"He who by the plow would thrive,
Himself must either hold or drive."

DISEASES AND AILMENTS OF POULTRY.

The following is from the new "Standard of Excellence," published by Mr. A. M. Halsted:

The old adage, "What is one man's meat is another's poison," was never more applicable than here.

In some diseases all published remedies fail, and as a last resource, in sheer desperation something new and unheard of is tried, which effects a speedy cure.—Remedies which are effectual in one locality are entirely inoperative in another. For this reason no systematic course of treatment can be pursued. The reader must be governed by his own judgment, and if one remedy fails, try another.

I am aware that some consider it as labor lost to attempt to "doctor up" a sick fowl. Unless you intend to be thorough in your treatment, it is. No half-way measures will do. A fowl that is ailing or sick should be separated at once from the rest of the flock; should be put in a warm, dry place. If left with the others, to be picked at and driven from place to place, all the "doctoring" you can give it will be of no use; its life and spirit has fled, and its death is only a question of time. But with a good, convenient pen, clean, dry and airy, and a proper attention to diet and medicine, many valuable fowls may be saved, which, under the usual treatment, enrich only the manure heap.

I would not be understood as advising medical treatment of common fowls, or of those of comparatively little value, save in such diseases as are contagious or epidemic in their character. It is only the much-valued, high priced varieties, that cannot be easily and quickly replaced, that it will pay to physic and nurse.

In cases of Roup, Chicken Cholera, Chicken-Pox, etc., among ordinary fowls, the best and cheapest remedy is to cut off their heads.

Pip.—The symptoms are a short, quick, spasmodic chirrup, repeated at short intervals. On examination, a dark-colored, dry, horny scale will be found on the end of the tongue. This is not the disease, as many suppose, but the result of the disease. In some cases, if not checked, the beak will turn yellow at the base, and the plumage become ruffled; appetite fails, and the bird mopes around and finally dies. A little cayenne or black pepper, mixed with meal, and administered three times a day, will generally effect a cure.

Bad Feathering.—This is less common with the Asiatic breeds than other varieties. The quick-maturing breeds, which feather early, are most subject to it. Symptoms are, drooping of the wings of the chicks, and a listless, distressed appearance.

Remedy, is chopped meat with the food, and burned oyster shells pounded very fine. A little moistened with ale is also beneficial. They must be kept dry and warm until well over the trouble, which rarely lasts over a week or ten days.

Leg Weakness.—This is usually caused by too high-feeding; the chick outgrows its strength. Symptoms are, squatting at intervals on the hocks, as if tired and unable to hold itself up.

Tincture of iron in the drink, in the proportion of half a teaspoonful to one quart of water, and a little mixed with the feed, will generally bring the chicks around all right in a few days.

Rheumatism or Cramp.—By some this is confounded with the preceding; it is caused by exposure to cold and wet, or roosting in damp, cold buildings. Symptoms, loss of use of legs or feet, being unable to walk or stand. Remove to a dry, warm pen, and give plenty of nourishing food, with occasional doses of red pepper added.

Diarrhea.—Symptoms too well known to need description. Sometimes caused by exposure to cold, wet weather. A pill composed of two parts camphor, two parts powdered rhubarb, and one part powdered chalk is generally a cure.

Cholera.—This is comparatively a new disease, and from its fatality is almost as much to be dreaded as roup, as it is equally contagious. In Georgia, North and South Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky, whole districts have been depopulated of fowls; and it seems to be yearly making its way North and East.

The first symptoms are a drooping of the wings and feathers, the latter appearing ruffled. Sometimes a wheezing sound is made, which can be heard some distance. The comb and gills turn dark, in some cases nearly black. It is sometimes (but not always) attended by copious discharges from the bowels of a greenish hue.

