A PERILOUS LEAP.

Frank Thorne Jumps from the top of an Elevator.

[From the Buffalo Courier, August 4.]

With that avidity with which people invariably hasten to see one of their own number peril his life or limb, an immense throng congregated in the vicinity of Watson's elevator, to see Frank Thorne make his advertised leap from the top of the building yesterday afternoon. Every inch of eligible dock was occupied.

Males and females of all ages, sizes and social standing, mixed in together for the half hour or so, and so intense was the excitement that caste was for the moment forgotten, and everybody carried on a neighborly conversation with everybody else as to the probabilities of the result of the leap.

Five o'clock was the hour named for the jump, and at a quarter to five the patiently waiting crowd had the satisfaction of seeing Thorne make his appearance from the roof of the elevator. He was accompanied by his friend, Joseph Pope, and as the two advanced to the edge of the roof and looked over down into the water beneath, the spectators felt their flesh creep and their limbs shake as they thought of a human being throwing himself from that dangerous height. But neither Thorne nor his companion seemed to experience any fear, for they surveyed the situation very coolly for a few moments, and then the "jumpist" retired to prepare himself for the leap. The assistants meanwhile fixed a short board over the edge of the cornice, so as to allow Thorne a standing place clear of the elevator.

"There he is! there he is! passed from lip to lip as the daring young man reappeared on the roof attired only with a red flannel breech-clout and a pair of light calf-skin boots. He had intended to use a pair of sandals with wedge-shaped souls, but the boy who was to bring them over failed to make his appearance on time. A few minutes after five o'cl'k, and after sitting awhile to thoroughly compose himself for the perilous adventure, Thorne stepped out upon the frail platform and advanced to its utmost edge. It being too springy for safety, he stepped back to the roof and had the board drawn in slightly. Then again mounting it he twice waved his hand to the people so anxiously and nervously watching him, and then sprang out into the air.—The leap was fairly made, and for about a quarter of the distance down he descended in very nearly an erect position; but half way down, to the horror of the spectators, he gradually turned forward, and at last struck the water upon his right side, with a tremendous and horrifying concussion, the descent occupying, as timed by Mr. Pope, 4½ seconds. When the manner of his striking the water, and the awful detonation produced, became apparent to the senses of the multitude, a sickening shudder passed through them and a cry of terror arose; strong men blanched pale as death, and women shrieked and fainted. Not one who witnessed the scene but who thought Frank Thorne was a lost man. A rush of boats immediately took place toward the spot where he went down. For a few seconds the surface of the water was calm and unruffled. The people said, "he will never come up again." But just as Steve Barret was proceeding to strip off his shirt for a dive the water was disturbed and the rash adventurer appeared again to to view. The police boats instantly made a start for him, but Steve was in advance, and as Thorne by three strokes neared he seized him about the neck, and with assistance dragged him into the boat. Doctor Phelps jumped in from the police boat, and Barrett then rowed round to the landing place at the elevator entrance. There they lifted him to the wharf, and he walked up the steps and into the elevator, but then immediately fell to the floor powerless, and dripping with his blood, which the shock had forced out through the skin of his right side, arm and thighs, the left leg having apparently been advanced a little in front of the other as he struck.

The shock to Thorne's system was indeed a terrible one; he was partly unconscious and his pulse for the first hour almost imperceptible—at times quite so.—He complained of pain in his chest, and eventually commenced coughing up blood. During this first hour Dr. Phelps thinks he was very near to death, his more than ordinary vitality alone preserving him.—He is believed to have received no severe internal injuries, the raising of blood being caused by the rupture of the small capillaries of the lungs.

Still his condition is most painful and unpleasant. He will probably be a long time in recovering his usual health, and his condition will likely be such as to render his proposed suicidal leap at Niagara Falls on the 13th an impossibility.—The distance from the roof from which he jumped to the level of the water is 145 feet by actual measurement.

