"PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY."

A NEW SECRET SOCIETY.

This powerful organization, now growing up in the United States, especially in the great growing States, is destined to be a power in the land, because its impulse springs from that common necessity, "mutual protection;" and because its membership is made up of those who are the producers of the very sustenance and life of a nation. One of the chief causes of rural ignorance has been the insufficiency of profit arising from farm life, and this can only be obviated by the farmers themselves looking to their own interests. When a man will not attend to his own business, he must have somebody else to do it, or quit business altogether; hence, if farmers expect the consumers to look to their interests, while they merely produce, they must, by every law of human nature, expect their best interests to be abused.

The order is a secret society. Women, as well as men, are admitted to all the privileges of the grangers. Members admitted to the first degree are known respectively as a laborer and maid; to second degree, as cultivator and shepherdess; to third degree, as harvester and gleaner; and, to the fourth degree, as husbandman and matron. The fifth degree is conferred only in the State granges, which are composed of masters and past masters of the subordinated granges, and their wives, who are matrons. Those admitted to this degree are called members of the Pomona or Hope Grange. The sixth degree is conferred only upon members of the council of the National Grange, which is composed of masters and past masters of the State granges, and their wives, who have taken the degree of Pomona. The emblem of this degree is Flora (charity.) The seventh and highest degree is conferred only upon members of the National Senate, which comprises members of the council who have served one year in that body. The members of this degree are charged with the secret work of the order, and constitute a court of impeachment of all officers of the National Granges. The functions of the council and Senate are equivalent to those of representatives and senators in civil legislative bodies. The supreme executive authority of the order is lodged in the Master of the National Grange, at present Mr. Dudley W. Adams, of Wankon, Iowa. Each subordinate grange, in common with the National and State granges, elects its own master, overseer, lecturer, steward, assistant steward, chaplain, treasurer, secretary, gate keeper, Ceres, Pomona, Flora, and lady assistant steward, whose relative duties are implied in their respective names.

The officers of subordinate granges are elected for one year's service; of State granges, for two; and of the National Grange, for three. In accordance with the second article of the constitution, subordinate granges must meet at least once each month, and the State and National Granges annually; the former to select its own time and place, and the latter on the first Wednesday in February in each year, at such places as shall be from year to year determined. Its last meeting was held in Washington; its next will be held at St. Louis. In active operation, the subordinate granges mostly meet fortnightly. The minimum fee for membership in a subordinate grange is, for men five dollars, and for women two dollars, except charter members, who pay—men three dollars, and women fifty cents. In order to organize a new subordinate grange, it is necessary for nine men and four women who have received the four subordinate degrees to make application for a dispensation to the secretary of the National Grange, Mr. O. H. Kelley, of Washington, and accompany the same with a fee of fifteen dollars. Fifteen active subordinate granges in a State may apply for and receive authority to organize a State Grange. Each State grange is represented by its master in the National Grange. The one clause in the constitution which at once has received the severest censure and warmest praise is that which summarily excludes all religious and political questions as subjects of discussion from the work of the order. The greatest danger of the movement at this time is that it will wreck itself, on a sudden, on the fatal reef of politics, from the nearing of which it is warned, and even forbidden.

The word "grange," by which name the order in its working capacity is designated, which, in this instance, is equivalent to lodge, is from the Latin granum, signifying grain; in fact, the word has a variety of meanings, or shades of meanings, which all confine it strictly to an agricultural connection. In ordinary English it means a farm, together with all its immovable belongings. In French it means a grain farm. In old Scotch it signifies a place where the tithes and rents of the Church were paid in kind; and modern Scotch it denotes a grain-farm's buildings. The word is very old, and in the literature of earlier times it is of frequent occurrence, as applied to aristocratical residences; in which sense it has a similar significence to the words, "park," "lodge" and "fair." But the name is always in some way connected with farming, or land and its belongings; and is as appropriate and fine-sounding and aristocratic a title as the farmers of the country need desire to be distinguished by.

As a rule, the members of this order are farmers; but the terms of the constitution exclude no one from its membership, and many are joining the rank and file of the movement who are not farmers, but yet who are as deeply interested in the success of the main purpose of the organization as the practical farmer. The leading object of the farmers' movement is to secure cheap transportation for farm produce, to regulate railroad tariffs in such manner as will afford a fair and reasonable outlet for the enormous and rapidly increasing grain product of the northwest. Another prominent purpose of the organization is the reduction of the cost of manufactured implements, by bringing the manufacturer and farmer into direct relation. For this purpose the granges appoint middlemen of their own, through whom an interchange of products is effected at the minimum cost. On all the leading railway lines of Iowa are found these grange agents, who control the shipping interest of the entire farming community of the State, and stipulate for the purchase of farm implements and all other articles of daily consumption. Already, in the way of manufactures, the yoke has been made easy; but the railroads are hitherto inexorable. Throughout the whole Mississippi Valley there is a surplus of food products, and a deficiency of manufactures; in consequence, the necessity arises for a foreign market; although a more extensive home market would be better for the double purpose of sale and purchase. At the present high rates of railway tariff the disadvantage to the producing classes of this region is obvious. Here lies the strength of their reason for demanding a remedy, and the keynote of the present success of the order of the Patrons of Husbandry. It is because, under the existing order of things, the wages, which means the net earnings of the farmers of the northwest, are the wages of starvation.