The fowl refuses food but drinks with avidity, seemingly unable to quench its thirst; it rapidly grows weak, and unless checked, the disease runs its course in from two to four days. On dissection the liver is found greatly enlarged. As yet no specific remedy has been found. One has checked the disease by giving them to drink a strong decoction of red or black oak bark. Another has been equally successful by giving them to drink, one ounce bi-sulphate of soda in one gallon of water. Another puts asafœtida in the drink. Pine tar in the trough, soft soap mixed with the feed, a strong decoction of tobacco juice, given in doses of a teaspoonful directly to the fowl, are also recommended.

Several writers speak very highly of pulverized alum, or dissolved alum mixed with the feed, in proportion one teaspoonful pulverized alum to one quart of meal for every twenty hens. Feed twice a day.

Value of Immigration.—The tide of immigration is setting towards the United States from Germany, Ireland and elsewhere, as never before. Most of the new comers bring health, wealth and labor, and if the money is little, (it averages $150 each,) the labor value is immense, and has been estimated, for each immigrant, at least $1,500 for the males and $750 for the females, or an average of $1,125 for each. About 5 per cent. of those who come are vicious, leaving 95 per cent. of a better class. Deducting 15 per cent. for young people, and then valuing the labor of those left at its intrinsic value for each year, every 10,000 immigrants are worth to the country at least $10,000,000 in the work they perform.

The Value of Coal Ashes.—As an absorbent, dry coal ashes are equal to dry earth, and much more convenient. Every family that has a patch of land big enough to swing a cat in, should make it rich by having a hogshead where a bushel or two of coal ashes are thrown as a basis. In it pour all the foul water of the family, and throw in the dry ashes each day.—Twice a year upset this receptacle and spread the contents over the garden, and spade it in before the ammonia escapes.

Durable Whitewash.—Whitewashed walls will not rub off if the lime is thus prepared: Slake half a pailful of lime and water; take half a pint of flour, make a starch of it, and pour it hot into the whitewash; stir it well and add a little salt.

Getting Rid of Stumps.—Take black machine oil, and bore three or four inches with an auger in the top of the stump, and fill the holes full of the oil; then let them stand one week and set them on fire.

THE EUREKA FANNING MILL.

THE GREATEST INVENTION OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY!

Farmers Look to Your Interest!

THE attention of Farmers and Mechanics is particularly directed to the combined economy, utility and practicability of the Eureka Mill, and to the many other advantages it possesses over every other Fanning Mill which has been introduced to the public.

It is the fruit of long and patient investigation by the inventor, who has made it his constant study for over twenty years. He has always been rewarded with the best of success. But not feeling satisfied with his former attainments, he determined to reach the climax, and he now believes that his new invention will warrant him in exclaiming in the joy of his heart, like the philosopher, Phylbagorat—EUREKA!—signifying in the Grecian language, "I have found it." This has given the name to this new Mill.

In this Mill are all the former improvements to which have been added several more, adding still greater advantages than were at first anticipated, or even thought possible by the inventor himself. It embraces the three great essentials necessary in every invention:

It combines ECONOMY, UTILITY and PRACTICABILITY!

THE "EUREKA" MILL
Is small and lighter, and is capable of doing more and better work in a given time than any other Mill ever invented.
IT IS THE ONLY MILL
that will successfully remove from wheat all such pests as Cockle, Garlic, Oats, Rye, &c.
Should an extra quality of grain for seed or gristing purposes be required, it can be so arranged as to catch in one box perfect grain, and in the other, grain fit for market or mill. Here is made a great saving usually lost sight of: for nearly one quarter of the grain cleaned in the common Mills is lost when sown, on account of shrunken kernels and inferior grain. The Eureka Mill saves all this, and gives seed every kernel of which will grow when put into the ground, and this saving will, in a short time, pay for the Mill.
HINES & BURCHINAL,
Chestertown, Maryland,
Owners of the Mill, are having them manufactured at the Sash Factory and Planing Mill of Noland & Co., Port Deposit, Md., which is a guarantee that they will be put up in the best manner. jel7-tf.
