AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

Immigration of Agricultural Laborers.

A great demonstration of agricultural laborers was held in July, at Newbury, a market town in Berks, England, at which Mr. Joseph Arch, the leader in the present organized movement among English farm laborers to secure better wages, and president of their Union, delivered an eloquent and energetic address which we find briefly recorded in our last foreign exchanges. Mr. Arch is a man of great force of character, who has made his way from an humble origin and against great obstacles to a position of extraordinary influence among the class he represents. It will be seen from the following extract that he is coming to the United States during the present month, with the view of investigating the opportunities offered here for the agricultural laborers from England; and if he makes up his mind to advocate their emigration hither, and to use the powerful machinery of the Union in promoting it, there is no doubt that he might secure the transfer of such enormous numbers as to produce a sensible effect both in the country they leave and in that to which they come:

The great tide of emigration was rolling on, and during the past year the exodus was something tremendous, and he would tell them that if his life was spared until August he should visit the States of America. If he found there a home for the agricultural laborers of England he should tell them so, but if he found that farmers in America were men who wanted both sides of the bargain, and that the crows were as black there as here, he should advise them to stay in England. If he found that America was the true home of the working men, where the son of the poor man could sit down by the children of the rich, and where they could have full electoral power, he would stand on her shores until he had drained the laboring serfs out of England, in order that they might settle in the fruitful fields of America, with its ninety millions of acres yet untilled; and he would do this until the farmers of England were made to bite the dust, if they refused to treat their laborers like men. He hoped that before this time twelvemonths to make the farmers of this country know the worth of a man. Although he was of humble birth, and had only been an agricultural laborer himself, he had English blood, and an English heart and human feelings; and he would not see six hundred thousand tillers of the soil in a state of slavery, and mocked by being told they were free. He would traverse America from one end to the other if he lost his life in trying to raise the English laborer, and he would die gladly if he could but bring him into a state of freedom.

Transplanting Trees.

If we were asked the question what caused the greatest number of failures in removing trees, we should unhesitatingly answer, allowing the roots to become dry while out of the ground. Especially is this the case with the coniferæ, or cone-bearing family, and in fact all trees with persistent or ever-green leaves.

Despite the oft-repeated cautions of our leading horticultural writers—amounting in many instances to earnest pleading—the careless practice hinted at is still adhered to by a large proportion of our planters; including many whom we fear really know better. Scarcely a day passes during the Spring and Autumn months that we do not notice trees and plants laying out waiting until the workmen are ready to set them, although exposed to the combined influence of the wind and sun, which invariably causes rapid evaporation to take place. In the majority of instances the nursery men are obliged to bear the burden of the failures—"for was not the planter careful in setting his specimens? hence previous disease must have been the cause."

Friends, never let the roots of your trees dry for one moment when out of the ground. You might just as well keep your favorite Cotswold and Durham from the water-trough and expect them to thrive. Tramping the soil firmly preserves the roots most after the planting, and a slight mulch over the surface completes the work in a satifactory manner. Weekly Tribune.

USE OF MANURE.—Fisher Ames, one of the most popular and distinguished men of his day, and always regarded as one of the great lights of Massachusetts, said in a letter to Josiah Quincey, in 1806, that "the only sensible economy in farming is to spend money." It is a fact, but it would read better to write it manure instead of money. Most farmers have a quantity of manure greater or less according to their own diligence and skill, but it isn't every one that has the money to spend.

But this practice or rule of conduct is within the reach of all, to spend or apply manure liberally as far as it will go. We do not mean to suggest that parts of the farm should be robbed of their proportion to be able to brag on a premium crop, but that it is best to do well whatever is attempted. If there is not enough to do justice to ten acres under cultivation, it may be better to put it upon five this year, and give the other five their turn next year. In other words, make thorough work of it as far as you go.

VERY FINE PRESERVED PEACHES.—Take fine, ripe, freestone peaches, pare them, cut them in half and remove the stones. Have ready a sufficiency of the best double-refined loaf sugar, finely powdered. Weigh the sugar and the peaches together, putting the sugar into one scale and the peaches into the other, and balance evenly. Put the peaches into a pan or tureen, and strew among them one-half of the sugar. Cover them and let them stand in a cool place till next morning. Then take all the juice from and put into a porcelain preserving kettle with the remainder of the sugar. Set it over a moderate fire, boil and skim it. When it is boiling well and the scum has ceased to rise, put in the peaches and boil until they are perfectly clear, but not till they break.

HOT APPLICATION.—They report a queer case of spontaneous combustion from New Hampshire. A Physician had prescribed linseed oil and camphor for a pain in the chest, and the patient complained of the heat soon after its application on cotton batting. In about an hour he complained he could bear it no longer, and before it could be removed it took fire, actually flaring up and burning the poor fellow's neck severely.

DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY is "a combination and a form indeed" for healing and curing diseases of the throat, lungs and chest. It cures a cough by lessening and cleansing the lungs, and allaying irritation; thus removing the cause, instead of drying up the coughing and leaving the disease behind.

THE EUREKA

FANNING MILL.

THE GREATEST INVENTION OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY!

Farmers Look to Your Interest.

THE attention of Farmers and Mechanics is particularly directed to the combined economy, utility and practicability of the Eureka Mill, and to the many other advantages it possesses over every other Fanning Mill which has been introduced to the public.

It is the fruit of long and patient investigation by the inventor, who has made it his constant study for over twenty years. He has secured several patents for Mills, and has always been rewarded with the best of success. But not feeling satisfied with his former attainments, he determined to reach the climax, and he now believes that his new invention will warrant him in exclaiming in the joy of his heart, like the philosopher, Phythagoras—EUREKA!—signifying in the Grecian language, "I have found it." This has given the name to this new Mill.

In this Mill are all the former improvements to which have been added several more, adding still greater advantages than were at first anticipated, or even thought possible by the inventor himself. It embraces the three great essentials necessary in every invention:

It combines ECONOMY, UTILITY and PRACTICABILITY!

THE "EUREKA" MILL

is small and lighter, and is capable of doing more and better work in a given time than any other Mill ever invented.

IT IS THE ONLY MILL

that will successfully remove from wheat all such pests as Cockle, Garlic, Oats, Rye, &c.

Should an extra quality of grain for seed or gristing purposes be required, it can be so arranged as to catch in one box perfect grain, and in the other, grain fit for market or mill. Here is made a great saving usually lost sight of: for nearly one quarter of the grain cleaned in the common Mills is lost when sown, on account of shrunken kernels and inferior grain. The Eureka Mill saves all this, and gives seed every kernel of which will grow when put into the ground, and this saving will, in a short time, pay for the Mill.

HINES & BURCHINAL,

Chestertown, Maryland,

Owners of the Mill, are having them manufactured at the Sash Factory and Planing Mill of Noland & Co., Port Deposit, Md., which is a guarantee that they will be put up in the best manner. jel7-tf.
