ABIDE WITH ME.

Abide with me! fast falls the eventide,
The darkness deepens; Lord, with me abide;
When other helpers fail, and comforts flee,
Help of the helpless, oh abide with me.

Swift to its close ebbs out life's little day;
Earth's joys grow dim, its glories pass away;
Change and decay on all around I see;
O Thou who changest not, abide with me.

I need thy presence every passing hour;
What but thy grace can foil the tempter's power?
Who like Thyself, my guide and stay can be?
Through cloud and sunshine, Lord, abide with me.

I fear no foe, with Thee at hand to bless;
Ills have no weight, and tears no bitterness.
Where is death's sting? where, grave, thy victory?
I triumph still, if Thou abide with me.

Hold Thou Thy cross before my closing eyes;
Shine through the gloom and point me to the skies;
Heaven's morning breaks, and earth's vain shadows flee;
In life, in death, O Lord, abide with me.

I Wish I Had Capital.

So we heard a great strapping young man exclaim the other day. We did want to give him a piece of our mind so bad; and we'll just write to him. You want capital, do you? And suppose you had what you call capital? Haven't you hands and feet, muscle and bone, and don't you call them capital? What more capital did God give anybody? "Oh, but they are not money," say you. But they are more than money, and nobody can take them from you. Don't you know how to use them? If you don't it's time you were learning. Take hold of the plow, or hoe, or jackplane, or broadaxe, and go to work. Your capital will soon yield you a large interest. Aye, but there's the rub! You don't want to work; you want money on credit, so you may play gentleman and speculate, and end by playing the vagabond.

Or you want a plantation with plenty of hirelings upon it to do the work, while you run over the country and dissipate; or you want to marry some rich girl who may be foolish enough to take you for your good looks, that she may support you.

Shame on you, young man! Go to work with what capital you have, and you'll soon make interest enough upon it to give you as much money as you want, and make you feel like a man. If you can't make money on what capital you have, you could not make it if you had a million dollars in money. If you don't know how to use bone, muscle and brains, you would not know how to use gold. If you let the capital that you have lie idle, and waste and rust out, it would be the same thing if you had gold; you would only know how to waste it.

Then don't stand about idle, a great helpless child waiting for some one to come in and feed you, but go to work.—Take the first work you can find, no matter what it is so that you do it well. Yes, whatever you undertake, do it well; always do your best. If you manage your capital you already have, you will soon have plenty more to manage; but if you can't or won't manage the capital God has given you, you will never have any other to manage. Do you hear, young man?

GUARD AGAINST VULGAR LANGUAGE.—There is as much connection between the words and the thoughts as there is between the thoughts and actions. The latter is only the expression of the former, but they have a power to react upon the soul, and leave the stain of corruption there. A young man who allows himself to use one vulgar or profane word has not only shown there is a foul spot upon his mind, but by the utterance of that word he extends that spot and inflames it, till by indulgence it will pollute and ruin the soul. Be careful of your words as of your thoughts. If you can control the tongue so that no improper words are pronounced by it, you will soon be able also to control the mind and save it from corruption.—You extinguish the fire by smothering it, or by preventing bad thoughts bursting into language. Never utter a word anywhere which you would be ashamed to speak in the presence of the most refined female or the most religious man. Try this practice a little while, and you will soon have command of yourself.

DID it ever occur to you, says the Liberal Christian, that the most beautiful scenery is off the great thoroughfares and lines of travel, hid, as it were, in out-of-the-way places? It would almost seem that the Creator had scattered abroad only those common and garish splendors of sky and landscape which the common eye could appreciate; but packed away in nooks and corners, sheltered ravines and mountain tops, those richer and finer beauties which it requires a poetic or cultivated mind to perceive and enjoy. So, did you never notice that there are out-of-the-way people in the world, whose names do not figure in the public prints and are not down in the guide-books, but who, nevertheless, are so full of beauty, wisdom, refinement, and virtue that we count friendship a special privilege, and keep the anniversary of our acquaintance with them with religious sacredness, and wonder that the dull multitudes have never found them out and made pilgrimages to their firesides as to holy shrines? How vulgar and cheap seem the notorieties of the street and market and platform beside the out-of-the-way and unknown worthies of the earth!

WHEN a lady indulges a yawn or two, gentlemen are justified in guessing their hat is needed on their heads, and that the best side of the door is the outside.

YOUNG men anxious to get rid of their wild oats would do well to get a sewing-machine.

ONLY gross and vulgar minds pay a higher respect to wealth than to talent.

A Machine to Husk Corn.

