POETRY.

From the Albany Daily Advertiser.

In tone, style, and sentiment the following lines are indeed of rare and surpassing beauty.

"Who can separate hearts that have united, or divide waters that have met, and mingled into one?"

"Love never dies; where it does not exist, there it never has existed."—

Think not, beloved! time can break
The spell around us cast;
Or absence from my bosom take
The memory of the past:
My love is not that silvery mist,
From summer blooms by sunbeams kissed,
Too fugitive to last—
A fadeless flower, it still retains
The brightness of its early stains.

Nor burns it like the raging fire,
In tainted breast which glows,
All wild and thorny as the briar,
Without its opening rose;
A gentler, holier, love is mine,
Unchangeable and firm, while thine
Is pure as mountain snows;
Nor yet has passion dared to breathe
A spell o'er Love's immortal wreath.

And now, when grief has dimm'd thine eye,
And sickness made thee pale;
Think'st thou I could the mourner fly,
And leave thee to the gale?
Oh no!—may all those dreams depart,
Hope sheds upon the youthful heart,
If now my bosom fail;
Or leave thee when the storm comes on,
To bear its turbulence alone.

The ivy round some lofty pile,
Its twining tendril flings;
Though fled from thence be pleasure's smile
It yet the fonder clings:
As lonelier still becomes the place,
The warmer is its fond embrace,
More firm its verdant rings,
As if it lov'd its shade to rear,
O'er one devoted to despair.

Thus shall my bosom cling to thine,
Unchanged by gliding years;
Through Fortune's rise, or her decline,
In sunshine or in tears;
And though between us oceans roll,
And rocks divide us, still my soul
Can feel no jealous fears,
Confiding in a heart like thine,
Love's uncontaminated shrine!

To me, though bathed in sorrow's dew,
The dearer far art thou:
I lov'd thee when thy woes were few,
And can I alter now?
That face, in joy's bright hour, was fair,
More beautiful since grief is there,
Though somewhat pale thy brow;
And be it mine to soothe the pain
Thus pressing on thy heart and brain.

Yes, love! my breast, at sorrow's call
Shall tremble like thine own:
If from those eyes the tear-drops fall,
They shall not fall alone.
Our souls like heaven's aerial bow,
Blend every [illegible] within their glow,
Of joy or [illegible] known:
And grief, divided with thy heart,
Were sweeter far than joy apart.

The following, from the Elkton (Cecil county) Press, will of course be readily recognized as a reply to an effusion some time ago published in the Hagerstown Torch Light, and subsequently in this paper.

Please look in the "Torch Light," as there they display
"Men, women and children, are turning to Clay."
'Tis but a small error, and that not the worst,
Where the writer says "Clay," he should have said dust.

There he portrays it, in poetry bright,
That Clay is a star of political light:
I venture a wager while freedom we trust,
Clay never will shine until Jackson's in dust.

'Tis further observed that this glorious star
Will shine forth in splendour and glory afar;
But this much I'll venture, and say it I must,
He's eclipsed in his orbit by Hickory dust.

He writes very funny 'bout "cunning and trickery,"
How Buren intends to straddle old Hickory.
When Adams was saddled, Clay thought to mount first,
But over he tumbled in Hickory dust.

He talks of Calhoun and the order of right,
And the cool, calm and silence which Clay will unite;
Suppose he forgets, when his eloquence burst,
"In pestilence, famine," to lay us in dust.

Now Jackson's the lion who shook his bold mane,
And broke all the links found in slavery's chain;
May Hickory twigs entwine liberty's bust,
And Jackson sound glorious when Clay is in dust.

If aught of our glory has ever been veiled,
And aught of our wisdom by bribery concealed,
Clay in the Cabinet contended it just,
Records will shew it when Clay is in dust.

May Clay now in peace from all office retire,
Expunge from his bosom all envy and fire,
Repent for the faith which he bartered in trust,
And prepare for the hour he'll rise from the dust.

