CHESTERTOWN.

SATURDAY MORNING.....JAN. 20, 1883.

THE GIVE-AWAY GAME.

"Do you know," said a man who was selling jewelry from a dry goods box, to a reporter for the Atlanta Constitution, "that the Americans are the easiest humbugged of any in the world? It is true, and I have helped to humbug them as much as the average man." Some time had just been reading an account of the Louisville lottery drawing, which brought forth the speech.

"Can't you tell us some of your experience in humbugging?" asked a man near.

"Well you would laugh to know what fools people make of themselves sometimes. About two weeks ago I was down in Brunswick, where I saw a fellow running a perfectly square game, for which was the most out-and-out steal I ever heard of. His plan was simple, and hundreds of times the very best people of the town flocked to give him a trial. He rented a store and put a showcase across the counter in the centre. In the showcase he had, I know, my hat full of $10 and $20 gold coins, piled in a heap in one corner, and in the other about the same sized pile of silver dollars. A dice box and six dice completed his outfit. By paying 50 cents a man had one throw with the dice. If he threw six sixes he took the entire pile of gold; if he threw six aces he was entitled to all the silver. Of course he knew no one ever threw all the sixes, neither was it possible to get the aces to come all in a bunch. A man might as well expect to get struck by lightning from a cloudless sky at noonday as to throw six aces; it is almost an impossibility, that's all. Well, the fellow made several hundred dollars and left."

"Did you ever hear of how easy it was to fool a man with soap?" continued the talker. "We street men know that as an old story, of course. I was down to Troy, Ala., several months ago, when a fellow came along almost strapped. He went to a grocery store, bought a few bars of this transparent soap, cut it into small pieces about the size of one's thumb, wrapped it in colored tissue paper very neatly, and then covered the package with tin foil, sprinkling the whole with a bottle of cologne to give it a good smell. Well, sir, that fellow got on a box and soon gathered a crowd by some nice talking, and proposed to take out all the grease from hats, coats, etc., that could be brought in. The first case presented was the city marshal, who walked up with a great spot on his coat which he wanted taken out. The fellow carried a sponge well saturated with benzine and arnica, which of itself will take out almost anything, and by using a bit of soap soon had the marshal's coat entirely free from grease. That started the soap sales, and in two or three hours, it being Saturday and a crowd in town, the soap man had sold $36 worth, nearly all of which was clear profit."

Stopping to draw a long breath the jewelry man continued his interesting story. "I tell you you can humbug anybody. I am not unlike the rest of the world. I believe I would bite at my own tricks if I could get in the crowd."

"While I was at Brunswick, Ga., some time ago, I took revenge on the town by playing what we term the 'give-away' racket. It is a mighty fine thing to play, but a very dangerous one in some localities. I had been using a big umbrella large enough to cover fifty people, when one night on the street a crowd of sailors, led on by some of the town boys, threw rotten eggs at the umbrella and broke up the crowd. Then I resolved on the 'give away racket.' A fellow has to be mighty careful about working it, or he will get caught out. It can only be played once in a town.

"The way to do it is this: Get a lot of fine gold rings, which cost about $1 a dozen, and propose to be advertising some big gold concern in New York. I called mine the brazed gold of San Francisco, stated that I would show the crowd a thing or two, and soon got them interested. First, I made a speech in which I stated my business, then I commenced to offer the rings at any price from 2 cents up, telling them that they could not be bought for less than $4 a piece at a jeweler's. I let out about twenty rings at 2 cents, and then asked everybody who had rings to hold them up. Instantly everything was in the air. 'Now,' said I, addressing the crowd, 'this is your money, is it?' 'Yes' said a dozen. 'And you give it up freely for the rings? 'Yes' came again in chorus. 'Very well, here's 20 cents for you, sir, and 20 cents for you, sir,' and so on around the crowd. They commenced to wonder what in the world I meant; said I was crazy, and a lot of other things, but I told them I was advertising goods for my house, and had plenty more things to give away. Next I took up some of my handsome diamond studs, which I explained were Lake George diamonds, equal to any on earth, etc., and that I was going to sell them from 25 cents up, the more one paid the better it would be, of course, for him. Twenty studs were soon out, and the same speech made. Then I made the crowd hold up the diamonds, and each man got 50 cents back who had bought.

"The thing began to get very interesting, and the crowd numbered 300 or 400. Then I got out some beautiful gold-plated sleeve-buttons, which I explained could not be bought for less than $12. These I proposed to sell for fifty cents each, giving to all who bought a dollar additional as before, each time doubling the money gift. The buttons soon went off, as had the other things, and I was ready for the final 'bite' at the crowd. The twenty pairs of sleeve-buttons had been sold for half a dollar, and I had given back twenty silver dollars. "That fellow's a darned fool," I heard all around me, but I replied to this by saying that last week, in Macon, I had given away $1,500, and that I was ready to do it again.

