I lay in a state of insensibility, until about 11 o'clock next day, when a benevolent man, Mr. Spicer, who resides near New River Inlet, where we were thrown ashore, came across me. He enquired if I had any companions.—I told him of Mr. Merritt. After putting a plank to keep the sun from my face, he went to look for Mr. Merritt, and came back and told me he could not find him. Mr. Merritt, I learned afterwards, got to a hut where he fell in an exhausted state, finding it deserted, some fishermen found him there and roused him up. He directed them to look for me, which they did, but it being late in the evening, they did not find me The shore where we landed was a low beach, with some scrub pines upon it, and there was a sound between that and the main land.

Mr. Spicer, for whom I shall always feel under ten thousand obligations, took me across the sound to his own house, where I remained, with every attention paid me by Mr. S. and family until Thursday. The sun and salt water had completely skinned me, and cream was applied. On Thursday I reached Wilmington, where Wm N. Peder, esq., kindly took me to his own house and rendered every sssistance. Matthew Tilghman Goldsborough, Esq. of Talbot, who was in Wilmington at the time, and had known my brother, Dr. Stewart, volunteered a loan to me, for which I am under great obligations to him. The citizens of Wilmington, and all along as I came, were, however, so kind, that I had but little occasion for money. On Wednesday following I left the hospitable mansion of Mr. Peden, and by the way of Halifax, Richmond, Washington and Baltimore, reached Cambridge, E. S. Md, Dr. Stewart's servant girl came with me. After the wreck, she states she was with six others on a raft; Dr. Stewart, she says, was with her on the wrek, until Monday, when he died from exhaustion. His servant kept his head above water for two days, after the Doctor was so enfeebled as to be unable to hold on. He told the servant that he saw his wife go down, after the dreadful disaster, several times, and could be of no service to her. The next day, Friday, the doctor and his servant saw many dead bodies floating near, and among the rest, his little child, two years old—what a dreadful spectacle!—The doctor before his death became delirious; when he expired, his lifeless body, was silently swept away, by the sea. Several persons, the girl states, in fits of delirium jumped, from the raft. Of all the party that left Tallahassee, it seems, myself, and the doctor's servant, are the sole survivors. Poor Hodson, that could not swim, I saw no more after we were thrown together in the water, upon the turning over of the wreck, as before described. The exposure, that I had to encounter, together with the horror of soul at the terrific scene I passed through, (which now, I can scarcely realize. as it seems like an awful dream) occasioned me infinite suffering, but in my illness, I was, by the hand of an all wise Providence thrown amongst the kindest people I ever saw; I shall recollect them as long as pulsation vibrates through my heart.

A HINT FOR WARM WEATHER. Somewhere in Java, or in other eastern regions, the aboriginal legislators, while holding a "palaver," keep themselves cool by a device that might, perhaps, be advantageously adopted in Congress, during the warm weather. A jar sufficiently large, and filled with cold water, is provided for each member, who gets into it during the session, and sits until the hour of adjournment, immersed to his neck in the tranquilizing fluid. The measures taken are therefore calm and deliberate, and the debates are likewise free from heat and ill-temper. The Javanese Solons cannot lash themselves into a fury by violent gesticulation; for any attempt at making a splash would probably result in being spilt. Thus, these cold water jars have a tendency to prevent all jars of a warmer and more disagreeable nature; and had the pugilistic congressmen, who have of late been so outrageus in the House of Representatives, been "put up" in the Javanese fashion, the recent difficulties, in all likelihood, would not have occurred. Under these arrangements, the phraseology of the House might perhaps require alteration. Instead of being "out of order," a gentleman might be told that he was "out of the water;" and instead of ordering him to "take his seat," the member might be required to "get into his jar."—The effect, likewise, of so many diversified countenances protuding from the crockery, could not be otherwise than picturesque and entertaining. Lycurgus in a pipkin would surely be as imposiug as Diogenes in a tub. Charcoal Sketch.

Will the editor of that little fun-loving, life-giving, sorrow-drowning, tear-drying, laughing, cutting, stinging, snorting, puffing, blowing, screaming philosopher, the Baltimore Sun, please to mail us the daily instead of his excellent weekly paper? "Home sweet home." We cant wait a whole week at a time. Do so, and we'll send you some sour crout next winter.—Shippensburg Herald.

Boy, a glass of water as cool as a zephyr, with the wing of a fly in it. Certainly, we will send you two copies a day, and occasionally a bunch of turnips! but dont mind the sour crout.—Balt. Sun.

"GOING TO WATER."—The President of the United States intends to visit the White Sulpher Springs, on the adjournment of Congress. Dont drink too much of the water; it is very strong!—Baltimore Sun.

Ay, Van, is it possible that you are given to drink too much of the strong stuff, that the editor of the Sun has to caution you of its ill effects?

SKILL IN DENTISTRY.—We had the pleasure of witnessing, day before yesterday, an instance of skill and science, which it is but an act of justice to the operator, Dr. F. H. KNAPP, to record.—The case was one in which a scrofulous humour had destroyed the roof of the mouth, rendering it difficult for the patient to articulate distinctly enough to make himself understood, besides making his situation, in other respects disagreeable, and even distressing. In this pitiable condition, he applied to Dr. KNAPP, who has just finished a palate of gold, which fills up the cavity, supplies the place of the natural palate, causes no pain or uneasiness, and enables the patient to speak with as much ease and distinctness as though he had never suffered from the misfortune described. An inspection of the article and its application convinced us of the skill of the operat er, and impressed us with a sense of the obligations, under which science and professional skill are constantly laying the the sick and distressed.—Baltimore Trans.

The Tioga Pennsylvania Phenix, a Van Buren paper, speaking of the mad measures of the administration and the hopeless prospects of the party, says—"All is now unheeded. With a folly bordering on insanity, we are hurried to ruin, and ere long not a plank will be left to which the unfortunate shipwrecked Democrat can cling."
