TRADE MARK

WILBUR W. HUBBARD'S FERTILIZERS

MUST HAVE

Superior quality and absolute Uniformity and Purity. This spring makes their 6th season in business and their trade has increased each year in spite of competition, their sales for the past year having been larger than ever before. Can the sales of an inferior article constantly increase all these years?

Our fertilizers are not better than all others, but they have been, and we are willing for you to try them in competition with any goods on the market.

WE PRESUME

you are now thinking about Asparagus, Corn, Potatoes, Peach Trees and top dressing your hay. Well we have the goods to apply and at all right prices.

BUT FOR TOMATOES

Everybody knows that our Peerless is the goods to use on them, for it has quality and is made of the very best materials known to the trade and one ingredient we use in it is the only phospate that contains this article outside of France where it has been used so successfully in tomato and truck fertilizer.

Mr. Jas. F. David of Smyrna says he grew with it last year the finest tomatoes he ever saw grow he picked a basket that weighed 1½ lbs. each. He grew onions that measured 13 inches in circumference. He grew corn some stalks 13½ feet high and ears 14 inches long. The late Captain Emory grew on one occasion 17 tons per acre. Mr. Zac T. Gilbert grew 19 tons to the acre. Mr. G. W. Collins has bought as high as 50 tons per year, and his men grew from 12 to 15 tons per acre. We have sold already in Anne Arundel county, the lower counties and New Jersey, hundreds of tons. Messrs. Baker and Morgan have bought as high as twelve hundred dollars worth; Captain Dashiel says he would have it if he had to give $50.00 per ton for same. Mr. Joseph Downey says when he was canning that he could actually tell the difference in tomatoes grown with Peerless when brought to his cannery. Mr. Numsen says he knows that tomatoes grown with our goods are fine. Mr. Frank Moore, who runs Assaw Balus & Co's cannery, says the best tomatoes brought there are from Peerless. Mr. Loose, a customer of his, says a ton of Peerless grew him $96.00 worth more tomatoes than another goods costing $7.00 less per ton. Mr. Money says it is certainly good. We could go on, but with a testimonial will close.

Unsolicited some time ago Mr. J. W. Elburn & Son came in our office and said: "I believe your Peerless to be the best tomato goods I ever saw. You remember what an advocate I was of it when I lived out at the mill. Well, wherever I have lived since, on the Western Shore or elsewhere, I would have it, and last year I put some of this same goods on some onions grown from the seed, and they were as fine as Burmudas. Many measured 4 inches in diameter, and I grew over 600 bushels per acre, or at rates of 1162 baskets. I used it on strawberries and picked 8000 quarts per acre."

JOHN BARTLEY, Chestertown, Md.

WILE AND WIT WIN A WIFE

"And so you want me to consent to your making Helen your wife." The speaker was Henry Norcross, one of the millionaire manipulators of finance in New York, and the scene was in his private office. The only other person present was Carl Loraine, for some years the confidential secretary of Mr. Norcross and now a suitor for the hand of his employer's only daughter.

"No, Carl, I don't think I can give my consent," continued the broker. "But sit down and we will talk it over. Now why should I give my daughter to you?"

The question was unexpected and was capable of but one answer.

"Well, sir, I love Helen and she says she returns my affection, but will only marry with her father's consent."

"Good girl," chuckled the old man.

"I think," continued Carl, "that my habits are good, and the chief objection I can see is my lack of wealth. I am certain that I have endeavored to be faithful to my duties."

After a moment's pause, Mr. Norcross said: "Carl, I am going to explain more fully how I feel about this matter. When I was your age I had no more money than you had, and I lacked the education which has been given you. As you say, you are faithful and of good habits, but I want more than that for my daughter, I have money enough, and when I die it will all go to Helen. For Helen's husband I want a man who will be able to handle this property wisely. I have made my money by my wits, while you are to-day no better off than you were three years ago, except from the meager amount you have saved from the liberal salary I show you. I have seen this feeling growing between you and Helen, and have hoped to see you wake up. I cannot consent to an engagement, but will make an agreement with you. If within the next three months you succeed in making a thousand dollars by the shrewd use of your wits, I will consent to your marriage of Helen."

Noting the young man's look of discouragement at this, the old man continued: "Do you remember how last week I made $8000 from my brother by learning that he had sold short on C. and Q., then buying up all I could find on the market and selling to him at a large advance? He is my brother, and if he was in trouble my money is his, but in a business transaction I will catch him if possible. Keep your eyes open and your wits on the alert, and I sincerely wish you success."

Ten weeks of the three months had gone by and the one thousand dollars seemed as far away as ever. Mr. Norcross was in his office, preparing to attend an important meeting of the S. and M. railroad. He had stepped into a brick vault that had been built in the rear of his office in order to get a bundle of papers that would give him control of the railroad and permit him to dictate its policy—to his own advantage, of course.

Just as he stepped insids the vault, a gust of wind swung the door to and the spring lock held it fast. A small barred window prevented any possibility of suffocation, and in a half laughing tone the broker called for Carl to open the door.

A daring thought came to the young man and he rose to the occasion.

"I'm afraid I have forgotten the combination," he said. What the old man said was to the point, but profane. When he quieted off a trifle, the young man said: "I think a check for a thousand might set my wits to working."

Again the violent language flowed through the open window, until the young man reminded Mr. Norcross that the board meeting would be called in twenty minutes. After a pause, a question floated through the window. "Shall I put the name of Carl Loraine on that check?"

"If you please," was the polite reply. The check fluttered out through the window and in a moment the door was opened.

Furious at the trick, Mr. Norcross stopped long enough to say, "That was rascality, not the exercise of our wits."

"One moment," replied the young man "Speaking of wits, you forget that a key is hanging inside the vault, to be used in just such an emergency as this. I presume your wits failed to work promptly this time."

As the humor of the situation dawned on the irate broker, he smiled grimly, and in spite of his great haste, he paused long enough to say, "You'll do. I think you will find Helen at home this evening."

FEEL RUN DOWN.

Many people do in Spring. Perhaps it is the reaction from the winter manner of living. But, whatever the cause, it is an unpleasant condition, unfitting its victims for the activities of life—the proper enjoyment of life itself, in fact. A simple, altogether unobjectionable remedy, well caculated, according to physicians, to restore the lost tone and vitality to the run-down system, is composed of ½ oz. Fluid Extract of Buchu, 1 oz. Bulso Mixture, ½ oz. Fluid Extract Gentian Compound and 15 ozs. water. These ingredients are obtainable at small expense at any good drug store and may be combined by the pharmacist or at home as desired. The dose is one tablespoonful three times a day, before meals. The preparation is said to be one of the best Spring tonics known to medical men.—X
