SATURDAY - - - - MARCH 1, 1879.

VALUABLE INFORMATION.

"Know thyself" is a wise command, and yet how little do the most of us know of our own make up. Many of us are as ignorant of our different organs as if we had never given a thought as to how fearfully and wonderfully we are made. Mrs. Dr. L. S. Carter delivered a most interesting lecture, in Philadelphia, the other evening, from which we make an extract:

I wish to speak mainly of those diseases which arise from a disordered stomach and torpid liver. Regulate these two organs so they perform their functions properly, and you will remove nine-tenths of all the ills that flesh is heir to. The reason of this is easily understood. The first stomach receives the food after it has been masticated and mixed with the saliva of the mouth, and if the stomach is healthy, gastric juice, which is both a solvent and an antiseptic, appears in abundant quantities, mixed with the food and exciting the muscular motion of the stomach, which churns the food back and forth, from left to right and right to left again, until it is thoroughly saturated with and partly dissolved by the juice, but only partly digested. It then passes through a valve called pylorus into the second stomach, or duodenum, where it comes in contact and is mingled in with juices from small glands and with the juice of the pancreas, and also with the bile of the liver. This latter is of a yellow color and is very bitter. The pancreatic juice is mild, much like the saliva of the mouth. With the aid of these important properties digestion continues and the separation takes place of the indigestible material from the nutritive portion, the chyle, which is absorbed by the lacteals and carried through the mesenteric glands to the thoracic duct, which is a small tube about the size of a small goose quill, situated in front of the spine, and thence in the veins near the heart.

The heart sends the blood out through the arteries into the extremes of the system and to the surface, where the blood vessels terminate in the smallest possible tubes. Thus we have seen the food converted into blood and sent all over the body. In this circuit it leaves its vitalizing influences and returns to the heart for redistribution.

This returning venous blood is dark and loaded with impurities, and needs to be clarified and revivified.

The liver, kidneys, lungs and skin are all constantly employed in carrying off the poison, dead, effete matter of the human system.

The liver should remove from the blood a large proportion of this poisonous matter and from it secrete bile, which is nature's cathartic. The kidneys should take from it the surplus water, thus preserving a uniform temperature, and also remove those poisons having nitrogen in them. The lungs should take from the blood carbon and impart oxygen through contact with the atmosphere.

The remainder of the impure matter passes off through the skin and the natural outlets of the body. When any of these organs are interrupted or obstructed in offices by disease or mechanical injury, the others are unnaturally quickened into undue activity, in trying to do what the impaired organs have left undone. Thus when the blood comes to the liver, on its way to the heart, if the liver fails to perform its proper functions the kidneys, lungs and skin become overworked and ultimately give out. The lungs developing weakness and inflamation, are in condition for pneumonia to set in on exposure. The skin shows its efforts by its yellow tints, which are apparent when the liver is torpid and the blood clogged with malarial poison. But the kidneys are most apt to suffer injury from this condition of things, and unless relief is obtained the result is chronic difficulty. There is rarely a kidney trouble that is not preceded by some derangement of the liver, and many developments of diseases have their origin in the liver. Just as soon as it fails in its duty, the bood still making the circuit of the entire system every few minutes, seeks relief, but does not find it, and gradually the finer tissues become involved and the weak places begin to show trouble and we may be sure if there is a natural predisposition to any disease in any organ or part of the body this poisonous blood will find it: but if our blood is rich and pure it will heal all contracted diseases and repair all injuries.

In the absence of sufficient quantities of the gastric juice in the first stomach, the food must ferment and decompose, and pass into the duodenum as a vile poison. Neither the pancreatic juice, the bile, or any known property can ever restore it to the condition nature intended it. The unnatural disposition of the food is the cause of much suffering and produces innumerable diseases.

This shows, also, the great impropriety of eating too much, for it is evident even in health, if more food is taken at a time than there is gastric juice to dissolve, some of it must pass down undigested, and become a source of much irritation and injury to the intestines. The too prevalent notion that a person, sick or well, may eat as much as he wants—that is, unless his appetite is satisfied, or his stomach is full—is a most pernicious doctrine, and productive of much suffering. It is a fact that a little food, well digested, will sustain health and vigor, and that if but little is taken it will generally be well digested. The digestive organs should never be forced to commence action on a new supply till they have rested from their labors if well, or are relieved of their burdens if obstructed. Eat a variety of those articles that long trial and careful observation you find best to agree with you, but dont eat too much or too often. Do not, however, apply these rules too closely to children, for in them the demands of a growing body are the source of a keen appetite. Be careful that they do not early acquire a relish for rich viands, but give them plain nourishing food, ripe fruit and good milk; and you may safely leave the quantity thereof to their own apparent need to determine.

