Seaford, Md., June 3—At the annual town election yesterday, with William Benson and Alozo Conley as candidates, the former was elected town commissioner, replacing Ira Sullivan. Mr. Benson, recently of Baltimore, owns and operates the Oxford ice plant, while Mr. Conley, who designed and built the well-known Purnell T. White while at Sharptown, now owns and manages the shipyard here.

At the same time citizens voted down a proposition to bond the town to a limit of $30,000 to establish water-works.

Why the ALEMITE Gas-Co-Lator is a necessity

Aside from lack of lubrication, eighty per cent of motor trouble is due to improper carburetion. And most cases of incorrect "mixture" result from dirt and water in the gasoline system.

The smallest particle of dirt, lint or water lodged in the carburetor often will make the mixture too rich or too lean. If too rich, the engine is flooded. Gasoline seeps into the crank case, thinning the oil. Scored cylinder walls and worn bearings follow. Too much gasoline always means repair bills. Too lean a mixture causes the motor to spit and backfire, even stall.

Dirt and water often completely block the fuel supply either at the vacuum tank or in the carburetor.

The Alemite Gas-Co-Lator prevents such trouble. It automatically filters the gasoline as you drive. Dirt and water can't clog the carburetor, vacuum tank or pipe line of a car that's equipped with the Gas-Co-Lator.

Quickly installed, it needs no attention save occasional cleaning. Just loosen the binding screws on the Gas-Co-Lator, remove the glass bowl, and chamois filter and clean both thoroughly with gasoline.

You'll be surprised at the dirt and water that the Gas-Co-Lator will catch.