To which George Frank Gouley, editor of The Freemason, St. Louis, adds:

This organization has one great reef to avoid in its course through life, viz: that of politics and sects, for on it has been wrecked the best societies of the world. We do not believe much in the policy of creating any organization of one branch of trade against another; but in this instance we think we see the means whereby the farmer can get a proper compensation for his labor, and hence be able to educate his children as they should be, and also whereby the farmer's boy will not be dissatisfied with his farm life. It's no use to talks against FACTS. The farmer's boy and daughter may be ever so devoted to the old homestead, but when they hear nothing from morning till night but that "farming does not pay," they will wander off to other fields of industry, and in the end wind up worse off than ever for want of proper education in the practical affairs of life. The movement now contemplated, if properly conducted, will not cause any increase in the cost of supplies to the consumer, and will yet yield a proper profit to the producer. We do not understand the movement as a war of labor against capital, but rather a just blending of invested capital in different pursuits, and when that object is accomplished, we presume the organization will dissolve. The following is an official statement of the purposes of organization:

PREAMBLE.

"Human happiness is the acme of earthly ambition. Individual happiness depends upon general prosperity.

"The prosperity of a nation is in proportion to the value of its productions.

"The soil is the source from whence we derive all that constitutes wealth; without it we would have no agriculture, no manufactures, no commerce. Of all the material gifts of the Creator, the various productions of the vegetable world are of the first importance. The art of agriculture is the parent and precursor of all arts, and its products the foundation of all wealth.

"The productions of the earth are subject to the influence of natural laws, invariable and indisputable; the amount produced will consequently be in proportion to the intelligence of the producer; and success will depend upon his knowledge of the action of these laws, and proper application of their principles.

"Hence, knowledge is the foundation of happiness.

"The ultimate object of this orgrnization is for mutual instruction and protection, to lighten labor by diffusing a knowledge of its aims and purposes, expand the mind by tracing the beautiful laws the great Creator has established in the universe, and to enlarge our views of creative wisdom and power.

"To those who read aright, history proves that in all ages society is fragmentary; and successful results of general welfare can be secured only by general effort. Unity of action cannot be acquired without discipline, and discipline cannot be enforced without significant organization; hence we have a ceremony of initiation which binds us in mutual fraternity as with a band of iron; but although its influence is so powerful, its application is as gentle as that of the silken threads that bind a wreath of flowers."

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

"The work of the subordinate granges has two stages or periods.

"First, we organize the granges, and study to become familiar with the work of the lodge room. We study to take in the essence and spirit of our beautiful and elevating ritual. We also get acquainted with each other. As a people, we pay too little regard to the social and fraternal element in society. There are, perhaps, reasons why this is so, growing out of earnest, practical life in developing a new country; but it is none the less true that our happiness and well-being would be better promoted by cultivating more fully our social natures.

"After the organizing period has passed, we come to the business or material phase of our work. Here we need to be governed by a large and enlightened wisdom. We are suffering from the oppression of corruptions. Manufacturers combine against us; and owing to circumstances by which we are surrounded, we perhaps do not understand, at present, just the best and most business-like method of remedying the evil. We need, then, to carefully study and mature our plans before we begin to act. We talk over among ourselves what we desire to do, and compare opinions as to the best methods of arriving at results. Having perfected our plans, we should be more than careful that we carry out in good faith and in a business-like way all agreements and contracts."

THE EUREKA

FANNING MILL.

THE GREATEST INVENTION OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY!

Farmers Look to Your Interest.

THE attention of Farmers and Mechanics is particularly directed to the combined economy, utility and practicability of the Eureka Mill, and to the many other advantages it possesses over every other Fanning Mill which has been introduced to the public.

It is the fruit of long and patient investigation by the inventor, who has made it his constant study for over twenty years. He has secured several patents for Mills, and has always been rewarded with the best of success. But not feeling satisfied with his former attainments, he determined to reach the climax, and he now believes that his new invention will warrant him in exclaiming in the joy of his heart, like the philosopher, Phyihagoras—EUREKA!—signifying in the Grecian language, "I have found it." This has given the name to this new Mill.

In this Mill are all the former improvements to which have been added several more, adding still greater advantages than were at first anticipated, or even thought possible by the inventor himself. It embraces the three great essentials necessary in every invention:

It combines ECONOMY, UTILITY and PRACTICABILITY!

THE "EUREKA" MILL

Is small and lighter, and is capable of doing more and better work in a given time than any other Mill ever invented.

IT IS THE ONLY MILL

that will successfully remove from wheat all such pests as Cockle, Garlic, Oats, Rye, &c.

Should an extra quality of grain for seed or gristing purposes be required, it can be so arranged as to catch in one box perfect grain, and in the other, grain fit for market or mill. Here is made a great saving usually lost sight of: for nearly one quarter of the grain cleaned in the common Millsis lost when sown, on account of shrunken kernels and inferior grain. The Eureka Mill saves all this, and gives seed every kernel of which will grow when put into the ground, and this saving will, in a short time, pay for the Mill.
