"I PADDLE MY OWN CANOE."

By whatever means a person may gain notoriety, that which is the most lasting and beneficial is the result of care, and a proper regard for rectitude of conduct and proprieties of life. Acting upon this principle in our business, the effect has been, that ever since we commenced the mercantile business it has been marked by a steady increase. We shall still abide by the cause which produces such satisfactory results; and while returning our thanks to our friends and patrons for their liberality, we assure them that no effort on our part will be spared to secure and warrant a continuance of their favor and patronage. We have just returned from Philadelphia with a large and well selected assortment of
