, whom Dr. Reese has handled without mittens, and he concludes his work with the following paragraph:

"The source whence Dr. Brigham derived the philosophy and creed, under the malign influence of which his book was written, is now plainly before the reader, as well as the proof of our allegations, that the evil genius or Phrenology, like a mighty incubus, sits enthroned upon his soul."

We believe Dr. Reese is an eloqnent preacher of the Methodist denomination.

ANOTHER MAGICIAN DONE UP.

The Persian Magician, Hali Ben Abel, Ben Hamed Ben Maraischal, who is in reality a native of Kilkenny, as we are told, threw the Bowery boys into great confusion, by announcing that among other extraordinary exhibitions, he could produce the apparition of any person dead or alive. All those who had had scolding, troublesome wives when living, were alarmed at the idea of their being thus inured and brought to life by this diabolical Magician, and went to Vauxhall determined to distuab his incantations. He got through his preliminary tricks with cards, fiddles, rings and oranges, and then began to burn blue lights and prepare for the grand denouement, when the audience began to shout and roar and stamp, and perform all manner of antics, and as the Express of this morning says, "instead of raising the dead he raised the devil." The audience sprang upon the stage, made quick work of his paraphernalia, and drove the Magician forth into the garden, in puris naturalibus like father Adam. Such, we think, will be the final fate of all who follow the art and mystery of natural and political magic.—N. Y. Star.

The Cultivator

IS a monthly publication, of sixteen quarto pages, and comprises about two hundred pages in a volume, published at Albany, by the New York State Agricultural Society. It is exclusively devoted to Agriculture and the Improvement of Youth. The publishing committee are J. Buel, J. P. Beekman and J. D. Wasson. The object of the publication is to disseminate useful information among the agricultural community in the cheapest practicable form; and the success of the undertaking, and the character of the paper, are indicated by the fact, that although it has been published but ten months, its subscribers exceed eleven thousand, and comprise residents of twenty-one of the United States.

The second volume was commenced in March. The pages are so enlarged, that each number contains as much matter as eighteen pages of the first volume. It contains many engravings and cuts, executed by good artists, illustrative of implements, animals and operations of husbandry. Price FIFTY CENTS per annum. The postage will not exceed 18¾ cents the year to any part of the Union.

The first volume will continue to be furnished at 50 cents a single copy.

QUARTO EDITION.

THE publishers of the "New-Yorker," encouraged by the generous and steadily increasing patronage which has hitherto rewarded their exertions, propose to issue, from the commencement of their third volume, on the 26th of March ensuing, a new Double Quarto Edition of their journal, not instead of, but in addition to, the one now published. Advertisements, except possibly a few of a strictly literary character, will be entirely excluded; and, in addition to all the matter presented in the folio New-Yorker, the quarto will contain a page of popular music, &c. &c., and be accompanied by a handsome title-page and comprehensive Index at the close of the volume.

The general features of the New-Yorker will remain essentially as they have heretofore been. Its columns will contain—

I. General Literature. Original Tales, Essays, Reviews, Poems, &c., with corresponding selections from the Quarterlies, Monthlies, and all the best class of periodicals, foreign and American, with choice extracts from new works of substantial excellence. The Editor acknowledges with pride and gratitude his obligation to his regular contributors—and among them are some whose names have shed lustre on the cause of American literature—for the steadfast support hitherto afforded him, and the confidence with which he is now enabled to assure the public that it will not soon be withdrawn. He takes pleasure in recalling the fact, that, since the establishment of the New Yorker, no other journal has afforded an equal extent and variety, of the productions of all eminent American writers of whatever section or class—a characteristic which he hopes it may still preserve; while his selections from the best foreign works have been exceeded—in quantity at least—by those of but three or four among the myriad of the cis Atlantic periodicals.

II. National Politics. It has been the aim of the Editor to present a full and fair exhibit of the aspects, movements and struggles of parties in our country, including the meeting of Conventions, nomination of candidates for State and National offices, and all other significant manifestations of political feeling, with the general results of elections, as fast as ascertained, and the official canvass in each instance, as soon as it shall have reached us. This course is believed to be in many respects original with this journal; and it is considered that we have just cause of felicitation in the fact, that, pursued as it has been through two years of unremitted political warfare, the fairness and general accuracy of our statements and returns have very rarely, if ever, been questioned. The Editor reserves to himself the right of remarking, as circumstances may seem to require and justice to dictate, on the less exciting political topics of the day, as on all others, with calmness, deference and moderation; but he will strive—he trusts not less successfully than hitherto—to exclude from the columns of the New Yorker every observation, reflection, or even argument, which may wantonly do violence to the sincere convictions of any well-informed reader, of whatever principle or patry.

III. General Intelligence. In this department we can only promise the most unwearied industry and patience in the collection, condensation, and arrangement of the news, foreign and domestic, which may be gathered from the weekly reception of four hundred journals, including some choice European periodicals, and which may be afforded us by by the attention of our friends abroad.

Literary Notices, Statistics, brief notices of works of Art, Amusements, the Drama, &c. &c., will from time to time be given. As a general rule, however, it will be the aim of the Editor to embody such articles, whether original or selected, as shall at least combine instruction with amusement.

CONDITIONS.

