Receipts Worth Preserving.

FOR SCAB.—Make a strong lye from hard-wood ashes, as oak or hickory; add to each gallon of lye one pound of strong tobacco; simmer over a moderate fire for about an hour, then strain and add to each gallon of the liquid a quarter of a pound of the flower of brimstone, the same quantity of hellebore powder, a half pint of the spirits of turpentine, and a large tablespoonful of carbolic acid. The mixture is then fit for use as a "dip," (for which the best time is after shearing) or otherwise. It should be well stired before using and kept from the eyes and mouth It is well, before applying, to scratch the affected parts with a curry-comb, or something similar. If the weather is wet the sheep should be kept under cover for a short time after the application. The remedy should be applied once or twice a week.

FOR FOOT-ROT.—First cleanse the foot, then pare away the portion of the hoof covering the diseased part, and apply the following to all the flesh affected by fungus growth: Mix gunpowder and blue vitriol in equal quantities, and to seven parts of this mixture add one part of verdegris and sufficient sweet oil to make a salve. Apply this salve twice a week, keeping the sheep dry-footed for an hour or so after each application.—Agricultural Report.

TO CURE FISTULA AND POLE EVIL.—For fistula, take your pen-knife and cut in about half an inch wide, on the top of the shoulder, as the case may be, then put in a stick of caustic half an inch long and let it remain; and if the first fails to cure repeat it, and a sure cure is guaranteed It has been often tried and has never been known to fail. Proceed in the same way with a case of pole evil, using bluestone in the place of caustic, and it is certain to cure.

CAPPED hocks are seldom entirely reduced. The best treatment consists in frequent fomentations with hot water and the subsequent use of some discutient lotion such as the following: Dissolve sal-ammoniac and nitre, of each one ounce, in two pints of water, add vinegar and alcohol, of each four ounces. Keep the parts constantly wet until all heat and tenderness have disappeared. Blistering would only tend to increase the injury.

WASHING THE FEET AND LEGS OF HORSES. It is not injurious to wash your horses' feet and legs free of mud when returning to the stable at night from work. Clean, cold water is much better than cold, wet mud. The legs will dry much faster, and the animal will not be so subject to mud fever in the legs.

CHICKEN CHOLERA.—A writer in the Cincinnati Times gives the following receipt for chicken cholera: Drop upon a bit of bread eight or ten drops of turpentine, mix with it of black pepper ground the bulk of a pea, and put it down the chicken's throat.

TO MAKE A COW GIVE DOWN HER MILK.—An old dairyman says that a simple and sure way to make a cow give down her milk is to lay a chain gently across her back when you milk her.

NEVER administer medicine through the nostrils, as it may cause suffocation.—Horses have been killed by the operation, and the mouth is the natural channel.

DO HENS PAY?

I propose answering this question by the following correct account, showing the amount of eggs and chickens produced from 63 hens in one year, commencing January 1, 1872, ending January 1, 1873: The number of eggs sold during the year year was 557 dozen, for which I received $84,43; raised 90 chickens, sold them for 25 cents apiece, which amounted to $22 50. This, united with the $84.43 received for eggs, makes a total income for the year of $106.93. The amount of feed consumed during the year is as follows: 70 bushels shelled corn, worth in this locality 50 cents per bushel; 2 gallons sour milk per day, worth two cents per gallon, $13.60; two bushels of lime, 50 cents; total amount of expenses, $50.10. Expenses deducted from income leaves a net profit of $56 83. The bulk of the eggs were sold at twelve to fifteen cents per dozen. I am satisfied that I could not have obtained the above result had it not been for the milk, which seems to be a very good substitute for meat.—The fowls had the range of the farm in winter; they had the shelter of the barn. The hens kept were a species of the thoroughbred mongrel, being whitecrested black Polands, Bolton Grey and Spanish crossed.—[Ex.]

Dry Earth as Bedding.

A correspondent of the Ohio Farmer says it is well established that dry earth is of the greatest benefit to the comfort of stock, when used as bedding. Any farmer can fill a large bin during warm weather with road scrapings, powdered clay or common soil. This may be strewed on the floor of the stall to the depth of three inches, and litter for their bedding laid on it. Thus the urine will be absorbed and the nitrogen saved, for dry earth is so powerful an absorbent that a flooring of this sort will not be sufficiently saturated as to require replacing for a long time. Then this saturated earth is worth more than its weight of fresh manure. The plant food thus saved from the stables is fully double in quantity and value, and is in much better condition for use.

A SHOT AT A KANSAS SENATOR.—The following is a rather clever and veracious reminiscence of the late Garrett Davis, who was very much given to joking. The Kentucky Senator was one day snoozing quietly in his chair, when a bill that had been taken up during his nap came to a vote. A neighbor punched his ribs, and said:

"Wake up, Mr. Davis—your name is called."

Half unconsciously the Kentuckian arose, and asked the Vice-President what they were voting on The Vice-President explained that it was a railroad bill in Kansas.

"Well," said Mr. Davis, in that shrill voice and pointed manner of his, "what I want to know before I vote is, the amount of stealing in the bill."

Whereupon the Kansas gentleman arose, his face beaming all over with smiles, and said:

"If the Senator from Kentucky will permit me I will explain. I have thoroughly investigated this bill, sir, and I assure you that if there is any stealing in it I cannot find it.

"All right, Mr. President," responded Senator Davis, "if the Senator from Kansas can't find any stealing, I'm satisfied there is none there."

All over the Senate Chamber there was an audible smile.

