Failure of Impeachment.

Comments of the Press.

The acquittal of the President on the eleventh article of impeachment seems to have been received throughout the country with cordial approbation by reflecting men of all parties. Especially is this the case among business men—mercantile, mechanical and others—who are anxious to see the country quieted and trade revived. We subjoin the views of several leading journals in different localities:

[From the New York Times, rep.]

When the heat of party passion has passed away, sober and reflecting men will wonder how they could have been betrayed into such a violation of common sense and common decency. The Senators who will have to justify themselves, to their own consciences and at the bar of public opinion, will be those who voted for conviction on this preposterous charge—not those who voted against it. And every man who has any appreciation of what it is that constitutes the honor and security of the nation, will rejoice that the country was saved the scandal and reproach of deposing a President under so shallow and barefaced a pretext as this. We have escaped this black and lasting stain on our national reputation, and it is one of the narrowest escapes any nation has ever made from one of the greatest dangers which any nation has ever encountered.

[From the New York Tribune, radical.]

Of course nobody imagines that such men as Messrs. Fessenden, Grimes, Van Winkle and Trumbull voted otherwise than they believed just. Warped by personal antipathy or prejudice their judgments may have been—we think they were—but they are above the suspicion of yielding to any more sordid temptation.

Mr. Johnson remains in the White House. The eleventh was deliberately, and we doubt not judiciously, selected as the article that would command most votes. This failing, all fail. There may be those who deem it wise and well to admit Senators from the reconstructed States and force a verdict of guilty by their votes; but we cannot concur. It might have been well to defer the impeachment until those States should be represented in the Senate; but, having initiated it, we think it would not do to admit new Senators to vote upon it after the testimony was taken and the argument closed.

[From the New York World, dem.]

Wade's act in voting, and in voting "guilty," had two objects, and is marked by a double baseness. It was a vote, being judge, to profit by his judgment in getting a brief occupancy of the White House. It was also a vote to get the use of the White House patronage and power in order to force his own nomination as Vice-President upon the Chicago Convention. Now Grant is as certain that he will be the republican candidate for the Presidency as Wade was of being the candidate for the Vice Presidency if he could but occupy the White House till March, 1869. Therefore, Grant's vigorous and persistent efforts to consummate the political outrage of impeachment are no whit cleaner, no whit less base than Wade's in this latter regard. Wade, besides that peculiar infamy as a judge, which is all his own, conspired in a partisan assault upon the executive patronage and power in order to force upon his own party his own nomination as Vice-President. Grant industriously egged on the impeachers to consummate their outrage in order that the Executive patronage and power might be wielded to solidify the military despotism at the South, and by fraud and violence to force his own election upon the country as President.

[From the Richmond Dispatch.]

We do not believe the conviction of the President would alter much the fate of the South, and on that score we have felt no very great concern upon the subject. But his acquittal must gratify every candid and patriotic man, since it would be an indication that there remains yet in the land some feeling of respect for the constitution and a submission among a portion, at least, of the law-makers to the restraints it imposes—that there is yet some proper conception of the solemnity of an oath, and especially in the most eminent of all its phases, that is, faithfully to try a fellow-being upon the law and the testimony. These are, indeed, grateful indications; quite sufficient upon which to base the hope that there is recuperative energy sufficient still residing in the body politic to bring back the government within the boundaries of the constitution, and to re-establish order and security and equality among the States.

[From the Philadelphia Mercury.]

We have received the glorious news of the President's acquittal on the eleventh count of the indictment by a decisive constitutional vote. As this was the article on which the impeachers chiefly counted for conviction, and were, therefore, most willing to test their strength, it may fairly be conceded that the case is decided in favor of truth and justice, beyond any future contingencies. It is not necessary to commend the action of the democratic Senators. They voted, of course, for acquittal, as the charges against Mr. Johnson were not sustained either by law, or argument, or evidence. But especially public honor, universal popular esteem and applause are due the few republican Senators who voted against conviction in obedience to their conscientious views of duty, in defiance of threats and seductions never before experienced in judicial annals.

The Philadelphia Press, Forney's paper, thus insolently undertakes to repudiate and read out of the party the seven Republican Senators who had the manliness to vote for the acquittal of the President:

JOHNSON'S NEW RECRUITS.

