Heaven.

BY E. L. BULWER.

Is Heaven a place where pearly streams Glide over silver sand? Line childhood's rosy, dazzling dreams,

Of some far, fairy land? Glitter on fadeless flowers, And mirth and music ring around,

To while away the hours? Ah, no! not such, not such is Heaven: Surpasssing far all these; Such cannot be the guerdon given Man's weary soul to please. For saint and sinner here below, Such vain to be have proved; And the pure spirit will dispise

What'er the sense hath loved.

There we shall dwell with Sire and Son, And with the Mother Maid, And with the Holy Spirit one, In glorv like arrayed; And not to one created thing, Shall dur embrace be given; But all our joy shall be in God, For only God is Heavan.
