'Root, Hog or Die'

Expression "Root, hog or die" had its origin in America in middle of last century as inelegant, slang, pioneer substitute for "work or starve." It apparently had no political connections. J. H. Beadle wrote in his volume "Life in Utah" -"Root, hog or die. This is the refrain of each of the nine verses of an idler has no place in a frontier

Iris Transplanting

Many of the sports commentators

Iris may be transplanted as early as August or on into September. It is good policy to set out a few new ones each season so as always to have some prime. If the bed is infected with soft rot of the roots, it is a good plan to disinfect the roots after removal of diseased parts, by washing them in a 1 to 1,000 cortransplanting to new soil.
