SATURDAY . . . . . .

THE nine Eastern States ... CANAL.

Hamilton exactly 5,000 ... only majority against ... CANAL—THE CORPORATION ... TWENTY AND FORTY MILLIONAIRES TO THE TRADE AND ...

In Baltimore on Tuesday city, George Trust, while ... member of Congress ... shot and killed an inoffensive ... District of Maryland ... named Wm. A. Robinson, of ... to the House ... del county, who was in the city ... Railways on Delaware ... some purchases. Trust was arrested ... be recommitted to jail. It is hoped that the ... extreme penalty of the law will be meted ... out to him.

THE journalistic sensation of the day is ... Hon. George Colton's jollification number of the Annapolis Republican. Besides the regular edition thousands of copies of it have been circulated gratuitously throughout the State. In addition to a magnificent display of Democratic poultry, Mr. Colton has embellished his paper with cartoons which are applicable to the late campaign and are full of interest to politicians. As a jubilee newspaper it is a grand success.

THE prominent citizens of Delaware, irrespective of party, gave Senator Bayard an enthusiastic reception on Tuesday evening at the Opera House in Wilmington. He reached home from his European tour on Friday night of last week. An address of welcome was delivered by Dr. Bush, to which the Senator replied in some extended and appropriate remarks, in the course of which he said he had an ambition "to possess the unsuspecting confidence of the people of Delaware, and to retain it."

WHEN the vote in New York ... canal, have been counted and announced the ... the Chesapeake ... candidates for State offices. This would make ... ernor, had majorities ... regular foreign lines of ... and the combined ... nearly two days shorter and ... Kel... a similar manner expedite ... irregular steamship traffic and sailing ... vessels.

The most important feature of the report is that it recommends that the canal be built under the supervision of the War Department, to serve the combined objects of being a means of harbor defense on which he bases this part of his report. It is that in the naval equipment of this country there should be two classes of vessels, one for "harbor defense" the other "commerce destroyers." The use of the canal in case of a foreign naval war would be manifold. Any vessel, which was of sufficient size to carry a gun, could be utilized in defense of the coast adjacent to the Delaware and Chesapeake bays by reason of their ability to get away from a heavy foe by running into shallow water. Heavy war vessels could also pass through the canal from one bay to the other. It is shown conclusively, without further details, that with the advantages of the two great bays and the canal the ports of Philadelphia, Chester, Wilmington, Baltimore, Washington, Norfolk, Richmond and adjacent places could be easily protected. It is also shown that in case the outlet to commerce by way of the Delaware bay is blockaded vessels from the ports named can find egress by the way of the Chesapeake bay and vice versa, with a number of other advantages. Col. Kimmel feels confident of success in obtaining the passage of the measure.

Severe Droughts.

An interesting record is that of severe droughts as far back as the land of the Pilgrims. How many thousand times are observations made like the following: "Such a cold season!" "Such a hot season!" "Such dry weather!" or such wet weather!" "Such high winds, or calms!" etc., etc. All those who think that the dry spell we had last Spring was the longest ever known, will do well to read the following:

In the Summer of 1621, 24 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1730, 41 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1657, 75 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1662, 80 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1674, 45 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1680, 81 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1694, 62 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1705, 40 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1715, 45 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1728, 61 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1730, 92 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1741, 72 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1749, 108 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1745, 42 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1755, 42 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1762, 123 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1773, 80 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1791, 82 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1802, 23 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1812, 28 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1856, 24 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1871, 42 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1875, 26 days in succession without rain.

In the Summer of 1876, 27 days in succession without rain.

It will be seen that the longest drought that ever occurred in America was in the Summer of 1762. No rain fell from the first of May to the first of September, making 123 days without rain. Many of the inhabitants sent over to England for hay and grain.

ONE of the objects of interest at the present moment to the lounger in Strand, London, is a copy of an English newspaper displayed in a window in the condition it reached a subscriber in Russia, after passing through the hands of the Russian authorities. An article on Russia is entirely obliterated. The manner in which the Russian authorities manage those things is wonderfully simple and effectual. They take a printer's roller, covered with ink, and run it up and down the objectionable columns till not a word can be deciphered.

"May I have your ear for a moment?" said an anxious candidate to a rural delegate. "Which ear?" joconsely responded the rural agent. "Your electioneer, of course," replied the candidate, and then he smiled.

...ant Tells a Story.

...T LINCOLN AND EXTRA BILLY SMITH, OF VIRGINIA.

(Speech in a Pullman Car coming East.)

