Farmers' Department.

"He who by the plow would thrive,
Himself must either hold or drive."

Burying Manure in the Soil.

Perhaps in no better way is the progress of agriculture illustrated than in the manner of applying manure now, and the course of practice of a century ago. No one thought of applying manure on the surface. It was dead vegetable matter and must be buried; and like all dead things the sooner it was put out of sight the greater the profit to the living plant. Morton in his Cyclopædia of Agriculture well puts the belief in the past when he says "the quicker farmyard manure is buried the better."

This is not true now. Any cyclopædist who would write thus would not command the respect of intelligent readers. There is some difference of opinion among some of our best farmers as to how near the surface the manure is to be put; but no one favors burying it. Some will have it that it is best just above, some prefer it just below; but that it should be somewhere near the surface all believe.

The great argument used for burying manure by people of the past was that so much of the valuable matter escaped into the atmosphere. So much benefit has been found to result from surface-manuring, that many argue that what escapes is no great loss. But this is probably an error. It is now known that the reason for the great fertility which follows a dry season is owing to the absorbent power of dry earth which takes in from the atmosphere the nitrogenous particles which have escaped from decaying vegetable matter. This shows that the atmosphere is a mine of richness, and that we add to this mine every time we expose our manure-heaps to its influences. If we can save this to ourselves; if we can hold it from passing into this airy nothingness, it must be our advantage to do so.

The advantages which have flowed from surface-manuring is not probably because there is no loss, but because the root of plants can make better use of what is left. If we dig out a young tree we find that most of its roots are just beneath the surface; an inch or so deeper there are fewer roots, and as we go deeper there are still loss. We may find some roots six feet or more down, but the bulk are just beneath the surface. The food in this surface-manuring system is therefore just where the mass of roots can profit by it. This is no doubt the plan. In this way the surface advocates have won their victory in spite of the loss, and not because there is no loss of good plant-food by the exposure.

This is the principle on which so much good has been found to flow from mixing dry earth with manure. It is stated that one of the best farmers of New York hauls under cover during summer a large quantity of dry earth, which he keeps dry, and that during the winter season he adds this to his manure-heap, about load for load. The result he says is that this load of added earth is equal to another load of stable-manure. It takes up the gases which he says would have gone into the atmosphere. It has not added anything to the manure, but simply saved what would have been lost.

These are all things bearing on this question of deep-manuring. The soil below is never very dry, and hence cannot take up much. When near the surface the law comes into play. Thus surface-roots, surface-feeding, and dry surface-earth all argue against the deep deposit of manure.

Manufactures of Maryland.

The following tables, prepared at the census office for the Baltimore Sun, are an accurate statement of the manufacturing statistics of Maryland, given in detail by counties by the census just completed and showing the total products in dollars to be $75,924,104, and the total number of manufacturing establishments 5,812, employing over 40,000 operatives, 32,934 of whom are in Baltimore city and county:

LIME AND GRASS THE CHEAPEST AND BEST MANURE.—Mr. George C. Gilmore, of Delaware, after giving an account of his trial and failures with patent manures, says:

"I now find I could have gotten my lands in grass much earlier, cheaper and more profitably, of which I will try to write more fully in another communication. I chiefly use the pea and buckwheat as green fallows for my wheat crops, which cleans my lands and the wheat better than any other process I am master of, and the yield is far better than I have recieved from any manures purchased in the last several years. I now only buy lime and plaster, and find a much less quantity of lime does better than is generally supposed. I put only two bushels of oyster shell lime per acre with my wheat when seeding, and with it have more than doubled any of the bought manures on my wheat crop for the last three years. I raise all of my own grass seeds for this and another farm of seven hundred acres of cleared land, now tenanted out; and making my own seeds, I am far more liberal in their application, and thus often secure a far better stand. This year I haved re-seeded much which the last year's drouth crippled badly, rather than re-plow it. Immaturely reflected over my plan years ago, and if I had at once put it into operation, now believe I would have been spared much trouble and expense, and would have received much better rewards."

DOGS.—A legislator in Missouri estimates the dog crop of the United States at 21,000,000. Each pup, he says, costs $8 a year, making a total of $168,000,000. Of these 105,000 go mad annually, and bite 10,000 people, furnishing about 50,000 items to the local reporters.

THE EUREKA
FANNING MILL.
THE GREATEST INVENTION OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY!
Farmers Look to Your Interest!
THE attention of Farmers and Mechanics is particularly directed to the combined economy, utility and practicability of the Eureka Mill, and to the many other advantages it possesses over every other Fanning Mill which has been introduced to the public
It is the fruit of long and patient investigation by the inventor, who has made it his constant study for over twenty years. He has secured several patents for Mills, and has always been rewarded with the best of success. But not feeling satisfied with his former attainments, he determined to reach the climax, and he now believes that his new invention will warrant him in exclaiming in the joy of his heart, like the philosopher, Phythagoras—EUREKA!—signifying in the Grecian language, "I have found it." This has given the name to this new Mill.
In this Mill are all the former improvements to which have been added several more, adding still greater advantages than were at first anticipated, or even thought possible by the inventor himself. It embraces the three great essentials necessary in every invention:
It combines ECONOMY, UTILITY and PRACTICABILITY!
THE "EUREKA" MILL
Is small and lighter, and is capable of doing more and better work in a given time than any other Mill ever invented.
IT IS THE ONLY MILL
that will successfully remove from wheat all such pests as Cockle, Garlic, Oats, Rye, &c.
Should an extra quality of grain for seed or gristing purposes be required, it can be so arranged as to catch in one box perfect grain, and in the other, grain fit for market or mill. Here is made a great saving usually lost sight of: for nearly one quarter of the grain cleaned in the common Mills is lost when sown, on account of shrunken kernels and inferior grain. The Eureka Mill saves all this, and gives seed every kernel of which will grow when put into the ground, and this saving will, in a short time, pay for the Mill.
HINES & BURCHINAL,
Chestertown, Maryland,
Owners of the Mill, are having them manufactured at the Sash Factory and Planing Mill of Noland & Co., Port Deposit, Md., which is a guarantee that they will be put up in the best manner. je17-tf.