At the New York State Agricultural Fair a machine to husk corn was exhibited, which is thus described by the New York Express:

At this fair, for the first time, we find a perfect practical machine for picking and husking corn; operations which, it has ever been thought, were beyond human ingenuity and forethought to perform in any other way than by the primitive, yet still continued, hand process. But the apparatus here alluded to does the whole work, not only ten times more expeditiously, but much more effectively than it is usually done by hand, and at the same time leaves the fodder husks in a much more desirable condition for the purposes desired; indeed, the machine would be valuable, if only the two last points mentioned were effected by it.

In outward appearance the machine is not unlike an old fashioned, flat-top fanning mill. At one end, above the top, is a pair of rollers revolving by gear wheels, to which is attached the pully for the power. At the inner side of the roller are two knives, between which the corn stalks pass. The latter, just as cut from the hill, are laid on the feeding table, and the butt ends are received between the knives and are drawn through the rollers. As the ears come in contact with the knives they are wrenched off, and falling into the hopper are passed down an inclined plane, furnished with rubbers, which revolve as they pass down, and they remove every vestige of husk and silk, leaving the unshelled ear ready for the crib. There are no drawbacks in the whole operation, no incompleteness in the machine in any particular, and no improvements wanted; it seems perfection throughout. It husks small ears and large ears, green or ripe corn, even the smallest nubings, and always does the work well; never fails in removing stalk, husk and silk, never shells, scratches or injures the grains. But this is not all; as the stalk passes down the rollers every joint and hard spot is crushed, and the fodder which passes out in front will be consumed up as clean by the cattle as if it was clover or timothy hay.

OF all the mean, despicable characters that afflict society, none is more despicable than the tattler and retailer of petty scandal There are crawling vermin of this kind in every community—men and women—whose foreheads ought to be branded, so that they might be shunned by all decent people. Their scandalous whisperings generally run to alleged cases of crim. con. and over such they gloat, rolling them as sweet morsels under their tongues. It is a scripture aphorism, as true as anything within the lids of the Bible, that "out of the fullness of the heart the mouth speaketh," and the man or woman whose tongue runs upon such subjects advertises the world, or all who hear them, that they are corrupt themselves, and that their own virtue, if they have any, is not above price. This may be taken as an infallible rule; and the scandal-monger, whether man or woman, should be shunned and despised by all who would avoid moral pollution.

SOME poet made out a list of no less than forty signs of rain as an excuse for not going on an excursion with a friend, once upon a time. It is very certain that the sensibility of many animals and plants to the condition of the atmosphere will often indicate with certainty approaching changes in the weather. When a storm is pending, the spider shortens the thread of his web, and lengthens it again when the storm is about to pass off. The swallow is also an infallible barometer, flying low, almost touching the earth, and uttering a low, plaintive cry before rain, but sailing back and forth high in the air during settled weather. The goose manifests great uneasiness before rain, plunging into the water, and rapidly returning to the land. The chirp of the cricket is a sign of fair weather, but the cry of the tree-toad indicates rain. When the air is overcharged with moisture the odor of flowers is strong and penetrating, and in dry weather is soft and agreeable.

REMEDY FOR A BONE FELON.—We have been handed the following remedy for this painful affliction. The gentleman who handed it to us has tested its efficacy with success: As soon as the pulsation that indicates the disease is felt, put directly over the spot a fly blister about the size of a five cent piece, and keep it on for six or eight hours, at the expiration of which time, directly under the surface of the blister, will be found the felon, easily taken out with the point of a lance or needle.—Charleston Courier.

SAW HIS NOSE.—"Well," said a carpenter, "of all the saws I ever saw, I never saw a saw saw as that saw saws." He probably is a cousin to the man who knows his nose; I know he knows his nose; he said he knew his nose; and if he said I knew he knew his nose, of course he knows I know he knows his nose.

ONE of the richest specimens of Irish bull which has ever fallen under our notice was perpetrated by the clever and witty, but blundering Irish knight, Sir Richard Steel, when inviting a certain English nobleman to visit him. "If, sir," said he, "you ever come within a mile of my house, I hope you will stop there!"

A LOVER who was slighted by the ladies, very modestly asked one if she would let him spend the evening with her. 'No,' she angrily replied, "that's what I won't." "You needn't be so fussy about it," replied he, "I didn't mean this evening, but some stormy one when I can't go anywhere else."

The Boston Journal says that "some clergymen deal in rhetoric; some in logic; and some in common sense. The first are popular with most ladies, the second with most men, and the third with an uncommonly few of either sex."

LORENZO DOW, the renowned itinerant preacher, once said of a grasping, avaricious farmer, that if he had the whole world enclosed in a single field, he would not be content without a patch of ground outside for potatoes.

A RICH MAN who was injured by being run over, exclaimed, with emphasis, "It isn't the accident that I mind; that isn't the thing—but the idea of being run over by an old swill cart; that's what makes me mad."
