Rights of Land Owners to the Road.

We have before alluded to the law upon this subject, and will add the following, from Judge Bennett's law. If a farm deed is bounded by, on, or upon, a road, it usually extends to the middle of the roadway. There are a few exceptional cases; but ordinarily the farmer owns the soil of half the road, and may use the grass, trees, stones, gravel, sand or anything of value to him, either on the land or beneath the surface, subject only to the superior rights of the public to travel over the road, and that of the road supervisor to use such materials for the repair of the road; and these materials he may cart away and use elsewhere on the road, yet he has no right to use them for his own private purposes.

No other man has a right to feed his cattle there, or cut the grass or trees; much less to deposit his wood, old carts, wagons or other things thereon. The owner of a drove of cattle which stops to feed in front of your land, or of a drove of pigs which root up the soil, is responsible to you at law as much as if they did the same things inside the fence.

No one has a legal right to pick up the apples under your trees, although the same stand wholly outside the fence.

No traveler can hitch his horse to your trees in the sidewalk without being liable if he gnaws the bark or otherwise injures them. You may untie the horse and remove him to some safe place. If your well stands partly on your land and partly outside the fence, no neighbor can use it without your permission.

No man has a right to stand in front of your land and whittle or deface the fence, throw stones at your dog, or insult you with abusive language without being liable to you for trespassing on your land. He has a right to pass in an orderly and becoming manner—a right to use the road but not to abuse it.

A Little Advice.

We have frequently heard persons inquire the best way of dropping money into a contribution-box at church, and after carefully considering the subject we suggest the following rules—First, if you feel particularly mean and have only a penny to bestow, you must keep it well covered in your hand, and when the box is under your nose you must, with a quick, nervous motion, let your mite fall so that it shall escape observation,—second, if you have a quarter or any other silver coin of considerable size to give, you may hold it in plain sight between your thumb and fore finger, and when you deposit it you must let it drop from a comparatively loftly elevation, so that it may make a musical jingle when it reaches its destination,—thirdly, if you contemplate offering a bill, you must not take the money out of your vest-pocket untill the happy time comes when your neighbors can best see your unparalleled generosity. The moment the collector appears at the pew door is the one when you must fumble for your money, and then having methodically unfolded the bill and put on your eye-glasses to ascertain its denomination, you may slowly put it in the top of the box. These three rules, we believe, will be sufficient for all ordinary purposes. N. B.—A button should always be placed in a blank envelope.

The Etiquette of First Calls.

From Mrs. Grundy's Washington Letter.

The absurdities of Washington etiquette in the matter of "first calls" cannot be better illustrated than by mentioning how Mrs. Blaine and Mrs. Sherman have several times reversed their positions with respect to who should make the first call on the other. When Mr. Blaine first came here he was a member of the House of Representatives, and Mr. Sherman a senator, so Mrs. Blaine had to make the first call each year on Mrs. Sherman. When Mr. Blaine became Speaker, it was Mrs. Sherman's duty to call first on Mrs. Blaine. When he ceased to be Speaker, and was still a member of the House, the old order of things was restored. Then Mr. Blaine went into the Senate and Mr. Sherman into the Cabinet, and the order for first calls was again reversed; and now, as Mr. Blaine is in the Cabinet and Mr. Sherman in the Senate, it again became Mrs. Blaine's duty to make a first call on Mrs. Sherman. This she promptly did, and Mrs. Sherman returned it on Mrs. Blaine's first reception day as the wife of a cabinet officer.

A STRONG man is one whose passions stimulate his reason and whose reason controls his passions.

A MAN is great just in proportion to his superiority to the condition of life in which he is placed.

THERE is no strength in exaggeration; even the truth is weakened by being expressed too strongly.