Nathan Rothschild of London.

The high priest of the Exchange was not happy even in the midst of his overflowing coffers. Naturally enough he had few friends and numberless enemies. In his later years he suffered from constant dread of assassination. He was always receiving threatening letters, declaring that his life depended on sending certain sums of money to certain addresses. He scented murder in every breeze, suspected poison in every cup. In sleep, he had nightmare visions of crouching things; in waking hours he started at every unexpected noise.

One morning two strangers were announced as having important business with the banker, and they were shewn into his private office. He bowed to them and inquired the nature of their negotiation. They bowed and said nothing, but advanced toward him thrusting their fingers nervously into their pockets. Rothschild's alarm was excited at once. They must be searching for concealed weapons; their bearded faces made it clear to his frightened fancy that they were homicidal ruffians. He retreated in terror behind a large desk, seized a ponderous ledger, hurled it at their heads, and screamed "Murder!" at the top of his voice. A small army of clerks poured into the room, and laid violent hands on the strangers, who proved to be wealthy Polish bankers bringing letters of introduction to the (physically timid) lion of loans. Embarrassed by his auriferously august presence—what is there in a breathing money-bag capable of inspiring awe?—they forgot their speech and their common coolness of conduct. They were nearly as much terrified as the renowned Israelite; and as it was their initial visit to England, they imagined at first that all foreigners were deemed robbers and desperadoes until the contrary was established.

The wretchedly rich Nathan never went out alone after dark, never entered an unlighted room, had servants within call of his bed chamber, slept with loaded pistols under his pillow.

A fellow-Frankforter, dining with him one evening, and observing the luxury of his household, remarked: "You must be happy, baron, with the power to gratify every wish." "Happy, indeed!" was the response. "Do you think it happiness to be haunted always by a dread of murder—to have your appetite for breakfast sharpened by a threat to stab you to the heart unless you enclose a thousand guineas to some unknown villian?"

On one occasion, when the great financier had been to an evening party, and had gotten into his carriage to go home, a friend, wishing to make an appointment, stepped out to speak to him. The timorous banker mistook his familiar friend for a highwayman and thrust a pistol out the carriage window, with his favorite cry of "murder," before he could be acquainted with the situation.

As Rothschild grew richer and older his fears increased. He became almost a monomaniac on the subject of assassination, and many of his relatives thought him in serious danger of insanity through his constant apprehensions. Most of the menacing messages were unquestionably sent him by his enemies, with whom he was plentifully supplied. Conscious of his weakness, they revenged themselves upon him by inspiring him with baseless terrors.

He was repeatedly told so, but he could not be induced to believe that he did not dwell in an atmosphere of poisons, poniards and pistols.—Harper's Magazine.

THAT IRON IS VALUABLE AS A MEDICINE has long been known, but it is only since its preparation the particular form of Peruvian Syrup that its full power over disease has been brought to light. Its effect in cases of dyspepsia and debility is most salutary.

DR. Bull's Cough Syrup is fast taking the place of all the old fashioned cough remedies. It never fails to relieve the most violent cold, and for throat disease it is invaluable.

MANY a man, who would be brave before a cannon's mouth, manifests a lack of courage and fortitude in the ordinary affairs of life.

August Flower.

The most miserable beings in the world are those suffering from Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint. More than seventy-five per cent. of the people in the United States are afflicted with these two diseases and their effect; such as sour stomach, sick headache, habitual costiveness, impure blood, heart burn, water-brash, gnawing and burning pains at the pit of the stomach, yellow skin, coated tongue and disagreeable taste in the mouth, coming up of the blood after eating, low spirits, &c. THE EUREKA FANNING MILL.
THE GREATEST INVENTION OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY!

Farmers Look to Your Interest.

THE attention of Farmers and Mechanics is particularly directed to the combined economy, utility and practicability of the Eureka Mill, and to the many other advantages it possesses over every other Fanning Mill which has been introduced to the public.

It is the fruit of long and patient investigation by the inventor, who has made it his constant study for over twenty years. He has secured several patents for Mills, and has always been rewarded with the best of success. But not feeling satisfied with his former attainments, he determined to reach the climax, and he now believes that his new invention will warrant him in exclaiming in the joy of his heart, like the philosopher, Phythagoras—EUREKA!—signifying in the Grecian language, "I have found it." This has given the name to this new Mill.

In this Millare all the former improvements to which have been added several more, adding still greater advantages than were at first anticipated, or even thought possible by the inventor himself. It embraces the three great essentials necessary in every invention:

It combines ECONOMY, UTILITY and PRACTICABILITY!

THE "EUREKA" MILL
Is small and lighter, and is capable of doing more and better work in a given time than any other Mill ever invented.
IT IS THE ONLY MILL that will successfully remove from wheat all such pests as Cockle, Garlic, Oats, Rye, &c.

Should an extra quality of grain for seed or gristing purposes be required, it can be so arranged as to catch in one box perfect grain, and in the other, grain fit for market or mill. Here is made a great saving usually lost sight of: for nearly one quarter of the grain cleaned in the common Mills is lost when sown, on account of shrunken kernels and inferior grain. The Eureka Mill saves all this, and gives seed every kernel of which will grow when put into the ground, and this saving will, in a short time, pay for the Mill.

HINES & BURCHINAL,
Chestertown, Maryland,
Owners of the Mill, are having them manufactured at the Sash Factory and Planing Mill of Noland & Co., Port Deposit, Md., which is a guarantee that they will be put up in the best manner. jel7-tf.