...OW, as to telling stories, I have no particular gift in that way. Sometimes, conversing about the affairs of the war, something that is said calls up an anecdote or a good story where something occurred of a ridiculous, pathetic, amusing or illustrative character. I might tell, if I could happen to think of them, of some things that occurred that Lincoln told me at times when he visited me in the field, and I will tell you one thing that occurred just after the surrender of Lee at Appomattox. I have often heard the same story attributed to Mr. Lincoln in different ways, but this is the way it occurred with me: "After the surrender of Lee," continued the General, "I hurried back to Washington with all haste to stop the enormous expenditure the Government was making at that time in the way of purchases, enlistments and drafting. While I was not positive that there would be further hostilities or any further efforts made on the part of the rebel armies, yet I thought it was not unlikely there would be, and that it was better to take proper precautions, so I ordered the Army of the James back to Burke's Station, to remain while we could go over to Washington, and do as I say—stop expenditures that were being made. As you all remember, the authorities in Richmond had taken flight, and they never stopped till they got to Danville. [Loud laughter.] Finding we were not pressing, they did not stop there. Supposing I was at Burke's Station, Extra Billy Smith, as he was called, who was Governor of Virginia at that time, sent a letter through by a flag of truce to me, which General Meade received, and, without letting them know I was not there, telegraphed to me at Washington.

The letter was to this effect: "That he was Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia, and as such he had temporarily removed the seat of government from Richmond to Danville (laughter); and was desirous of knowing from me whether he would be permitted to exercise the functions of his office in Danville unmolested, or, if not, if he and a few friends would be permitted to leave the country. I was in doubt about the best way to answer it, when I happened to meet Mr. Lincoln on the sidewalk, and told him about it. He supposed I was asking him for instructions, and his answer was this: "I will tell you," he said, "It's like an Irishman I once heard of who was in the habit of drinking whisky. He had done so for a long time. At last he joined a temperance society, but the habit of drinking was strong upon him. He wanted to take something, and so for a time he took soda water, but one day he put his glass around and said, "Doctor, can't you put a drop of brandy in that unbeknowst to me?" [Great laughter.] Mr. Lincoln couldn't have said any plainer that Extra Billy Smith could have gone and taken as many of that sort of drinks as he pleased."

Gen. Grant's little talk nerved the rest of the boys up to their best, and the fun flowed fast and furious until the camp fire went out, and the boys crawled into bed and pulled the clothes up around them for the night.

MR. HENDRICK'S KEYNOTE.—Ex-Gov. Thos. A. Hendricks addressed the Hendricks Club of Indianapolis, Indiana, Wednesday evening of last week. According to a dispatch to the New York Times a large part of his address was devoted to the Southern question. He arraigned the republican party as an enemy of the Southern States, and charged any man who talked of the solid South and the solid North with uttering a treasonable sentiment. The republicans were terribly mad, he said, at the Southern brigadiers, but how were they going to help it so long as the Southern people choose to elect such men to Congress? They could elect whom they pleased, and the North could not help it. He did not like the yellow fever, and could say many hard things about it, but he could not help the fever, and therefore he kept still. The republicans had made the issue of troops at the polls, and he was ready to accept it. That would be a question for the future. He elaborated the doctrine of State rights, and defended the democratic theory of home-rule. He denounced President Hayes's vetoes, and said he should not have been so free to express a difference of opinion with Congress, especially as he had sneaked into office. Mr. Hendricks said he himself had been elected to the Vice-Presidency by a majority of 1,000,000 white men, and he felt proud of it; but if he had taken office as Hayes did he would not feel proud. The country had seen the last time when men not elected would assume office and rule the country. Mr. Hendricks discussed at length the negro exodus, and charged that it was the result of a regular organization in the North, directed from Washington, and carried forward with a view to carrying the country by a solid North next year. He said a plan was afoot and now being carried forward to flood the State of Indiana with colored men, and thus override the will of the native-born and resident whites and displace the white laboring men. He indignantly denounced this scheme, and said it was being carried out pursuant to a regular plan.

ASTONISHING reports of deposits of silver between Thunder Bay and Lake Winnepeg have been made by travellers lately arrived at Red river from that region. The main lead is, says the Winnipeg Times, in the vicinity of Falcon Lake. The lead has been traced a distance of fully a quarter of a mile, and the width is stated to be from eight to ten feet throughout. It is proposed to form a company in Winnepeg with a nominal capital which, if it realizes the expectations of the discoverers, will give permanent employment to at least three hundred men. The proximity to the Canadian Pacific, to which access is obtainable by a series of lakes divided by portages presenting no serious obstacles, will be found very important, as the expense of transporting the crushed ore from the stamp mills to the cars will not be excessive.

COMMON rock salt, dried in an open oven and pulverized, mixed with equal parts of spirits of turpentine, will kill a felon in twenty-four hours. Keep a rag constantly wet with the preparation on the felon during that time.

WHEN a small boy was ducked in a pond, he went home and told his mother he had caught the "dip theory."

A Remarkable Result.

It makes no difference how many Physicians, or how much medicine you have tried, it is now an established fact that German Syrup is the only remedy which has given complete satisfaction in severe cases of Lung Disease. It is true there are yet thousands of persons who are predisposed to Throat and Lung Affections, Consumption, Hemorrhages, Asthma, Severe Colds settled on the Breast, Pneumonia, Whooping Cough, &c., who have no personal knowledge of Boschee's German Syrup. To such we would say that 50,000 dozen were sold last year without one complaint. Consumptives try just one bottle. Regular size 75c. Sold by C. F. Sears, Chestertown, and F. M. Goodwin, Millington.