THE MASSACRE OF THE FRENCH MISSIONARIES AT TIENTSIN.—Unfortunately the rumored massacre of the French consul and members of the Roman Catholic establishment at Tientsin, in China, is now fully confirmed. The Russian government has received a telegram, dated Klachta, July, 6, in which it is stated that on the 21st of June the Chinese populace at Tientsin rose against the Roman Catholic missionaries and murdered not only the priests and sisters of charity residing in the town, but also the French consul, his secretary, two French merchants and their wives, and two young Russians. Not content with wreaking their fury on these unhappy persons, the mob burnt the French consulate, the Roman Catholic church and the hospital of the sisters. Of the cause that led to this outbreak we know nothing as yet.—One thing, however, is certain, and that is that the fury of the mob was directed only against members of the Roman Catholic religion, and notably the priests. The two Russians were probably murdered in mistake for Frenchmen.—London Globe.

THE English mails just received note the most active preparations for war in all parts of Great Britain.

ALL the States except New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Oregon will hold elections this fall.

Hon. Wm. H. Seward has left home for a visit to China and Japan.

DEATH OF A REMARKABLE MAN.—Thomas McCreary died at Elkton, on Saturday night-week, at an advanced age. McCreary was a man of iron nerve and lion heart. He had many adventures in Pennsylvania in arresting runaway slaves, and made many hair-breadth escapes.—He was several times waylaid and fired upon by parties in ambush, and had a desperate encounter at Chestnut Level with seven men, who undertook to arrest him in a bar-room of the hotel at that place, in the winter of 1852, we think it was. With his revolver and bowie-knife he caused his assailants to beat a hasty retreat, having cut the whiskers off the leader of the band by a ball fired through the bottom of a windsor chair, which the man held up between McCreary and himself, as he advanced upon him to make the arrest. After the encounter McCreary thought it prudent to make a hasty retreat, which he did, lest the party might return reinforced. A requisition was at one time made for him by the Governor of Pennsylvania upon the Governor of Maryland, on the charge of kidnapping, but an investigation showed that the charge was groundless. McCreary though charged with the offence, was above anything of the kind. He was bold and adventurous, even to rashness, in arresting runaway slaves, but would disturb no one known to be free. He had a number of broad-brimmed Quakers in Chester and Lancaster counties in his pay, who used to come stealthily to his domicil in Elkton in the small hours of the night, and furnish him with information as to the hiding places of parties of whom he was in quest. The protracted trial in Baltimore, which terminated in the release of two young girls, alleged to be slaves of Mrs. Schofield, of that city, whom he arrested in Chester county, was followed by a tragedy which created great excitement at the time. A man named Miller, one of the witnesses to prove the girls free, had so compromised himself by acting in the interest of both parties that he hung himself at Stemmer's Run to a tree, leaving the cars for the purpose at night while he was on his way home from Baltimore. It was alleged in Pennsylvania that a band of Baltimore roughs followed him, seized him at Stemmer's Run and committed the foul deed. It was also alleged that McCreary hung him, but the truth of the matter was that the man was in terror of his neighbors lest they should discover his true relations to the case which stirred up such excitement in his neighborhood. We had this explanation of the affair from McCreary's own lips, and have no reason to doubt its truth. In the latter part of his days he lived a quiet and unobtrusive life, and was for a number of years sexton of Trinity Church, Elkton, the duties of which office he discharged much to the satisfaction of the vestry and of the congregation.—Delaware Transcript.

THE RESULT IN NORTH CAROLINA.—The election in North Carolina resulted in a conservative triumph, and hardly any honest man will regret that such highhandedness as Governor Holden, has practiced has been signally rebuked by the people of that plundered State. A majority of the Legislature and four at least out of seven Congressmen have been secured by the conservatives. The conservative candidate for attorney general has also been elected by a handsome majority. The New York Times thus moralizes upon it:

"It seems certain that the anticipations of riot and bloodshed, which were Gov. Holden's pretext for invoking the presence of Federal troops, were not realized. And it seems at least probable that, notwithstanding Holden's extraordinary efforts—we might almost say in consequence of these efforts—the gains have been on the side of the democracy. There is a possibility of managing election matters a little too much."

It is known in addition that capitalists and moneyed men generally were disgusted with the reckless manner in which the Legislature of the State trifled with the public credit by passing all sorts of corrupt railroad grants, &c., until the bonds fell to less than thirty cents (one class now selling at only twenty-four cents) on the dollar. The credit of the State before the war was very good. When we remember that the debt has been enormously increased since then, with little or nothing to show for it, a domestic revolution is hardly to be wondered at. It is ignorance and rascality that has been defeated. All this only shows the necessity of a constitutional prohibition of State aid to railways, &c. If new roads are really needed capital can generally be found to build them.