"The crowd was perfectly crazy to see what came next. It was watch chains. The chains I was to sell at any price from $2.50 to anything above that one wanted to give, I telling them the while that the more they paid the better it would be for them. I hinted that the watches would come next, and this let them off like a lot of madmen. The trick now was to sell as many chains as possible at $2.50. I had a devil of a lot of chains, and so I sent them out right and left. The dollars came rushing blindly at me, and I raked them in like chaff. Then I got out of chains.

"Previously I had prepared two big red silk handkerchiefs, exactly alike, and as soon as the chains were all sold I took the money, and, in the presence of the crowd, tied it all up together, and, after making a speech, proposed to throw the bundle into the crowd for the best man to take. While talking I purposely dropped the bundle into my box by my side, in which I had the other handkerchief. In this was $10 in silver and some paper to make it stand out and look like the one I had dropped. All this had been arranged beforehand, of course. With a whoop I swung the bag around my head after stooping to pick it up where I first dropped it, and up it went into the air. Great heavens! you should have seen the mob! I never saw anything like it. They fought like tigers over the handkerchief, while I took occasion to leave the spot. I had also arranged to bring the thing to a climax about the time the Albany train left, so I was driven at once to the depot. I was just $280 ahead. But I got very weak in the knees while waiting at the depot. I was a little too soon, and about a dozen young men ran up, raising the very mischief of a noise, which I thought was for me, and it proved to be true. They saw me and came around me, laughing and knocking each other like crazy men. I didn't know what on earth was the matter, until they finally told me it was the best joke that had ever been played on Brunswick, and, although they had been victimized, they wanted to assure me it was all right.

"I had sold the chains to nearly all the best men in Brunswick, some of them paying me as high as $5 for them. I was satisfied to leave, and had my revenge. You may put it down for a fact that any average American crowd can be humbugged the same way every day in the year."

FOGG at the opera: Fogg was at the opera the other evening, and sat in front of a young gentleman who showed his musical knowledge by humming the airs as they occurred. At the close of the first act, Fogg turned around to say, in a voice sufficiently loud to be heard by a score of others: "I am very much obliged to you, sir, for the little concert you have been giving me; you are very kind, but, to tell you the truth, they made so much noise on the stage that I didn't enjoy it nearly as much as I ought." The young gentleman said nothing, but he looked volumes. During the second act he omitted the obligato, and the stage people had to get on as best they could without it.—Boston Transcript.

THE COLORED CONFERENCE.—Bishop Foster, in a telescopic view of fourteen thousand miles of travel, says that the Delaware Conference, which, we believe, includes the colored churches in this locality, "impressed me as, in all respects, one of the ablest we have in this important department of our great work in the South. No one could be present during a session of that body now, and compare it with itself ten years ago, without feeling how great a work has been accomplished. My own conviction is that history furnishes no example of progress equal to that of our colored people in the United States in the same length of time since the Emancipation."

THE story is told of Bishop Philander Chase, who had a splendid personal presence, that a countryman once accosted him as:

"General."

"I am not General," he curtly replied.

"I beg pardon. I mean Judge."

"I am not Judge, either."

"Well then, Bishop."

"Why do you call me Bishop? How do you know that I am a Bishop."

"Well, I knowed," said the man of homespun sense, "whatever you was, you was at the top."

"IF you want to be truly happy, my dear," said one New York lady to another, "you will have neither eyes nor ears when your husband comes home late from the club." "Yes, I know," answered the other, wearily; "but what am I to do with my nose?"

"DID you ever run for sheriff?" asked Poots, of a Cumminsville man. "Only once," was the reply, "and I wouldn't then if there hadn't been two deputies with him."—Cincinnati Saturday Night.

WE usually leave it to doctors to recommend medicine, but Parker's Ginger Tonic has been so useful in our family in relieving sickness and suffering, that we cannot say too much in its praise.—Salem Argus. See adv.

FARM WAGON

And Iron Frame Cultivator

To Our Friends and the Public:

In introducing these Wagons on the Peninsula, we feel that we are doing something to benefit the public. It seems to be the unanimous verdict of Farmers that our Wagons track better and run lighter than any others made on the Peninsula. This was the decision of the Judges of the Worton Fair, held in September, 1881. Every piece is carefully selected, and nothing but the best material is used.

Our DEARBORNS and CARTS are EXCELLED BY NONE.

Have Signed or Endorsed the Following Remarkable Document:

Messrs. Seabury & Johnson, Manufacturing Chemists, 21 Platt St., New York:

Gentlemen:—For the past few years we have sold various brands of Porous Plasters. Physicians and the Public prefer Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster to all others. We consider them one of the very few reliable household remedies worthy of confidence. They are superior to all other Porous Plasters or Liniments for external use.

Benson's Capcine Plaster is a genuine Parmaceutical product, of the highest order of merit, and so recognized by physicians and druggists.

When other remedies fail get a Benson's Capcine Plaster.

You will be disappointed if you use cheap Plasters, Liniments, Pads or Electrical Magnetic toys.

A CURE REMEDY AT LAST. Price 25cts. MEAD'S Medicated CORN and BUNION PLASTER.
