LARGE COB CORN.

There can be no question that the large cob, [illegible] corn such as is grown on the Brandywine hills and other of the strong soils of Chester county, is by far the most productive variety of Indian corn known. We see it doubted in various quarters of the country, that such crops of corn as we occasionally raise here, have ever been grown, and yet there is no more doubt of from one hundred to one hundred and twenty bushels of shelled corn per acre having been frequently grown in this section, than there is of corn being grown at all. We were told some years ago, by a prominent member of the Society of Friends, who was traveling with another on religious service in the northern part of New York State, where the winters were very long, and the old Dutton corn, growing five feet high, the variety usually planted, that in sitting around the stove of an evening, he accidentally mentioned to his host, "that in his part of the country (he was from this section,) a man on horse-back could ride into the middle of a corn field, and a person outside could see neither man nor horse." The resident of that country remarked, that such tales as that would destory any man's character for veracity in his neighborhood, but as the statement had however, been made, (although it was just after supper,) he thought "the best thing under the circumstances was for them all to go to bed," and try and forget what had passed.

It is common to say about these big corn crops, that acres are measured very large and bushels very small, but we know personally of one case where the following sure test (and there can be better,) was applied: The ground was measured by a regular surveyor, who made an affidavit to its correctness. The corn was sold in the ear by the barrel, one barrel being shelled and one measured. The grower of the corn hauled and delivered to one party, a grain dealer, and put the money in his pocket, for 125 bushels per acre, average over the whole field of, if we recollect right, some 8 to 9 acres.

Several crops were raised in Chester county this past season, of 100 to 120 bushels shelled corn per acre.

This large cob corn, of course, has a large number of grains. We have none by us to count these, but one of our friends lately counted the grains on a single ear, and found them 1220. Another found many of his ears numbered 1400 grains, measured 15 inches in length, and the stalks, one foot above the ground, were four inches in circumference. This is not uncommon. A fair comparison, showing the productiveness of the variety, may be made by any one counting the grains on any ear of the 8 to 10 or 12 rowed corn, either white or yellow.

We have had sections of corn stalks in our office measuring four inches in circumference, and we have seen them over sixteen feet high. They often bear two large ears each.

The large cob or Gourd seed corn requires strong soil, and it is folly to attempt to grow it elsewhere. It also generally requires the whole growing season. We have known it, but very rarely, to be caught by a premature frost, in Sept.

The premium crop, being the best acre of corn competed for last season, among the members of the Brandywine Farmer's Club in Chester county, was awarded by the committee to David H. Branson.—They husked and weighed the corn and found by actual measurement 8,823 lbs., equal to 127 bushels 33 2-5 lbs. allowing 70 lbs. to the bushel.—Practical Farmer.

What is High Farming?

It is a system of tillage and farm management that is self-sustaining—a system that takes nothing but the bare land, the domestic animals, the farm implements, and machinery, and cultivates the soil, sustains the family and the animals, pay the annual taxes, defrays the expenses incident to the improvements that must be made on the farm, cancels the annual interest on the money invested in the land, eventually pays for the land; all from the products of the soil cultivated; and one, two, or three decades of years leaves every acre in a far better state of fertility than the soil was in at the beginning. This is high farming. There are untold numbers of quiet, unobtrusive tillers of the soil in many of our States, who have commenced precisely as we have indicated, without one dollar of cash capital; who have had no revenue whatever besides the national resources of their cultivated fields, and who have by hard work and judicious management, sustained their families, paid for their land, erected all their buildings, paid for all their valuable improvements, and at the same time brought their land up to that state of productiveness, by their judicious management, that every acre now yields from two to three tons of hay where only one was originally gathered, and they harvest nearly two bushels—in many instances more than two—of cereal grain where the product was but one bushel. That is high farming.—Yet such a system of husbandry is usually sneered at simply because the proprietor knew how to save his money to defray the expenses of improvements, rather than spend three times more than he made.

How the Indians Catch Eagles.

