EASY MARKS FOR EASY MARKS

With German marks being peddled around at three for a cent perhaps there was an excuse for the New York wag who in trying to sell a bill of such goods a week or so ago remarked in passing that "this is the day of easy marks," and then proceeded to unload on the unwary. It may be well to remember there are many "astute" money changers in the big cities who are loaded up with the German coinage and who are casting right and left to find a market for their unpopular treasure. There is always a temptation to buy a hundred thousand dollars "worth" of money for a five dollar bill or whatnot. Those who are inclined to yield to such Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford temptation, however, should remember the Confederate bills that are stacked up in the garrets of little homes from the Atlantic to the Pacific, so that when the great city propaganda begins, aimed as it will be first at "Stablizing the German monetary system," they will see the part of wisdom is to seal up their pocket books.

That Germany will come back there can be no doubt, because the Germans are an industrious people. They are likely to regain power while the world sleeps, but no matter how rapidly they get to their feet it is generally agreed that before they run very far the whole of their monetary system will have to be changed, and in the new issue of the national stock the existing financial tokens will be tremendously reduced in value if not entirely wiped out. "Beware the Greeks bearing gifts" may still with wisdom be kept in the public mind.

WEAKLINGS, TEA HOUNDS AND CAKE EATERS

We wonder if the Rev. J. K. Stewart, of the Northwestern Alumni Association believes the country is going to the demnition bow-wows because he insists the university students are developing into spineless weaklings, tea hounds, and cake eaters.

"Athletics," says Dr. Stewart, "have become impossible. There is no need to hire coaches so long as this situation continues. Out of 1,700 male students in this university only 22 turned out to take part in athletics. Young men are developing into spineless weaklings instead of real men. This condition must or will stop or the ruin of the university is inevitable."

All very interesting, but perhaps the cause of the trouble may be found in those who conduct the colleges rather than in the young gentlemen who attend them. If college athletics were stripped of their trickery and the students were not compelled to mingle with rough necks and ignoramuses camouflaged as college men but in reality hired for pay to keep up the athletic standards of the teams, those who are legitimately engaged in rounding out their education might take a deeper interest in their college athletics. The trouble is that college sport has been turned into a business. The professor, in the study room, prates of high moral standards and then urges the young men to hot foot it to the athletic field, there to "rah, rah, rah" over the achievements of some husky "student" who, save for his skill on its field, would not get within ten miles of a college campus. When amateur athletics are kept as amateur athletics perhaps the call of the tea cup will not be so enticing.

CECIL COUNTY CLUB BOYS SAIL TODAY

College Park, June 12—When the Cunard liner, Carmania, pulls out of New York harbor today (June 15th) it will have aboard Warren Rice, George Worrilow and Joseph Glackin, of Cecil county, Md., the three Maryland boys who last October won the trip to the English Royal stock show at Cambridge, England, by defeating thirteen other state teams at the Southeastern Fair, at Atlanta, Ga., in judging dairy cattle, beef cattle, sheep and swine.

The three boys will be accompanied by W. C. Snarr, county agent of Montgomery county, Md., who trained the team for its victory at Atlanta while he was county agent of Cecil county; E. G. Jenkins, state boys' club agent of Maryland; and C. L. Chambers of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The party expects to spend six weeks in Europe, the feature of the trip being the opportunity to see the extensive exhibit of cattle at the English royal stock show which opens at Cambridge, July 4th. The Carmania will reach Liverpool about June 23d and during the period between arrival and the opening of the show, the party will stop off at numerous estates between Liverpool and London which they have been invited to visit.

Just what the program will be after the party reaches London has not been determined, but a livestock judging contest between "America's best" and a selected team of English boys has been suggested. While the English government does not support boys' club work as it is carried on in America under the department of agriculture here, there is a similar organization in England promoted by private interests from which a team might be picked to compete with our boys.

Following the show the boys will be given an opportunity to visit worthwhile points in England and on the continent. The Guernsey and Jersey isles, the native home of the Guernsey and Jersey breeds of dairy cattle, in Scotland, the home of the Ayrshire, and Holland, where the Holstein was bred, will be points of particular interest to the travelers. On the continent the party expects to visit some of the battlefields of France and see something of Paris and other points of interest.
