NO LET-UP SEEN IN NATION'S WAR EFFORT

Fred M. Vinson, head of the Office of War Mobilization and Ted R. Gamble, national director of the War Finance Division of the Treasury today declared in separate statements that plans for all-out financing of the war effort and production will continue for "a long time."

Vinson said his policy is 'Let's stay on the job until both wars are won."

Gamble said that "the financing of the biggest half of our war is still a major problem of the home front but I have no fear but that Americans, who have so proudly over-subscribed previous war loans will carry on during the Mighty Seventh."

Vinson said the blueprint for the war against Japan outlines plans for munitions and civilian production; rationing, wage, price and manpower controls to be supervised by the War Production Board, the War Manpower Commission, the Office of Price Administration, the War Labor Board and the Office of Economic Stabilization.

The War Mobilization Chief said "V-E Day will not affect any noticeable change in the civilian way of living." Vinson said there probably would be a slight increase in the amount of gasoline allowed "A" card users but that otherwise things will continue about as they have until V-J Day.

Gamble who directs the largest volunteer financial campaign in history, said:

"Our victory in Europe serves to show that a united America can be depended to back our men at the fronts to win the war unconditionally. Millions of persons, by their buying — and holding — of War Bonds, have contributed to the morale of our fighting men, helped to finance the vital war financing program and, at the same time, are helping to stabilize the economic home front so that when the veteran returns he will find things nearly as normal as he left them.

"Our war with Japan is the biggest half of our war. Japan has 35 million workers on her home islands who work 12 to 15 hours a day, seven days a week, making munitions and food. Japan has the services of 400 million captured Asiatic slaves doing her bidding under the whip. Japan is geared to a long war."
