Mrs. Thrifty—"I'm afraid you heard Harry finding fault with me, Anty Drudge. I was just about to tell him that I didn't buy a new rug. This is our old one, cleaned with Fels-Naptha Soap. It looks so bright and new that Harry thought we had a new one."

Anty Drudge—"Well, I guess he doesn't mind the expense of that kind of a new rug, do you, Mr. Thrifty? You've got a sensible, practical little wife. You ought to appreciate her."

Don't sit down and cry over spilled milk. Fels-Naptha Soap will take out the spots. It will clean and brighten everything it touches.

Clothes can be washed better than ever before, without hard rubbing or boiling, in half the time, with less than half the trouble; if you will use Fels-Naptha Soap.

It works best in cool or lukewarm water.

Easy directions are on the Red and Green Wrapper. Better buy Fels-Naptha by the carton or box.

Ten Commandments.

Nowadays nearly every progressive community has a civic code. The Brooklyn Bureau of Charities has issued a little card, which for want of a better name, has been called its "ten commandments." These are as follows:

1. Thou shalt honor thy neighborhood and keep it clean.
2. Remember thy cleaning day and keep it wholly.
3. Thou shalt take care of thy rubbish heap, else thy neighbor will bear witness against thee.
4. Thou shalt keep in order thy alley, thy back yard, thy hall and thy stairway.
5. Thou shalt not let the wicked fly breed.
6. Thou shalt not kill thy neighbor by ignoring fire menaces or by poisoning the air with rubbage or garbage.
7. Thou shalt not keep thy windows closed day and night.
8. Thou shalt covet all the air and sunshine thou can'st obtain.
9. Because of the love thou bearest thy children, thou shalt provide clean homes for them.
10. Thou shalt not steal thy children's right to health and happiness.

THE PROPOSED AMENDMENTS.

Voters should give their attention to the six proposed amendments of the Constitution of Maryland before the election on November 4. They seem to be commendable and there does not seem to be any good reason why all should not be adopted.

The first provides for just compensation to owners of such private property as may be taken by the state, or Baltimore city, for public use, and defines the method of valuing such property. It refers chiefly to property in Baltimore city, and is of little interest to the counties.

The second provides that no bill shall originate in the Assembly during the last ten days of the session except by provisions which are calculated to give the measure proper consideration.

The third refers to the Judiciary and seems to provide chiefly for an additional Judge for the Third Circuit, composed of Baltimore and Harford counties.

The fourth is designed to punish the vote buyer, or the one who in any way bribes or attempts to bribe, a voter, by disqualifying such person, on conviction, from holding office or voting at any election thereafter. In other words it excuses the man bribed and places the penalty on the man using the corruption fund.

The fifth and sixth amendments stipulate the duties and salaries of the the State's Attorney and Attorney General respectively and are designed to eliminate the appropriation of such fees, requisites and rewards over and above the prescribed salary, all such fees and rewards to accrue to the State.

After the Show

The first thought that occurs to every one after the show is "Where shall I get something to eat?" The only answer is "At the Candy Kitchen."

Here is cleanly services and quick attention. The most delicate dishes any man or woman could desire will be made in a few minutes as you like them.

HARRISON W. VICKERS, JR

WHY DID HE WITHDRAW?

Mr. Marbury has withdrawn from the Senatorial contest; he gave as his reason the length of the campaign which would require too much time to be spent away from his law practice. We do not desire to place ourselves in the attitude of a disbeliever in Mr. Marbury's explanation, but we may be pardoned if we doubt that Mr. Marbury's statement contains the whole truth. There are other reasons we think.

As a private citizen, Mr. Marbury is at perfect liberty to exercise all his private rights in a manner which seems good and proper to himself, so long as he does not exalt a private right above a statute law. Among those rights we imagine there are none dearer to him than that of suffrage. In casting the ballot he can be either independent or partisan; he can vote either for men, or principles, or party. If there come a time when the Democratic party is weak in men and principles, he has a right to cast a vote against them, either in the effort to obtain from other parties what is lacking in said party, or to rebuke the Democracy for not setting the house in order. No one will deny him this right to be independent.

But this independence should be construed in its strictest sense. It means literally "not hanging to," and applying it politically it means not hanging to any party.

Too much has been said to prove that Mr. Marbury in the exercise of his franchise has not always hung to the Democratic party. He may be a Democrat all right, and in his judgment he may always have voted with an eye single to his party's welfare, and for the welfare of his State, county and city. "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth," and, "Spare the rod and spoil the child."

Mr. Marbury doubtless has emulated the example of both our heavenly and earthly father, and when the Democratic party in his estimation has needed any parental correction, he has laid it on with gentle, loving hand in the shape of an adverse ballot, and still retained his love for the erring child.

If we could now go further and say that the erring child harbored no resentment in its bosom by reason of such castigation, all might be lovely. But we fear the analogy must rest right here.

Political parties are sometimes inhuman. They treasure up these little rifts in the family lute, and resent such attempts to purify their boundaries. So, being perfectly willing to duck from under such doubtful love, and paddle their own canoe, they sometimes ask the would-be mentor to continue on in his own independent way.

If now, Mr. Marbury, in his capacity of mentor to the Democratic party, feels that he has a right to demand substantial favors from it, by very reason of his efforts to guide it along proper highways, to purify it, to make it ideal in its governmental policy, we fear he is going to find it hostilely inclined; we fear he will see that it remembers things. We think he has already found that out and that the Democrats will never see in him anything but a good Independent.

As such he votes as he pleases; takes parties up and lets them down as he sees fit; judges them by the standards of his own expediency. Then, when he gets ready, asks one of them to send him to the U. S. Senate. Rather presumptuous proceeding, we believe, and during his short campaign he has found out that the people were not ready to swallow such a composite mess.

Again, we think that Mr. Marbury found out that he was no better democrat, no better progressive democrat, no better Wilson Democrat, no better any other-kind-of Democrat than the Hon. John Walter Smith, who he was opposing, and that the people knew no reason why they should make the exchange.

We feel sure that President Wilson could see no reason for advocating any candidacy against a man who has consistently held up the chief Executive's hands in all his efforts to bring about those tariff and currency reforms which he honestly believed to be for the good of the masses.

Senator Smith is a democrat of the truest type, and a man forever faithful to his party, in times of weal, as well as in times of woe. He doubtless has seen its weakness as well as its strength, but never for a moment wavered because of the former, nor clung to it simply because of the latter.

He is a man always remembering his friends, and looking out for their interest first, but for all the party at all times.

Mr. Marbury no doubt came front to front with Mr. Smith's strength, and with his own weakness. He was handicapped right in the beginning by being compelled to defend his irregularity, and his inability to induce the party to adopt him in spite of that irregularity. He did well to retire from the race, and while no one doubts his ability and sincerity, he is not in a position to demand anything from any political party.