With shame and mortification we detail the names of those Senators whose sudden and unexpected defection surrendered the Government for the coming year into the hands of a man whom the country has over and over again repudiated and condemned. Having left the army of the Union and gone over to Mr. Andrew Johnson's train band, we give them a place by themselves. Doubtless, after a week or two of thorough drilling, they will be able to manœuvre creditably with the veteran Democrats, falling in on the left:

FESSENDEN,	ROSS.
FOWLER,	TRUMBULL,
GRIMES,	VAN WINKLE.
HENDERSON,

Senator Fessenden's Argument.

The argument of Senator Fessenden, delivered on the impeachment question in the Senate, is in the highest and clearest style of the jurist. After considering other phases presented by the managers, he concludes:

To the suggestion that popular opinion demands the conviction of the President on these charges, I reply that he is not now on trial before the people, but before the Senate. In the words of Lord Eldon, upon the trial of the Queen, "I take no notice of what is passing out of doors, because I am supposed constitutionally not to be acquainted with it." And again, "It is the duty of those on whom a judicial task is imposed to meet reproach and not court popularity." The people have not heard the evidence as we have heard it. The responsibility is not on them, but upon us. They have not taken an oath to "do impartial justice according to the constitution and the laws." I have taken that oath. I cannot render judgment upon their convictions, nor can they transfer to themselves my punishment if I violate my own. And I should consider myself undeserving the confidence of that just, intelligent people who imposed upon me this great responsibility, and unworthy a place among honorable men, if, for any fear of public reprobation, and for the sake of securing popular favor, I should disregard the convictions of my judgment and my conscience.

The consequences which may follow, either from conviction or acquittal, are not for me, with my convictions, to consider. The future is in the hands of Him who made and governs the universe, and the fear that He will not govern it wisely and well would not excuse me for a violation of His law.

JUDGE TRUMBULL.—Concerning the late action of the above eminent jurist, the Chicago Tribune (rep.) has the following: "The gentlemen who demanded that Judge Trumbull should vote for conviction whether he believed Johnson guilty or not, ought rather to thank God that they have a Senator who dares to do his judicial duty as he understands it—one who has the high courage and manliness to go through the Red Sea of obloquy and odium for conscience sake. Whether they will find another after he is crucified may well be doubted. One thing is certain, the republican party not only cannot carry the next Presidential election on a verdict obtained by coercion and terrorism, but it cannot carry an election at any future time with such a record. Let it be well understood by the people that the republican party demand the conviction of Andrew Johnson, right or wrong, hit or miss, and there will be the devil to pay, and no pitch hot. Why, we ask, did not gentlemen make their unconditional demand upon the Senate before Senators had declared their views of the case? Why did they preach about an impartial trial beforehand?—Why did they fool each other with the idea that the impeachment was a trial? Why did they not declare then that the trial was intended to be a farce, a fraud, and a lie, instead of waiting till now?—Why did they not pass a resolution beforehand like this: Resolved, That Andrew Johnson must be convicted, whether guilty or not."

SENATOR WADE.—The New York Post, (republican,) referring to the vote on impeachment, says:

The only disgraceful vote cast on Saturday was that of Mr. Wade, who, with a reckless abandonment of decency and propriety, voted for conviction, and for his own elevation to the Presidency, when it was believed by himself and the other supporters of impeachment that conviction would be obtained by only a single vote. We shall be surprised if Mr. Wade's course in this matter does not drive him out of public life; it has certainly lost him the respect and confidence of all impartial minds.

PARTIZAN IMPUDENCE.—Geo. Wilkes, of the New York Spirit of the Times, impudently charges the Chief Justice with "devoting himself to the corruption of Senators;" and the Washington Chronicle charges a Senator who voted not guilty with corruption because "he was seen in conversation with a leading member of the whisky ring a few minutes before he went into the Senate on Saturday." That "whisky ring" is as likely to be on the guilty side as any other.

Pacific Guano Company's SOLUBLE
PACIFIC GUANO!
PRICE REDUCED TO $56.00 PER TON.

THE USE OF THIS GUANO in Maryland for several years for Corn, Tobacco and other Spring Crops, as well as for Wheat, has established its excellence. It possesses all the quickness of Peruvian Guano, with permanent qualities not possessed by that article.

Experience has shown that this Guano ripens the Wheat crop from five to six days earlier than the Super Phosphates. It also ripens Tobacco earlier, and produces a crop of better quality. The Pacific Guano Company has authorized the above reduction in consequence of the depressed condition of the farming interests in the Southern States. It is the purpose of the Company to furnish the best fertilizer at the lowest price, which they are able to do by reason of their large capital and facilities. The Guano is warranted same in quality as heretofore sold by us. For sale by dealers.