DE LA MONTERAT'S COLUMBIAN VEGETABLE SPECIFIC, for the Cure of Consumptions, Asthma, Pleurisy, Spitting of Blood, and Pulmonary Affections of every kind—the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the Cure of Consumptions and all Diseases of the Breast and Lungs, leading to Consumptions.

To all afflicted with those troublesome affections, an immediate use of this highly celebrated specific is only necessary to convince the most incredulous of its possessing qualities superior to any other medical preparation yet discovered. Since the discovery of this invaluable medicine, numbers have experienced its salutary and happy effects—its mild and gentle operations are much extolled by those who have used it. In all cases of coughs, colds, asthmas and other consumptive affections, by the use of this article, they have been enabled to defeat an enemy whose attacks would otherwise have been followed by the most alarming consequences. This specific has relieved and cured the most violent cases, in which other medicines have failed to give any relief. It operates by gentle expectorations, and may be given to infants and children with the greatest safety.

De La Monterat's Columbian Vegetable Specific has stood the test of experience, and proved itself the most valuable remedy ever discovered for the cure of consumption and pulmonary affections of every kind.

DR. RUSH'S ANTI-DYSPEPTIC OR SOUR STOMACH PILLS, an invaluable remedy for Indigestion in its most complicated forms.

Of the variety of diseases to which the human system is subject, few are more stubborn, none more distressing or destructive to the constitution than Indigestion or Sour Stomach. This disease prevails to a great extent and has so generally baffled the skill of the faculty, that a remedy easy of administration is truly a desideratum in every place. The truth of this statement is confirmed by the experience of thousands who have suffered under it, who after having used many remedies to no purpose are now obliged to have recourse to such palliatives, as they chance to find most conducive to their comfort. By Indigestion is meant loss of appetite and great weakness, particularly of the legs, and a wasting of the whole system, Heartburn, or an uneasy sensation of heat about the pit of the stomach, which is sometimes attended with nausea or sickness of the stomach and vomiting, Belching up of water which is generally sour, Paleness of the countenance, Costiveness, Languor, Giddiness, Lowness of spirits, disturbed Sleep, Palpitation of the heart, Flatulency, &c.

These Pills act as a powerful tonic, neutralize the Acid upon the stomach, give strength to the debilitated organs of digestion, restore the appetite, remove nausea at the stomach, and ultimately recover the health of the patient. They do not contain mercury in any form, nor do they sicken the stomach as most purgative medicines do, but perform the office of a safe and mild purgative, and are not surpassed by any medicine.

Together with a number of Forms and other Legal information, useful to the Farmer, Mechanic, or Man of Business.

Carefully compiled and arranged, by B. F. Hancock, Attorney at Law, Norristown.

The importance of a work of this kind must be obvious to every person, and will, it is presumed, be a sufficient recommendation to that numerous and respectable part of the community for whose particular use it is designed. It is calculated to communicate such information upon those subjects which are of daily occurrence, and in which almost every person has at some time of his life an interest, and may serve to caution him in avoiding danger, as well as to make him acquainted with the extent of his rights, and the remedy for the wrongs which may be done him.

Those Laws which are now intended to be published, have been carefully selected from a large Law Library. To the Farmer, those relating to Roads, Bridges, Fences, Strays, Swine, Water Courses, Hunting, &c. are highly useful, and to the man of business, a knowledge of the laws relative to Deeds, Mortgages, Bonds, Judgments, Notes, &c. is altogether necessary—besides which the work will contain many other laws of use to all, and such other law information as cannot be obtained without purchasing a number of law books at a great expense.

Conditions.—The work will be printed on fine white paper, with handsome new type, and will contain more than 100 octavo pages. The price to subscribers will be only sixty-two and a half cents, neatly bound with Morocco back and corners.

It will be put to press about the 1st of January next, or as soon as a sufficient number of subscribers have been obtained to defray the expense, and will be delivered in any part of the state, as soon as possible after it has been published.