The son of a physician of Dubuque, who is now stationed at Fort Buford, Dacotah Territory, has written a long letter to his father giving some interesting items with regard to Indians. An extract is appended.

The camp of Indians which we visited were chiefly engaged in catching war eagles to make head dresses. They have a wooden lodge built in their camp where the medicine ceremony necessary to catch is performed. No woman is allowed to enter the lodge. They can come to the door and hand in provisions, but must not cross the threshold. You are not allowed to spit on the floor, and must sit in a certain portion of the lodge. You must enter and pass out at the north door.—Wash and I were let in to see the ceremonies.

"When a man goes to trap the eagles, he first goes to the medicine lodge, and is not allowed to go to sleep until midnight; he then eats a little and sleeps until the morning star rises. He with his comrades, then go out to the traps without food or drink, and sit all day in the traps watching for the eagles. At night they return and enter the medicine lodge, and at midnight only do they eat and drink, and break their long fast of twenty-four hours' duration. They then are allowed to sleep until dawn, when they go out again, and stay four days during which time they have eat and drank four times and have never entered their own lodges or spoken to their friends, unles such as may be trapping with them. After the four days are up, they go back to their own lodges, bathe, tired and sleepy, and sleep and eat and bathe four days until they feel able to try another four days' trapping excursion. The eagles are brought alive into the camp, and, after some ceremony, the tails are pulled out and they are let go to grow another tail for next year.—The trap consists of a hole in ground covered with sticks and grass. A dead rabbit, fox or prairie chicken is tied to the top; the eagle swoops down and fastens his claws into it and tries to fly away with it, but the Indian (who is concealed in the hole) puts out his hand and catches the eagle by both legs, hauls him into the hole and ties him. He then fixes the top of the trap and waits for another eagle. We saw one man there who had caught six eagles in one day in this way.

They say if they do not fast and do their medicine properly the eagle will get one of his claws loose and tear their hands. Some have had their hands ruined forever in this way. If a man does not catch an eagle during the day he is obliged to moan and cry all night; we could hardly sleep with the noise made at night by the unsuccessful hunters.

THE EUREKA FANNING MILL.

THE GREATEST INVENTION OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY!

Farmers Look to Your Interest!

THE attention of Farmers and Mechanics is particularly directed to the combined economy, utility and practicability of the Eureka Mill, and to the many other advantages it possesses over every other Fanning Mill which has been introduced to the public.

It is the fruit of long and patient investigation by the inventor, who has made it his constant study for over twenty years. He has secured several patents for Mills, and has always been rewarded with the best of success. But not feeling satisfied with his former attainments, he determined to reach the climax, and he now believes that his new invention will warrant him in exclaiming in the joy of his heart, like the philosopher, Phythagoras—EUREKA!—signifying in the Grecian language, "I have found it." This has given the name to this new Mill.

In this Mill are all the former improvements to which have been added several more, adding still greater advantages than were at first anticipated, or even thought possible by the inventor himself. It embraces the three great essentials necessary in every invention:

It combines ECONOMY, UTILITY and PRACTICABILITY!

THE "EUREKA" MILL

Is small and lighter, and is capable of doing more and better work in a given time than any other Mill ever invented.

IT IS THE ONLY MILL

that will successfully remove from wheat all such pests as Cockle, Garlic, Oats, Rye, &c.

Should an extra quality of grain for seed or gristing purposes be required, it can be so arranged as to catch in one box perfect grain, and in the other, grain fit for market or mill. Here is made a great saving usually lost sight of: for nearly one quarter of the grain cleaned in the common Mills is lost when sown, on account of shrunken kernels and inferior grain. The Eureka Mill saves all this, and gives seed every kernel of which will grow when put into the ground, and this saving will, in a short time, pay for the Mill.

HINES & BURCHINAL,
Chestertown, Maryland,

Owners of the Mill, are having them manufactured at the Sash Factory and Planing Mill of Noland & Co., Port Deposit, Md., which is a guarantee that they will be put up in the best manner. je17-tf.
