FARMERS' DEPARTMENT

"He who by the plow would thrive,
Himself must either hold or drive."

Why did Clover Grow Where Brush was Burned?

A correspondent of the New England Farmer writes as follows:

"Why does wood ashes cause clover to spring up where none has grown before? A few years ago I burned some brush that I had cut on the margin of the field. This brush I burned on a spot where nothing but spear grass had grown for a great many years. The next year there sprang up a splendid plot of clover where I burned the brush. Where did the seed come from? If it was in the ground, why did it not germinate before?"

The following is the editor's reply:

Are you prepared to defend the assertion made in your first question? Can you prove that clover had never grown on those spots where wood ashes caused it to spring up! If you can, you are able to do more than all the scientific men in the world have been able to do, and those who hold to the spontaneous production of plants will, we presume, be willing to pay you well for your trouble in settling in their favor a long disputed question.

The common opinion, we suppose to be, that clover, and other plants and trees, that spring up under circumstances similar to the growth of your clover, come from seed in the ground, which is preserved there by some process of nature not well understood. From experiments that have been made, most kinds of seeds kept in the ordinary way lost vitality in from three to twelve years—a few kinds being found to grow after somewhat longer periods.

But most scientific men believe that seeds buried in the ground preserve their vitality for hundreds and even thousands of years.

Mr. Marsh, in his learned work entitled "Man and Nature," says the vitality of seeds "seems almost imperishable while they remain in the situation in which nature deposits them." He gives many instances in which one crop of plants had disappeared on a change of conditions, and another, of different nature, had promptly assumed its place, originating evidently from seeds pre-existing for ages in the soil.

In a book entitled "Sketches of Creation," by Prof. Winchell, of the University of Michigan, recently published, there is a chapter on the vitality of buried vegetable germs, which fully corroborates the views expressed by Mr. Marsh. The writer alluded to the facts that on removing a pine forest, hard wood often succeeds, and vice versa, that earth thrown out of wells sends up a ready crop of weeds, and, not unfrequently, of species previously unknown; that on breaking up a sod of grass land, after any number of years, a crop of annual weeds will immediately resume possession; that a dressing of raw muck develops sorrel; and to a great many similar facts. He also cites the fact, as an authenticated one, that some well diggers in a town on the Penobscot river, in Maine, about forty miles from the sea, came, at the depth of about twenty feet, upon a stratum of sand. No such sand was to be found in the neighborhood and none like it was known nearer than the sea forty miles away. It was saved and piled up by itself and on the completion of the well it was spread about the spot on which it had been placed.—As some peculiar plants soon showed themselves they were protected out of curiosity, and on growing up they were ascertained to be beach-plum trees, and actually bore the beach-plum, which had never been seen except immediately upon the seashore. Now, geologists and other scientific men suppose that the seeds from which these shrubs grew were deposited in this sand when that part of the State was the shore of the slowly receding sea; a period anterior perhaps to the creation of man.

Well known instances of the preservation of wood in water and swamps are cited as confirmatory of this theory of the long continued vitality of seeds. The piles that sustain the London Bridge are still comparatively sound, after having been driven five hundred years. Venice stands on piles that were driven in the seventh and eighth centuries—more than a thousand years ago. And in New Jersey are swamps filled with timber so valuable that it is "mined" for lumber. Prof. Cook, in his Geology of New Jersey, says, "the number of annual rings in the trunk of one of these buried trees, six feet in diameter, was one thousand and eighty; while beneath it was another trunk counting five hundred rings, which had evidently grown and fallen down before the huge log above it had commenced its growth. This carries us back much further into the past than human records reach, but it is by no means a solitary case. Buried trunks of trees are often found from twenty to sixty feet deep in the earth, in what the geologists call the glacial deposits. At Salem, Ohio, fifteen miles north of Dayton, a mass of drift wood is found from thirty-seven to forty-three feet beneath the surface of the ground, embedded in mud.

And up in Siberia the flesh of the extinct mammoth has been preserved in ice so completely that, on being exposed, dogs and bears greedily devoured it.

Prof. Winchell asks, if a material so perishable as muscular fibre could be preserved since an epoch which antedates authentic history, is it not more probable that the oily tissues of vegetable seeds could resist the tendency to decay under similar circumstances?

Now, in reply to your question, why the clover seed, if in the ground, did not germinate before you burned the brush, it may be said that possibly the hardy spear grass, having got possession of the soil held it with a conqueror's power, and thus made it impossible for the clover to raise its head. The destruction of this grass and of the tough sod it had formed by its innumerable roots, not only gave the poor over-powered clover a chance to germinate, but the ashes of its old oppressor, as well as that of the brush you burned, furnished the needed stimulus to rouse to life and action the dormant powers of the sleeping, but not dead, germ of the clover plant."

A COTTON LORD.—Col. B. G. Locket, residing near Atlanta, Ga., has this year in cotton 6,500 acres, and in corn and small grain 3,500, making in all 10,000 acres. At less than a bale to two acres, and at $60 per bale, the cotton crop would amount to 3,000 bales, and value to $180,000. Col. L. employs 360 hands—all blacks. The total population which he provides for is about one thousand persons. His cotton crop is fair—his corn crop is excellent. The negroes give him very little trouble, are orderly and tolerably industrious. Colonel Locket thinks, throwing out the value of the increase of slaves, and calculating the interest on the investment in slaves, that cotton can now be made rather more cheaply than formerly.