In our style of climate with its sudden changes of temperature, rain, wind and sunshine, often intermingled in a day, is it any wonder that our children, friends and relations are taken from us by neglected colds? half the deaths resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Leary's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar, kept about the house for immidiate use, will often prevent serious sickness, a large doctor bill and sometimes death by the use of it. For the cure of Hemorrhage, Pneumonia, severe Cough, Colds and Croup, or any diseases of the Throat and Lungs; its success is wonderful; ask your druggist for it; only 35 cts. a bottle. mar 1-2t.

THE Social Science Association of Boston publishes the startling, if true, statement that several mills in New England are grinding white stone into powder, to be used in adulterating sugar, soda, and flour.

THE last thing out.—The bed-candle.

BAYARD FOR PRESIDENT.—The signs are multiplying that the possible Democratic candidate for the Presidency in 1880, whom the Republicans most dread, is Senator Bayard, of Delaware. No occasion is neglected by the extreme Republican press to misrepresent the motives of every speech he makes or vote he casts. If he advocates a reduction of the excise on tobacco, that means a bidding for the vote of Kentucky. If he resists insidious schemes for frustrating the resumption of specie payments, that means a bid for the votes of New York. If he counsels moderation to his impetuous associates in a Democratic caucus concerning the Federal election laws, that means a bid for the votes among the Northern States generally. The independent press owes its honorable duty to Senator Bayard under these circumstances—the duty of rebuking this conspiracy of defamation. This can be executed without assuming partisanship. Senator Bayard has been a transparent public character more than twenty years. His goings in and comings out have been watched by the people, and no duplicity ever has been imputed to them till now. The Republican newspapers generally deserves credit for their constant recognition of his ability and purity during this long period, and we are sorry to see them forfeiting this credit so suddenly and rapidly. The character of the object of their present slurs has not changed in the twinkling of an eye. He is still the same clean-handed and clear-headed statesman he ever was, and fortunate indeed will it be for the country if all the political parties which contend for the prize of the next Presidency shall present candidates so meritorious.—N. Y. Telegram.

MINORITY REPRESENTATION A SUCCESS.—Mr. Wm. Medill, of the Chicago Tribune, has written a brief but interesting and valuable letter on the workings of the minority representation clause in the Illinois constitution. He says in reply to the question, "Does it fill the hopes of its advocates?" "It does, since it secures fair representation to minorities. Previous to its adoption the southern portion of the State, known as 'Egypt,' rarely elected a republican, and the northern portion, known as 'Canaan,' as rarely chose a democrat. At present one-third of the Egyptian representatives are republicans, and one-third of the Canaanite representatives are democrats. The advantages not only to the people of the several districts but to the State at large, and, in reality, to the great political parties, are obvious." Mr. Medill denies that the new provision enables a minority to rule. He says that "the politicians by trade are opposed to the provision, and would like to get it repealed, but the mass of the people will not consent thereto, and it will stand."

IT looks as though the "cigar steamer" which made its appearance in Baltimore some years back, under the supervision of Thomas Winans, is about to attain finally all the success hoped for it. Three sons of the late Ross Winans have for a long time been experimenting in England, and, it is said, have so far succeeded that it is said they are about constructing four immense ocean ships, the cost of which will be nearly five millions of dollars each. The ships are to be much longer than the Great Eastern, and it is believed will be able to cross the ocean in six days, in spite of all kinds of weather. They are to ply between New London, Connecticut, and Milford Haven, Great Britain.

IT is stated that the cultivators of lettuce and celery in France have united and offered a premium of $2,000 for a remedy that will check a rust that is proving injurious to the growth of those vegetables.

The People Want Proof.

There is no medicine prescribed by physicians, or sold by Druggists, that carries such evidence of its success and superior virtue as BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP for severe Coughs, Colds settled on the breast, Consumption, or any disease of the Throat and Lungs. A proof of that is that any person afflicted can get a sample bottle for 10 cts. and try its superior effect before buying the regular size at 75 cts. It has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderful cures are astonishing every one that use it. Three doses will relieve any case. Try it. Sold by C. F. STAM, Chestertown, F. M. GOODING, Millington, and all druggists.

JOHN N. DODD,
UNDERTAKER.

NOTICE.
REDUCTION IN PRICES.

I AM still at the old stand established by my father, the late John. T. Dodd, over 40 years ago as the leading Undertaker of this community, which reputation I intend to keep so far as quality, design, price, pelite attention, &c., on my part is concerned. I want it distinctly understood that I make a SPECIALTY of Undertaking, keeping a large stock of Coffins, Caskets, and Burial Cases of all kinds always on hand, and I am prepared to furnish them upon the shortest notice possible, at prices much below ANY ONE ELSE engaged in the business in this vicinity. I can do this because I am at less expense than others, and I guarantee full satisfaction in every case, both as regards quality and price.

☞ When away on other business, orders may be left with my mother, who resides next door to the shop, and they will receive equal attention as if left with me in person, as she thoroughly understands the business in every particular. I will allow nothing else to interfere with the prompt and efficient execution of all orders with which I am favored.

JOHN N. DODD,
sep21-tf. UNDERTAKER.

THE undersigned invites the attention of Farmers to the celebrated

Advance Chilled Plough.
