MARION deKALB SMITH.

God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform;
He plants His footsteps in the sea
And rides upon the storm.

His purposes will ripen fast,
Unfolding every hour;
The bud may have a bitter taste,
But sweet will be the flower."

Death at all times is sad, but doubly so when it comes without a moment's warning, striking down men in the very midst of all of life's activities. Marion deKalb Smith enjoyed the sweet companionship of his wife and fond daughter about the fireside Sunday evening, and retired to his peaceful abode.

In the middle of the night the Death Angel came and his life was snuffed out as the light of a candle. To say that this community was startled and shocked would be putting it mild. Our friends and neighbors seemed to be stunned by the terrific blow, especially coming in quick succession to the appallingly sudden demise of that large-hearted man, Capt. Daniel W. Hadaway, whose funeral Mr. Smith had attended in the afternoon of Sunday.

Marion Smith was the friend and companion of our father, and it was natural for us to become deeply attached to him in a friendship sincere and loyal. We feel exalted that we knew him; we revere his memory and rejoice that he was our friend. There was a nobleness in his nature, a brilliancy in his intellectual powers and a warm generosity in his big, loving heart that endeared him to a multitude of friends. His loss to the community is irreparable. He touched its interests at every point. With rare insight into character and keen powers of observation, he possessed an almost intuitive faculty of seeing into the heart of a situation and of estimating its merits. As a lawyer he had few equals. To a philosophical mind, an active and remarkably retentive memory, he added that refined and courtly manner that made him a gentleman in deed and in truth; while at the trial table he was an able and skillful antagonist and an advocate of unusual power and influence.

In public affairs he wielded a wide influence and his counsel and advise were sought after by the leaders throughout the State. In the nomination of Gov. Austin Crothers no one man had more to do with its success than the deceased. He loved his State, he loved his party and was true as steel to every trust.

Of the beauty and nobility of Marion de Kalb Smith's private life and character, it is difficult for those who knew him well to speak in terms of moderation. There were none indeed so blind in spirit or so dull of heart who could come into his kindly presence without feeling the elevating influence of a nature whose first principle was love and benevolence toward every living thing—a nature based upon an inborn Golden Rule of life—not reluctantly or as a duty, but freely and gladly, as if generosity and kindness were the highest privilege and pleasure, an essential part of his very existence, without which nothing would have been worth while to him. With a broad democracy that comes from a sense of justice and which was intensified in him by a wonderful personal humility, he knew no distinction of wealth or so-called social rank among men or women, but was as courteous and considerate to the poorest and the meanest as to the richest and the most powerful. The poor and needy received from him material help, backed with a sympathetic heart. These will be numbered with many others who will miss him keenly.

In his home he was idolized and watched over with tender care by his loved ones, and always sought its peaceful folds with joy and pleasure.

The truest and noblest of gentlemen in the best and highest sense of the word, loyal, loving and princely in the traits that mark the real royalty of manhood, the town, community and State have lost in him a type of citizenship more important to real greatness and moral permanence than any other they can possess.

Chief Judge James Alfred Pearce's words in reference to his friend and companion, the late Judge Brown, came to our mind here and can truly be spoken of Hon. Marion deKalb Smith.

"In his domestic and social life he was a gentleman without reproach, and to his intimates a delightful companion. But the crowning beauty of his life was that he was a true Christian. Though I had known him at the bar for many years, the sweetness and seriousness of his character were not known to me until brought into confidential relations with him. Then I learned it, and I feel that I can confidently say that his conscience, under the law, was his only guide, and that he loved God and man.

In all ages and under all creeds and doubts, men have believed in some sweet harbor of rest for themselves and for those who have passed away from earth forever. The untutored savage saw it in the happy hunting grounds which his imagination pictured as the scene of life to come; the unhappy unbeliever saw it in dark oblivion from the emptiness and ills of life; the faithful Christian sees and finds it in merciful God.

His religion was not of that stern unlovely sort which is dominated by the selfish fear of hell, but of that higher and nobler type which leads to the love of God because He is the good and gracious father of all."

Our feelings are best expressed in such lines as these from William Winter's tribute to a friend:

How shall words our grief abate?
Call him noble; call him great;
Say that faith, now gaunt and grim,
Once was fair because of him;
Say that goodness, round his way
Made one everlasting day;
Say that beauty's heavenly flame
Bourgeoned Wheresoe'er he came;
Say that all life's common ways
Were made glorious in his gaze;
Say he gave us, hour by hour
Hope and pat ence, grace and power;
Say his spirit was so true
That it made us noble too—
What is this but to declare
Life's bereavement, Love's despair?
What is this but just to say
All we loved is torn away?
O my comrade, O my friend,
If this parting be the end,
Yet I hold my life divine
To have known a soul like thine!

A PUBLIC SERVICE BILL should be passed by the Legislature.

WE believe that Maryland should have a Compulsory Primary Election Bill for both Democrats and Republicans.

THE indexing of the records in the Clerk's office for Kent county has been needed for some years, and in response to the appeal from every member of the bar, with possibly one exception, a bill has been passed authorizing the same.

SENATOR SLAY has the commendation of nearly everyone for his earnest action in the Senate Tuesday asking for the report of the State Banking Bill. Scores of meritorious bills never get out of the committee rooms unless just such an effort as Senator Slay made forces them out. Kent is proud of her representative.

PUBLIC SALE
OF A LARGE
Valuable Farm

THE undersigned will sell at the Middletown Hotel in Middletown, Delaware, on Thursday, April 14, '10

AT 2 O'CLOCK P. M.,

the farm known as the "DRUMMOND FARM," situated on the Bohemia River, in "Middle Neck," Cecil county, Maryland, containing more or less, 30 acres of which is set in good Chestnut Timber.

400 Acres

The large 11-room house and outbuildings are all in excellent condition, and the farm is well fenced; there are also two good tenant houses.

This is unquestionably one of the best producing Farms on the Peninsula, is well located and in a high state of cultivation. All farmers living within a radius of ten miles of Middletown will vouch for the truthfulness of the above statement; in fact it would be hard to find a farm containing better soil or producing larger crops, and if you are looking for a good investment you cannot find a better proposition. This farm will average 25 bushels wheat and 60 bushels corn per acre, and the soil has a good clay bottom and will hold any and all improvements put on it. The six large fields have a good natural drainage and there is not a foot of low or springy land on the farm. The corn tillage for this season will be 80 acres.

Will furnish free conveyance from Middletown station to all prospective purchasers any time previous to day of sale, if given due notice. The present tenant, Mr. John W. Redgrave, will show any one over the farm and give all information desired.

Terms of Sale.

Ten (10) per cent. of purchase price to be paid on day of sale; the remainder can be paid any time within 30 days from that day. Cost of conveyance to be paid by the purchaser.
