NOISES AT MIDNIGHT!

Several Ladies on Maple Avenue Spend a Sleepless Night for Fear of Burglars—Awakened at Midnight by Suspicious Sounds.

Between 1 and 2 o'clock last Monday morning the inmates of the home of Judge James A. Pearce on Maple avenue were greatly alarmed by what they supposed to be noises made by burglars. The Judge and his wife were out of town, but Miss Tillie Rasin, Miss Crisfield and Miss Louise Ringgold were occupying the house, Misses Crisfield and Ringgold being in one room and Miss Rasin in another room across the hall. Miss Ringgold says she heard the burglar as if hoisting the window and her heart went up in her throat. She touched her companion, found her awake and equally scared at the suspicious noises. She arose, and just as she was about to strike a light a crash was heard in the room below as if someone stumbling over a chair! Then there was renewed trembling and an effort made to awaken Miss Rasin. She had heard the noises and rather hesitated in unlocking her door but finally grew brave enough to join her companions. They were afraid to go down stairs but after a conference decided to hoist their window and ring a small bell in anticipation that some of the neighbors might hear it. They did, but when young Frank Hines told his mother about hearing a bell and started to go out, his mother thought he had been dreaming and advised him to return to his bed.

The ladies were in awful suspense all night and kept vigil until day broke, when they returned to their rooms and rested until the house-girl arrived. Upon investigating the next day no trace of thieves were seen and the ladies are at a loss to account for the peculiar noises. What increased the suspicions of the ladies was the fact that two tramps had been loafing about the bridge and near the Judge's gate all the afternoon. Officer Hudson patrolled the avenue about midnight and saw no one loitering near.
