A wealthy, middle-aged widower named Dominick Mines owns a farm on the border of Wayne and Luzerne counties, Pennsylvania. It is occupied by a farmer named Obert, and Mines boarded there with his family. Obert's daughter Lena is a pretty girl of eighteen years. Both Obert and his wife are noted for being extremely close-fisted, and for an almost insane desire to be rich. A month or so ago Mines offered to make a deed of a farm near the one on which he lived if he would give him his daughter in marriage. Although the daughter was ignorant of the fact that the widower Mines desired to marry her, her parents eagerly accepted his offer. They said nothing to the girl about their intentions towards her, and Mines never alluded to the subject in his daily conversation with her. The Oberts at once began to prepare for the wedding, which was set down for the evening of October 1. Week before last Mrs. Obert greatly astonished her daughter by telling her that she intended to give a large party. She gave her no hint, however, as to what the occasion of the party was to be. The people who were invited were also not informed of the true character of the gathering. The fact that the Oberts were to give a party created great surprise in the neighborhood, as they had never been known before to extend the slightest hospitality to any one. A new dress was ordered for Lena, and it was brought home from Scranton by her father on the afternoon of the day of the party. With it were so many things that suggested bridal apparel that the girl laughingly said to her mother that if she wore them people would think she was to be a bride. Her mother thereupon told her all, and that the neighbors had been invited to witness her marriage to Dominick Mines. A neighbor's girl, who had been engaged to help in the house on that day and evening, says upon hearing the truth about the party Lena stood for some time staring at her mother, pale and speechless. Then she seized the wedding garments, and, tearing them into shreds, scattered them about the room. After denouncing both her father and mother for their unnatural conduct, she left the house. She walked all the way to Scranton, where she has friends, whom she is still with. The true situation at Oberts' was explained to the guests as they arrived for the party, and all of them left the house filled with indignation at the parents of the girl, and with feelings of sympathy and admiration for the daughter who had so bravely refused to barter herself for their gain.

Why He Trusted Him.

Some fifty years ago a gentleman from the Southern States was obliged, on a long journey, to pass through the wild regions now known as West Virginia. He was an avowed infidel, often saying that Christianity was false, and would ultimately lose its influence and die out.

He had been advised to make a certain part of his journey by day, as at night these regions spoken of were very unsafe. But as he was delayed, he went on his way through this very region when night overtook him.

Approaching a small cabin and inquiring where he was, he found to his dismay that he was in the very neighborhood he had been warned to avoid; but thinkiug it as dangerous to go backward as forward, he determined to stop where he was.

So he entered the hut, in which there was only a woman, and among the rude furniture saw knives that to his eyes looked very large and guns enough for many assailants.

Before long the cottager himself came in, a rough mountaineer, and in a frank but very uncouth manner welcomed the stranger, who quietly took a seat.

When supper was ready they asked him to draw up and eat with them, but as his appetite was spoiled by his anxiety and fear, he declined, saying he was not hungry. After supper and a long silence, he expressed a desire to rest and the cottager replied:

"You can lie down wherever you like on the floor there. I am sorry I haven't anything better to offer you. But we always, before going to sleep, read a chapter in this book," taking down a Bible, "and ask God to take care of us through the night."

The stranger's relief from anxiety and fear was instantaneous. The book which he had often ridiculed and opposed, he at once felt was the guarantee of his safety during the silent watches of the night, and he lay down as securely and quietly to his rest as if he had been in his own home, and with a lesson to his conscience and sober judgment that made him a wiser and a better man.

DON'T SPILL THE MILK.—"There is no use crying over spilled milk," says the old saw. If you are not only bald, but have no life in the roots of your hair, there is no use crying over that, either. Take both time and yourself by the forelock while there is a forelock left. Apply Parker's Hair Balsam to your hair before matters get worse. It will arrest the falling off of your hair and restore its original color, gloss and softness. It is a perfect dressing withal, clean, sichly perfumed, cools and heals the realp.

Home testimony the best in the world: Mr. W. F. Porter, a well-known Attorney-at-Law, No. 40 St. Paul street, says he has used J. M. Laroque's Anti-Bilious Bitters for chronic diseases of the Liver and derangement of the Stomach, and recommends it as a certain specific in those diseases—try it and be convinced. Sold by all druggists. 25 cents a paper or $1 a bottle. W. E. Thornton, proprietor, Baltimore, Md. 10 18 2t.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS AND ALL WHO ARE INTERESTED IN ROADS. We would call your attention to the

MENDENHALL PATENT ROAD MACHINE

And the many advantages we claim for it over all others: 1. It is a two-horse machine and the only one. 2. It will move as much dirt with two horses as any other machine can with four or six and with less labor for the horses. 3. We claim a more durable machine, as we have a direct draft and use elastic cushions to relieve the jar or strain on machine and horses. 4. We claim it will do its work without sliding sideways, for the reason that the wheels are not lifted off ground as others are. 5. We claim that our machine will pay for itself in three days' work and the roads will be in better condition than it is possible to have them by the old way. 6. We claim that we can turn our machine in a 11-feet road thereby losing no time in finding a convenient place to turn.
