HYDROPHOBIA REMEDY.

A Kent Countian Who Was Bitten by a Rabid Dog Many Years Ago Tells of a Remedy That Will Prevent the Dread Malady.

Mr. Thos. J. Shallcross, one of Kent's most popular and influential citizens, writes the Baltimore Sun the following interesting letter in reference to a remedy for hydrophobia:

MESSRS. EDITORS:—I see an article in the Sun of June 27 in regard to a remedy for hydrophobia, signed "W," who states that he saw the same recipe in a Greenville (S. C.) newspaper many years ago Seventy-five years ago in what is now Philadelphia—then only a suburb—resided a Mrs. Goodman, who had a remedy for hydrophobia. She cured many cases of bites from mad-dogs. I knew of several to my own knowledge, and she never failed but in one instance, and that was a man bitten in the nose. When he went to her she told him that his case was hopeless; that he was bitten above his breath, and before she could get the medicine through his system the poison would go to the brain. I knew this man personally. He took the medicine, but in the course of three weeks he died with hydrophobia. When a boy I was playing with a pet dog and he bit me on the hand, and one tooth only drew blood. The next morning the dog had the rabies badly and was killed. Then the wound on my hand was cauterized and I had to take Mrs. Goodman's medicine. I took it as directed and never felt any bad effect from the bite. This was 72 years ago, and I was 6 years old. When Mrs. Goodman died she left her recipe that it might be published for the benefit of humanity. She died about 48 years ago. Mr. Franklin Dyre, a farmer, living near Galena, Kent county, Md., had the recipe published in the county papers about 46 years ago. The recipe was this: One ounce of dried elecampane root (or 2 ounces of green) boiled in one quart of milk until boiled about half away, and take it in three doses and diet yourself. The second day 1½ ounces boiled, etc., same way, also 1½ ounces the third day, still dieting yourself. She never had to give more than the three doses; that is, the three days. You do not take the elecampane; you pour the milk off and throw the sediment oway.

THOMAS J. SHALLCROSS.
Locust Grove, Kent county, Md.

The Snake Was Interested.—It isn't often that a five foot black snake enters a parlor and listens to a young lady read a letter to her sister, but this is just what happened at the home of Mr. Joseph C. Huffer, south of Middletown, a day or two ago. Miss Mary Huffer was in the parlor reading a letter to her younger sister, Miss Martha, when the latter by the dim light, was horrified to see a big black reptile lying quietly stretched out on the floor. Miss Mary hurriedly left the room, procured a club and killed the reptile. It is thought the snake crawled up on the roof and entered the parlor by the chimney, as the outer door had not been open. So far this season six black snakes have been killed on Mr. Huffer's farm.

The Perils of Farming—Wm. Bowser, a farmer, near Addison, not far from Meyersdale, while cutting hay with a mowing machine ran into a bumble bees' nest. The bees caused the team to run away. The horses struck a small tree in the field, throwing the cutter bar ahead so as to hit the hind legs of one of the horses, cutting both legs off. Mr. Bowser was thrown behind the bar. He escaped with bruises. The bees followed the team for at least a hundred yards and were stinging both driver and team when they hit the tree.

While Jacob Sheffield was hauling lumber to Fort Louden, near McConnelsville, he was confronted by a large black bear, which stood up and showed fight. The lead horse tore loose and ran down over an embankment; one found its way home and the other horse was discovered the next day reined up so that it could not eat. Mr. Sheffield escaped to his home with the other horses.

GOV JOSEPH W. FOLK in addressing the retail merchants of Missouri at their convention spoke against the mail-order business and favored advertising in the town papers. He said in part:

"We are proud of our splendid cities, and we want them to increase in wealth and population, and we also want our merchants to build up, but we also desire the country merchants to prosper. I do not believe in the mail-order citizen. If a place is good enough for a man to live in and to make his money in it is good enough for him to spend his money.

"No merchant can succeed without advertising in one way or another. Patronize your town papers, build them up and they will build the town up and build you up increased trade and greater opportunities. Do not be afraid that business is going to be hurt by the recent exposures of wrongdoing in the commercial world. No man who is doing an honest business can be injured by the light. All business will be better for the cleansing process it is going through and for the stamping out of evil."

A Farmer Minister.—Rev. F. T. Tagg, of Baltimore, editor of the Methodist Protestant, of that denomination, has developed into a farmer-minister. He owns a fine farm in Queen Anne county, and numerous times during each year he pays a visit to the estate and superintends the harvesting of certain crops. He takes a keen delight in being on the farm during the wheat-harvesting period, and usually invites several of his ministerial friends from Baltimore to accompany him, and, if needs be, assist in the laborious work of harvesting the crop. Rev. Mr. Tagg is also an excellent preacher, and at one time was a pastor in this county. He is a brother-in-law of ex-County Commissioner, Geo. A Dever.—Centreville Record.
