a telephone conversation both parties

should identify themselves.

The one who answers

should say:

"Smith and Brown,

Mr. Brown speaking." The one calling says:

"This is Mr. Jones."

No unnecessary "Hello," or "Who's this?"

It's same and sensible, and makes for good services.

SIMPLE WINTER GOWN

Though it is simple, and of necessity war times will make for simplictions, this creation for both formal and informal wear is adorable. It is ity in winter gowns and winter funcof peach georgette gracefully draped and richly trimmed with bands of silon one shoulder.

EMBROIDERY TO BE REVIVED

dustry in Order to Give Her Women Employment.

Paris is quite determined, that is certain, on the vast re-establishment of her business in embroidery. Her women are needleworkers of importance. None is so good on this planet, possibly, unless isolated exceptions in the Indian and Persian countries be taken en days, before the sewing machine and ready-to-wear garments, in the art thread and accomplishing wonders

Money has been scarce among the French life, and the war has brought about the same kind of situation which existed during the Revolution; those who are too proud to work for their living in other epochs will now do so under the national strain.

Also, there are thousands of Belgian refugees and French women in other classes of life and society who must be supported. France does not believe in the nonproducing consumer. And so these women and men, too old even to serve in that territory servce of bearing the wounded from the trenches of the hills, which has been given to those who do not bear arms and who are sure of their footing and their nerves, are given the gentler service of embroidery for the world's clothes. So every woman who buys a gown that is embroidered in France is helping France.

BROWN SHOES ARE POPULAR

Particular Women Have Refused to Accept the Cloth Top as a Means of Saving Leather.

All the talk about leather conservation, and women signing the pledge against $15 shoes has not interfered one bit with women buying shoes of all leather, and at prices higher than ever

Particular women have not accepted the cloth top as a means of saving leather. Fewer freak shoes and colors are shown, but even a conservative 1 model of plain leather is high priced.

Every once in so often commonsense low-heeled English walking boots become the fashion. The "once" comes again this fall, and they are exceptionally good in plain tan, laced. They are not like the gay sport shoe

There is a craze just now for brown (Next Door to Third National Bank,) and dark gray boots for dress. Plain leathers with buck tops will be much worn later, in such color combinations AN EXTRAORDINARY OFFER. worn later, in such color combinations as gray and mole color, and brown

Handbag Is Held by Its Weight. A handbag that holds itself to its wearer's wrist by means of its own weight has been invented by a New York man. The leather handle is fitted with two metal slides on one end of fitted to the handle straps and are connected by a short piece of leather of the same width as the handle. When the handle is slipped over the arm the metal slides are pulled up
