THE NEW DEAL REGISTERS

The American people have spoken and by a majority unprecedented in the annals of American history, have delivered their decision that Franklin Delano Roosevelt shall The opposition was as stupid as it was vile,—which is indicontinue at the head of the Government for another four years. We join with the nation in congratulations for a victory that has been so soundly ratified by the American electorate and wish for President Roosevelt a continuation of the success which has marked the preceding three and one-half years during which time the country has been brought from the depths of depression back to the road of recovery and prosperity.

Never before in the history of the nation was a decision in national politics decided so definitely. The North and South, the East and West joined to make the decision almost unanimous. In fact, since the selection without a dissenting vote of George Washington to the presidency, Mr. Roosevelt's election in 1932 was the nearest approach to his smashing victory at the polls on Tuesday.

In the past, the American people have always exhibited a noble trait in that the enmity and malice, wrought by a campaign so fiercely waged as the one just past, are soon forgotten and the welfare of the Nation put above every- issues could have been made the basis of a sensible controthing else. Here in Cecil county as elsewhere in the country, the line of demarcation between the two parties and the two candidates, with their platforms and philosophies, was clearly drawn. It was a case of the New Deal against the Old Deal and the people registered overwhelmingly for the New Deal and President Roosevelt. And, while the fight was openly and honestly fought by the rural press, the same cannot be said of many of the great metropolitian dailies, especially ingly stooped to the lowest forms of vituperation and maliciousness and attempted to distort the issues at every turn of the game. Their dismal failure, however, is an indication that the people have at last realized the government, that send and others, subsidized by the G. O. P. to "split" the was stolen from them immediately after the Civil War, is Democratic vote; once more in their hands, and has been put there by that great and noble leader, Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

For the great Roosevelt victory in Maryland, despite the fact that his re-election was fought by the Baltimore Sun and the Hearst owned Baltimore News-Post, the people of the great Free State may feel justly proud. Too much credit cannot be given Senator George L. Radcliffe for the masterly on one of our greatest Americans, with which we will deal way in which the Maryland campaign was conducted. Unlike regular Federal-aid, this money need not be matched by the states, but is an outright grant by the Federal Government. There are two reasons for this: First, because the states are compelled in many instances to incur heavy expenses in acquiring property and in paying property damages in centers of population where grade crossings are eliminated, and, second, because the railroads furnish rightsof-way and valuable engineering assistance.

Uncle Sam stepped into the grade-crossing picture when a decision of the Supreme Court last spring threatened disruption of such forward progress as was being made through joint effort of the states and the railroads. The real effect! of the court's ruling was to shift a greater part of the cost of elimination onto the state and off the railroads, but state budgets were so strained by depression and relief needs that it was widely feared that removal of grade crossings might come to a virtual standstill in many sections.

THERE GOES MOLLISON

A blue streak with a wingspread of 13 hours, 18 minutes! That is the giddy apparition which swirls in the backwind of Jimmy Mollison's overnight jump from Harbor Grace to Croydon, his fourth and fastest flight across the Atlantic.

The log of the shiny blue Dorothy packs a thrill her pilot's breezy nonchalance belies. It was an unsatisfactory flight, says the British ace with the air of a fellow who misses the green lights on the way home to supper. Blinding snow and sleet flurries across open sea; a few spirals over Ireland to collect one's slightly scrambled bearings; then, Croyden, smack on the nose! These in brief are the high lights of the flight in which Captain Mollison sets two records: a new Atlantic speed mark, and the first successful completion of the long-sought London landing. Not bad at all for a chap who chides himself for loitering along the way!

AMERICA SPEAKS

(From the Philadelphia Record)

Democracy triumphs. The Republican party is destroyed,-by William Randolph Hearst's kiss of death.

greatest barrage of buncombe and hypocrisy to which it has ever been subjected,-and came through with flying colors. The American people have won for themselves the greatest victory in their political annals, a victory over the forces of entrenched greed which betrayed them and which fondly believed that, this year, they could delude the people

Elkton, Md. into betraying themselves. This country's greatest liberal leader since Abraham Lincoln is recognized and appreciated for his true worth by his fellow citizens.

That is the first flash significance of an overwhelming landslide re-election of President Roosevelt.

On the morning after election it is traditional for the newspapers which have supported the winning side to play "Hearts and Flowers" and say, "All is forgiven" to the brethern who have erred on the other side.

But in this instance we do not adhere to convention. This was the dirtiest campaign since Civil War days.

cated by the results.

Hearst has earned himself the title of Public Enemy No 1. He is a disciple of Hitler. He used Hitler's tactics in this campaign. He is not fit to run an American newspaper. "Contemptible" is a mild word to describe his personal attacks upon the President, and his attempt to make Communism the paramount issue of the campaign.

Hearst foisted the weakling Landon upon the Republican party. And what was left of the Republican party after 1932 was destroyed by this unholy alliance. But it is about time that we stopped allowing this national marplot to make a travesty of American political history.

This country needs two strong parties, conservative and liberal, to fight out rational issues. And there are many such issues which this campaign might have helped to solve,—whether relief should be financed nationally and administered locally, whether the budget should be balanced now or over a period of a decade,—these and a score of other versy between two schools of political philosophy.

Instead, we were subjected to the stupidest, most hypocritical, and in some cases diabolical barrage of propaganda with which the American public has ever been afflicted. And the men who are responsible for this campaign, led by the unspeakable Hearst, should be banished from any further influence in public affairs.

> Let's have some fun this weirdsome night, Give all the folks a fearful fright; They'll never know which way to turn Or if our antics they dare spurn. We'll move about with stealthy tread Until in sooth, they all have fled. As goblins big and knights as bold Will scurry here and there untold.

No chance there'll be for trusting souls To go abroad without just tolls Of shaking limbs and shattered nerves When they behold such grotesque curves. We'll mount their steps and ring their bells We'll rend the air with awful yells We'll hurl shelled corn 'gainst window pames And run amuck the darkest lanes.

No cat may cross, however black, Some lonely path, and then cross back, Nor must owls hoot their minor strain Unless the clock shall strike again. Some rampant witch will sling her broom To snag the spiders spinning loom Of glistening threads that reach the sky Beyond the moon when passing by.

We'll sing and dance in Elfish way, We'll walk and stalk and keep at bay All those who wish to find us out As we march on and face about. When lights grow dim some mystic power Will cast its spell upon the hour Of midnight, and our chosen queen-The spirit of All-Hallowe'en!
