66 I'M AFRAID you'll never be happy," said a woman I know to a younger friend, "because you won't try. Even being happy takes some effort on our

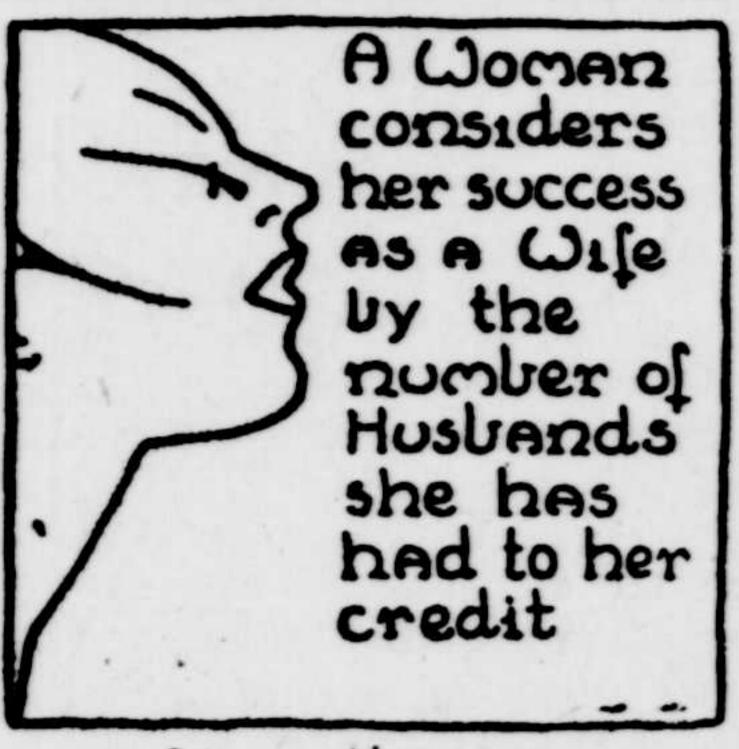

At the first thought that may seem a theory for a very artificial kind of happiness. And yet when we really think about it, there is a good deal of rightness in this woman's idea.

Take for instance, married happiness. A couple known to have been very happily married for 50 years summed up their success in these words: "Bearing and forbearing." In other words, they tried to make their marriage a happy one. And to do that they had to care more about living together happily than in getting their own way in any of a number of things upon which they must frequently have disagreed. In other words, they subordinated other matters to their marital happiness. They tried to be

Now aside from marriage, that matter of just being happy. Need it be spoiled by trying? I think not. One way of trying to be happy is not to put too much emphasis on things that women have been writing her letters cannot be helped, but to try to be happy in spite of them, to concentrate on the good things which life has brought us. Another way to try to be happy is to see the good in people, to think more about the virtues of those we love and those with whom we come in contact, than their faults. Woman's Goal Is "Forever Young," Says Authoress.

The one thing most women want out of life is to stay forever young. That's according to a statement just made by Elaine S erne Carrington, world-famous novelist and magazine writer. For twenty years -she has received thousands of them. And from a study of these letters she has received. Mrs. Carrington says: "The one thing that the greatest number of women want is to stay forever young." Thus she tops her list of ten things women want most with "Forever

Second on her list is "to keen my romance unending." Third deals with women's desire to attain beauty or to retain their beauty if they have it.

Fourth is their wish for health. Women, she also finds, would sooner be charming than intelligent, for, she says, the study of her fan mail from thousands of women shows that the desire for chaim rates fifth and for brains ninth. Sixth in ranking comes the wish for children Seventh is the wish that "I may always appear well-groomed and have a smart personal appearance Eighth is "an attractive nome always," and tenth, and last on her list, is "financial security

Garden Plans-When Spring Comes

In transplanting plants from seed boxes or hot beds to the garden it isn't necessary to operate in the dark of the moon; nevertheless it's bad to attempt the business on a clear hot day. If you must do it in the sunlight, select late afternoon rather than morning. Try to dig up the plant—with a trowel, spade or spade fork-without losing the ball of earth around the roots. If you fail, stick the roots in a pail of clay mud

The Soil Test It may sound technical, but it's a good idea before planting your spring garden to test the kind of soil you have, If your garden is "acid," celery, cabbage, cucumber, tomato, bean and pea seeds among vegetables and dahlia, begonia, gladiolus and zinna will not thrive in it.