A Copy Right has been secured, and any infringement will be proceeded against according to law.

Any person procuring 10 subscribers and becoming responsible for the payment of the whole, will be entitled to one copy gratis.

Norristown, Nov 8, 1830.

☞Subscriptions will be received at this office.

The Journal of Law,

A POPULAR PERIODICAL.

CONDUCTED BY AN ASSOCIATION OF MEMBERS OF THE BAR.

"Ignorance of the law excuseth no man."

This work was commenced on the 7th of July, 1830, and is issued on the first and third Wednesdays of every month, at the office of the Journal of Health, No. 108, Chesnut street, opposite the Post Office, Philadelphia. Each number contains 16 octavo pages. Price, per annum, $1.50, in advance. All subscribers to commence with No. 1, of each year: the back numbers, carefully put up, will be punctually forwarded. Postage the same as newspapers.

This work is edited by Gentlemen of the Bar of the first respectability, and will be contributed to by some of the most eminent men of our country. It is intended to bear the same relation to the profession of the Law, that the Journal of Health does to that of Medicine.

IN presenting to our fellow citizens the first number of a new work, it is proper to state the views and purposes with which it has been undertaken.

It is always important that the inhabitants of a country should possess a general knowledge of the laws by which they are governed, and especially of those regulations which affect them in the pursuit and transaction of their ordinary business. In the United States, where THE PEOPLE exercise so controlling an influence on legislation, it is emphatically necessary that THEY should be, to the greatest attainable extent, instructed in the philosophy of general jurisprudence, and in the state and leading principles of our own. Unless such instruction be widely diffused, what is good in our system cannot be secure from innovation; what is evil cannot be properly amended.

It is believed, too, that any effort must be deserving of encouragement, which may tend to produce a greater degree of uniformity in the regulations of the different states, on those subjects which are not of merely local interest. In our private intercourse and relations of business, or otherwise, we are one people; while, as far as regards the laws by which our conduct and contracts are for the most part regulated, we form twenty-four distinct communities, in each of which a rule of action is prescribed, differing more or less from that which prevails in any one of the others.

Inconvenience from this source, to a certain extent, is already felt; and unless the dissimilarities and contradictions of our respective codes be prevented from increasing, inconvenience to a much greater extent must be expected.

In endeavouring to be useful, we desire to be entertaining also, and have therefore embraced in our scheme the introduction of a suitable quantity of the lighter matter which is usually found in the pages of a literary journal.

Our aim will be to afford to our readers instruction without tediousness, and amusement without frivolity.

The JOURNAL OF LAW, addressing itself to the people of the United States, will be principally devoted to the exposition, in popular language, of the philosophy, history, and actual state of law and government in different countries—of our own constitutions, state and national—laws, civil and criminal—judicial systems and modes of procedure—together with particular essays on those branches of the law, a knowledge of which may be most practically useful to men engaged in active pursuits; as for instance, the law of corporations, patent, insurance, bills of exchange, and commercial and other contracts, in all their varieties—real estate, with the modes of conveying it—insolvency, wills, descents, intestacy, &c. &c. &c.

We shall endeavour always to inculcate those principles of sound morality, the preservation of which is the legitimate purpose of all laws, though it is to be feared that no existing system is, in all its parts, exactly adapted to that purpose. Defects in the principles, provisions, and administration of our own, shall be candidly and fearlessly noted.

Reports of interesting decided cases, biographies of eminent lawyers and others, medical jurisprudence, sketches of the legal, literary and benevolent institutions of various countries, anecdotes, and the various topics of general literature, will be considered within the scope of this Journal.

To our professional brethren in the different states, we appeal with confidence, for assistance in the present undertaking. Arrangements have been made for procuring aid from competent persons in the various quarters of the union, and the liberality of the publisher enables us to offer to distant contributors, a suitable remuneration for their labours.

☞A specimen of the above paper may be seen at this office, where subscriptions to it will be received.