THE chopping or grinding of grain to be fed to the stock operates as a saving of at least twenty-five per cent.

CARE OF HORSES.

The London Horse Book says: All horses must not be fed in the same proportions, without regard to their ages, their constitutions, and their work; because the impropriety of such a practice is self-evident. Yet it is constantly done, and is the basis of diseases of every kind.

Never use bad hay on account of its cheapness, because there is no proper nourishment in it.

Damaged corn is exceedingly injurious, because it brings on inflammation of the bowels and skin diseases.

Chaff is better for old horses than hay, because they can chew and digest it better.

Mix chaff with corn or beans, and do not give the latter alone, because it makes the horse chew his food more and digest it better.

Hay or grass alone will not support a horse under hard work, because there is not sufficient nutritive body in either.

When a horse is worked hard its food should be chiefly oats—if not worked hard its food should be chiefly hay—because oats supply more nourishment and flesh-making material than any other kind of food; hay not so much.

For a saddle or coach horse, half a peck of sound oats, and eighteen pounds of good hay are sufficient. If the hay is not good, add a quarter of a peck more oats. A horse which works harder may have rather more of each; one that works little should have less.

Rack feeding is wasteful. The better plan is to feed with chopped hay, from a manger, because the food is not then thrown about, and is more easily chewed and digested.

Sprinkle the hay with water that has salt dissolved in it, because it is pleasing to the animal's taste, and more easily digested. A teaspoonful of salt in a bucket of water is sufficient.

Oats should be bruised for an old horse, but not for a young one, because the former, through age and defective teeth, cannot chew them properly; the young horse can do so, and they are thus properly mixed with saliva, and turned into wholesome nutriment.

TO THE PUBLIC.

THE subscriber most respectfully informs the public that he has made arrangements with Dr. Thos. H. Whaland to carry on his near Chestertown, for the present year.
His long experience in the business and his reputation as a Miller warrants him in the belief that he can give universal satisfaction.—As soon as practicable he intends to keep on hand a good supply of CORN MEAL,
WHEAT FLOUR of all Grades,
HORSE FEED, &c., &c.,
which he is determined to sell at reduced prices.
He only wants to make the regular toll, and will be compelled to sell for Cash only as his capital is small and he does not intend to keep books.
He will use all means to make the Mill a public convenience as well as a source of profit. A trial is all he asks.
Most respectfully,
SAMUEL A. ANTHONY.

THE BICKFORD
IMPROVED
Family Knitting Machines.

PERFECTION in work and simplicity of construction, has been attained in this Machine. It knits both circular and flat web with perfect selvage edge, making a perfect band stitch. It narrows and widens, knitting heels and toes of stockings to perfection, with ribbed or plain stitch, and is a Crocheting as well as Knitting Machine.
It makes all the intricate fancy stitches of the Crocheting needle better than hand work. It is so simple that a child can operate it, and the rapidity of its work is truly wonderful—20,000 stitches per minute.
This Machine has carried the First Prize at the Maryland State Fair, Maryland Institute and Virginia State Fair, this Fall, and was the principal Machine at all of them. They are more valuable in the family than the Sewing Machine. Price $25 and $35. Send for circulars. Agents wanted in every part of Maryland. Liberal terms.

THE EUREKA
FANNING MILL.
THE GREATEST INVENTION OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY!
Farmers Look to Your Interest!
THE attention of Farmers and Mechanics is particularly directed to the combined economy, utility and practicability of the Eureka Mill, and to the many other advantages it possesses over every other Fanning Mill which has been introduced to the public.
It is the fruit of long and patient investigation by the inventor, who has made it his constant study for over twenty years. He has secured several patents for Mills, and has always been rewarded with the best of success. But not feeling satisfied with his former attainments, he determined to reach the climax, and he now believes that his new invention will warrant him in exclaiming in the joy of his heart, like the philosopher, Phythagoras—EUREKA!—signifying in the Grecian language, "I have found it." This has given the name to this new Mill.
In this Mill are all the former improvements to which have been added several more, adding still greater advantages than were at first anticipated, or even thought possible by the inventor himself. It embraces the three great essentials necessary in every invention:
It combines ECONOMY, UTILITY and PRACTICABILITY!
THE "EUREKA" MILL
Is small and lighter, and is capable of doing more and better work in a given time than any other Mill ever invented.
IT IS THE ONLY MILL that will successfully remove from wheat all such pests as Cockle, Garlic, Oats, Rye, &c.
Should an extra quality of grain for seed or grinding purposes be required, it can be so arranged as to catch in one box perfect grain, and in the other, grain fit for market or mill. Here is made a great saving usually lost sight of: for nearly one quarter of the grain cleaned in the common Mills is lost when sown, on account of shrunken kernels and inferior grain. The Eureka Mill saves all this, and gives seed every kernel of which will grow when put into the ground, and this saving will, in a short time, pay for the Mill.
HINES & BURCHINAL,
Chestertown, Maryland,
Owners of the Mill, are having them manufactured at the Sash Factory and Planing Mill of Noland & Co., Port Deposit, Md., which is a guarantee that they will be put up in the best manner. je17-tf.
