What a Farm Deed Conveys.

In an able address before the Massachusetts Board of Agriculture upon those legal questions which the farmer ought to understand, Judge Bennett gave the following as the law in relation to farm deeds, which draws the line between those things conveyed with the realty, and personal property which the person who sells has the right to remove. This law applies to Maryland as well as Massachusetts:

A farm deed conveys all the fences standing on the farm, but all might not think it so included the fencing stuff, rails, posts, etc., which had once been taken down and piled up for future use again in the same place. But new fencing material just bought and never attached to the rail would not pass.

So of the piles of hoop-poles stored away, if once used on the land, have been considered a part of it, but loose boards or scaffold beams laid loosely across the beams of a barn, and never fastened to them, would not be, and the seller of the farm might take them away.

Standing trees, of course, also pass as part of the land; so do trees blown or cut down, and still left in the woods where they fell, but not if cut or corded up for sale; it then becomes personal property.

If there be any manure in the barnyard, or in a compost heap on the field, ready for immediate use, the buyer ordinarily takes that also as belonging to the farm; though it might not be so if the owner had previously sold it to some other party, and collected it together in a heap by itself. Grown crops, also pass, by a deed of a farm, unless they are expressly reserved. When it is not intended to convey those it should be so stated in the deed itself; a mere oral agreement to that effect would not be valid in law. Another mode is to stipulate that possession is not to be given until some future day, in which the manure may be removed previous to that time. As to the buildings on the farm, though generally mentioned in the deed, it is not absolutely necessary that they should be specified. A deed of land ordinarily carries all the buildings to the grantee, whether mentioned or not, and this rule includes the lumber and timber of any old building which has been packed away for future use on the farm.

But if there be any buildings on the farm built by a third person, with the farmer's leave, the deed would not convey these, since such buildings are personal property, and do not belong to the land owner to convey. The real owner thereof might move them off, although the purchaser of the farm supposed he were buying and paying for all the buildings on it. His only remedy in such a case would be against the party selling the premises. As a part of the buildings conveyed, of course the window-blinds are included, even if they be at the time carried off to a painter's shop to be painted. It would be otherwise if they had been newly purchased and brought into the house, but not yet attached or fitted to it. Lightning rods also go with the house, if the farmer is foolish enough to have any on his house. A furnace in the cellar, brick or portable, is considered part of the house, but an ordinary stove, with a loose pipe running into the chimney, is not.

How to Judge a Horse.

The following simple rules will be found useful to all parties who are about to buy a horse:

1. Never take the seller's word; if dishonest he will be sure to cheat you; if disposed to be fair, he may have been the dupe of another, and will deceive you through representations which cannot be relied upon.

2. Never trust to a horse's mouth as a sure index to his age.

3. Never buy a horse while in motion; watch him while he stands at rest, and you will discover his weak points. If sound he will stand firmly and squarely on his limbs, without moving any of them, the feet planted flat upon the ground, with legs plumb and naturally poised. If one foot is thrown forward with the toe pointing to the ground and the weight taken from it, disease of the navicular bone may be suspected, or at least tenderness, which is a precursor of disease. If the foot is thrown out, the toe raised and the heel brought down the horse has suffered from lammitis, founder, or the back sinews have been sprained, and he is of little future value. When the feet are all drawn together beneath the horse if there has been no disease there is a misplacement of the limbs at least and a weak disposition of the muscles. If the horse stands with his feet spread apart or straddles with the hind legs, there is weakness of the loins and the kidneys are disordered. When the knees are bent and the legs totter and tremble, the breast has been ruined by heavy pulling and will never be right again, whatever rest and treatment he may have. Contracted or ill-formed hoofs speak for themselves.

4. Never buy a horse with a bluish or milky cast in his eyes. They indicate a constitutional tendency to ophthalmia, moon blindness, &c.

5. Never have anything to do with a horse who keeps his ears thrown backward. This is an invariable indication of bad temper.

6. If the horse's hind legs are scarred, the fact denotes that he is a kicker.

7. If the knees are blemished, the horse is apt to stumble.

8. When the skin is rough and harsh and does not move easily and smoothly to the touch, the horse is a heavy eater and his digestion is bad.

9. Avoid a horse whose respiratory organs are at all impaired. If the ear is placed at the side of the heart, and a wheezing sound is heard, it is an indication of trouble. Let him go.—Turf, Field and Farm.

EXCELLENT MAXIMS.—Hard words are like hailstones in summer, beating down and destroying what they would nourish were they melted into drops.

Truth and love are two of the most powerful things in the world; and when they both go together they cannot easily be withstood.

One quiet example of saintly living has more power in any church or in any community than the loudest talker there about entire sanctification.

Beauty, like the flowering blossoms, soon fades; but the divine excellence of the mind, like the medical virtues of the plant, remains in it when all the charms are withered.

Do little helpful things and speak helpful words whenever you can. They are better than pearls or diamonds to strew along the roadside of life, and will yield a far more valuable harvest.

IT is about time for those alleged Democratic newspapers which profess to be so anxious for Democratic success next fall, to cease flinging mud at individual candidates.

RAMBO LIME

Last year I purchased from Nathan Rambo the Blue Quarry upon the lands devised to him by his father, the elder Nathan Rambo. It was out of this Quarry that the Limestone came which gave this Lime its high reputation.

This, and this only, is the genuine RAMBO LIME.

I own ALL of the land on which this Stone lies. This Quarry was discontinued only because a vein of earth cut off the face. I have cut through this and re-opened these Quarries upon the original stone which old Nathan Rambo quarried as long as he could find it.

☞ We Challenge all tests.

Robert McCoy bought of me my Blue Quarry—I have seen it since he re-opened it, and am satisfied that he works on the Blue Stone worked by my father in his lifetime. NATHAN RAMBO.

☞ This Lime will be delivered by rail or water to all stations and boat landings in Maryland and Delaware.

I AM now the owner or lessee of ALL lime quarries on the lands of the late Nathan Rambo, in Montgomery co., Pa., except one quarry abandoned 35 years ago as worthless, and I am therefore the only person who can supply the GENUINE RAMBO LIME.

My quarries have been worked for fifty years, and the RAMBO LIME taken therefrom has no equal. The public is cautioned against buying inferior Lime purporting to come from the same quarries. My product has always been known as the RAMBO LIME, and it can only be obtained through me or my authorised agents.

The Lime sold by me is "run of kiln;" no lumps are taken from it and sold for building Lime.