MARRIAGE OF A WHITE SENATOR TO A COLORED BRIDE.—Jackson, Miss., Aug. 4.—An unusual event occurred here last night, in the marriage of Hon. A. T. Morgan (white,) a Republican Senator in the Mississippi Legislature, to Miss Highgate (colored.) The ceremony was performed by a colored minister, and the couple left for Cleveland, Ohio, Morgan's former home, via Louisville. The affair naturally creates a sensation in the community. Morgan is a lawyer, and was colonel of a Michigan regiment during the rebellion. The bride is of a decidedly dusky hue.

THE VICTORIOUS PRINCE.—The Crown Prince of Prussia, Frederick William, who fought Marshal McMahon at Weissenburg, is now in his 39th year. He married the Princess Royal of England, and his eldest son, a young warrior of eleven years, holds several commissions in the Prussian army. We do not read, however, that this princely child picked up any bullets on the banks of the Lauter, or that the veteran soldiers paused in the fight to weep at his intrepidity. Probably if the Crown Prince had seen the dispatch about "Louis and I" from Saarbrucken, he might have made his bulletin to the Queen much better.

PRUSSIAN TACTICS.—Gen. Von Moltke persists in violating all the rules of war and in disregarding the maxims of the uncle of the French Emperor. He has done at Haguenau precisely what he did at Sadowa—divided his army in the face of the enemy and gone into battle to fight his way to a concentration at a point behind the enemy's line. Military critics will doubtless pronounce it a hazardous undertaking, but at present advices it appears to have been an eminently successful one.

Sinking Slowly.

Diseases that progress rapidly to a crises are not the only ones to be dreaded. Canker or dry rot does not blast a tree as suddenly as a stroke of lightning, but unless arrested, it destroys it as certainly; in like manner chronic debility, although it does not kill with the swiftness of yellow fever, is as sure to sap the springs of life eventually as any acute disease, if not checked by invigorating medication.—There is something inexpressibly touching in the spectacle of premature decay. Langour, pallor, emaciation, depression of spirits, and a distate for exertion, are its ordinary symptons, and they should be promptly met by tonic treatment. The best invigorant and exhilerant that can be administered in a case of this kind is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The stimulating principle of the preparation rouses the dormant energies of the system, and the strengthening and regulating properties give a permanent and healthful impulse to the vital forces thus brought into play. The failing appetite is re-awakened, the process of digestion and assimilation are quickened, the quality of the blood is improved, the secretions become more natural, and every organ that contributes to the nourishment of the body undergoes salutary change. By these means the repair of the physical structure is effected and its health and vigor restored. In no class of diseases has the beneficent operation of the Bitters been more marked and striking than in those characterized by general debility and nervous prostration. Ladies affected with these ailments find in this most wholsome of all tonics and correctives the safest and surest means of relief.—It is strong to restore and powerless to injure. Such is the uniform testimony of "clouds of witnesses."

COUGHS, SORE THROAT, ETC.

No Medicine or Treatment can excel the Powerful Curative Power of

DR. SIMMS' WHITE PULMONIC BALSAM.

It cures with a rapidity unequalled by any other remedy offered for Throat and Lung diseases. It is recommended by over 2,000 persons in Wilmington, and hundreds in Philadelphia, Baltimore and other cities and communities throughout the country. Mr. Pennington, of Wilmington, Illinois, writes that there is not (with a few exceptions) a family in that city who will be without it if possible to procure it. Such is its popularity wherever it is known—and this popularity arises from the fact that it universally cures all who use it. There is no case of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, Blood Spitting, Hoarseness, and even Pulmonary Consumption, where the system is not broken down with the wear of the disease, or pretended medicine, or inexperienced advice, that this Balsam will not cure if carefully used, according to directions. We guarantee it all we represent it to be, and invite a trial from the afflicted everywhere. Price, 50 cents, medium size, and $1 for large size bottles. Prepared only by