The Quarto "NEW-YORKER" will be published every Saturday afternoon on an extra imperial sheet of the finest quality, comprising sixteen pages of three columns each, and afforded to its patrons in the city and country, at THREE DOLLARS per annum, ☞payable inflexibly in advance.☜ Orders from a distance, accompanied by a remittance, will necessarily remain unanswered. Any person or persons sending us $5, positively free of postage or other charges, will receive two copies for one year, or a single copy for two years, and in the same proportion for a larger sum. The few who may take the folio edition for immediate perusal and the quarto for binding, will be entitled to receive both for $4 50, in advance. We will cheerfully preserve their files of the quarto for any such who may desire it.

The subscribers are extremely solicitous that there be no misconception on the part of their patrons in regard to the editions of their paper. The quarto is commenced in deference to the solicitations of a great number of their friends, who have expressed a strong desire that the New-Yorker should appear in a form more susceptible of preservation than the present. It is neither anticipated nor hoped that it will receive a patronage at all commensurate with that of the folio edition. They would frankly express their conviction, that, for those whose interest in a journal expires with the week in which it reaches them, the latter will be decidedly preferable, aside from the difference in price. Accordingly, when an order for 'The New-Yorker' simply, without specification, is sent them, the folio will invariably be sent.

Philadelphia Mirror.

THE splendid patronage awarded to the Philadelphia Saturday Courier, induces the editors to commence the publication, under the above title, of a quarto edition of their popular journal, so long known as the largest Family Newspaper in the United States, with a list of near TWENTY-SIX THOUSAND SUBSCRIBERS. The new feature recently introduced of furnishing their readers with new books of the best literature of the day having proved so eminently successful, the plan will be continued. Six volumes of the celebrated writings of Captain Marryatt and sixty-five of Mr. Brooks's valuable Letters from Europe, have already been published without interfering with its news and miscellaneous reading. The Courier is the largest and cheapest family newspaper ever issued in this country, containing articles in Literature, Science and Arts; Internal Improvement; Agriculture; in short every variety of topics usually introduced into a public journal. Giving full accounts of sales, markets, and news of the latest dates.

It is published at the low price of $2. For this small sum subscribers get valuable and entertaining matter, each week enough to fill a common book of 200 pages, and equal to 52 volumes a year, and which is estimated to be read, weekly, by at least two hundred thousand people, scattered in all parts of the country, from Maine to Florida, and from the sea board to the lakes. The paper has been now so long established as to render it too well known to require an extended prospectus; the publishers, therefore, will do no more than refer to the two leading daily political papers of opposite politics. The Pennsylvanian says—"The Saturday Courier is the largest and one of the best family newspapers in the Union;" the other, the Inquirer and Daily Courier, says, "it is the largest journal published in Philadelphia, and one of the very best in the United States." The New York Star says—"We know of nothing more liberal on the part of the editors, and no means more efficacious to draw out the dormant talents of our country, than their unexampled liberality in offering literary prizes."

The Albany Mercury of March 16th, 1836, says, "The Saturday Courier is decidedly the best Family Newspaper ever published in this or any other country, and its value is duly appreciated by the public, if we may judge from its vast circulation, which exceeds 25,000 per week! Its contents are agreeably varied, and each number contains more really valuable 'reading matter' than is published in a week in any daily paper in the Union. Its mammoth dimensions enable its enterprising proprietors, Messrs. Woodward & Clarke, of Philadelphia, to republish in its columns, in the course of a year, several of the most interesting new works that issue from the British press; which cannot fail to give to it a permanent interest, and render it worthy of preservation. To meet the wishes, therefore, of such of their subscribers as desire to have their numbers bound, they have determined on issuing an edition of the Courier in the quarto form, which will render it much more convenient for reading when it is bound in a volume, and thus greatly enhance its value."

THE QUARTO EDITION,

Under the title of the PHILADELPHIA MIRROR, will commence with the publication of the Prize Tale, to which was awarded the prize of $100, written by Miss Leslie, editor of the splendid Annual the Token, and author of Pencil Sketches and other valuable contributions to American Literature. A large number of songs, poems, tales, &c., offered in competition for the $500 premiums, will add value and interest to the succeeding numbers, which will also be enriched by a story from Miss Sedgewick, author of Hope Leslie, The Linwoods, &c., whose talents have been so justly and extensively appreciated, both at home and abroad.

This approved FAMILY NEWSPAPER is strictly neutral in religious and political matters, and the uncompromising opponent of quackery of every kind.

MAPS.

In addition to all which, the publishers intend furnishing their patrons with a series of engraved Maps, embracing the twenty-five States of the Union, &c., exhibiting the situation, &c. of rivers, towns, mountains, lakes, the sea board, internal improvements, as displayed in canals, rail roads, &c., with other interesting and useful features, roads, distances, &c., forming a complete Atlas for general use and information, handsomely executed, and each distinct map on a large quarto sheet, at an expense which nothing but the splendid patronage which for six years past has been so generously extended to them, could warrant.

TERMS:

The Philadelphia Saturday Courier is still continued in its large form, at the same price as heretofore. The Philadelphia Mirror, being a quarto edition of the Saturday Courier, with its increased attractions, and printed on the best fine white paper of the same size as the New York Albion, will be put at precisely one half the price of that valuable journal, viz: Three Dollars per annum, payable in advance, (including the Maps.)
