DEATH OF MRS. MILLER.

On Tuesday last our community was shocked to hear of the death of Mrs. Mary C. Miller. Mrs. Miller has not been in the best of health since Christmas, but at times was seemingly well, until about two weeks ago, she became weaker and on Monday one week before she died she called in her physician and in a few days she was thought to be herself again and all during Sunday she was as bright and happy as could be until about 3 o'clock; she was sitting on the front porch with some friends when she received a slight stroke of pralysis which soon caused unconsciousness. Every thing that could be done by human aid was done by kind and ministering friends and physician. Her loving children were untiring in their efforts to restore their mother but the Lord only came to claim His own. Mrs. Miller was the daughter of the late John C. Davis and a sister of John C. Davis of this town.

She was known throughout the county for her loving deeds of kindness and charity. Wherever she went she carried sunshine. Her house was the brightest spot on earth to her when her children were around her. About eleven years ago she was left with a family of eight children to care for and rear, some of them very young. Her husband, the late William T. Miller, died in November 1896.

Mrs. Miller at the time of her death was conducting a boarding house in Rock Hall. She is survived by eight children, viz., Mrs. C. N. Satterfield, Merritt, Wilbur, Nannie, Maude, Raymond, Hessey and Norris; one sister, Mrs. Thomas McIntyre and Mrs. J. D. Davis. The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. Warren Burr, from her late residence Friday morning at 10 o'clock. Interment in Chester cemetery.

GIRL'S LONG TRIP TO WED.

Traveling Alone From London To Alaskan Town On Miner's Dare.

A lonesome trip of 12,000 miles from London to an obscure mining town in the artic circle, as a result of a dare to keep a date for a wedding set seven years ago is the final chapter in the romance of Miss Clara G. Askwith, who recently passed through New York bound for Candle City, Alaska, where on July 1 she is to marry W. J. Wells, a successful gold miner, says the New York Mail.

Miss Askwith, who arrived on the Minnehaha, was the guest over night of the family of W. Scott Patmore, auditor of the Cafe Martin, who are old friends of her family, but she cut short her visit so as to speed across the continent without loss of time. From Seattle she will take a steamship to Nome, whence she will make her way to Candle City by sled.

The marriage ceremony will be performed by Justice J. C. Kepner immediately upon the arrival of the bride. Candle City is 300 miles north of Nome and is one of the northernmost cities in the territory. Miss Askwith is taking this trip because her fiance, in a letter, accused her of not having enough nerve to keep the date of the wedding on account of the immense distance that separated them.

Since he went to Alaska seven years ago Mr. Wells has become possessor of valuable gold mines, and they need his constant attention.

"Either you or I must make the trip to keep our pledge to each other," wrote Wells to her. "It is next to impossible for me to leave Alaska. Have you the nerve to travel here to me?"

To which she replied promptly:

"Expect me in Nome on July 1st. Make arrangements for wedding. I accept your challenge to make the trip."

Wells took a mining engineering degree in a London technical school in 1900. At that time he became engaged to Miss Askwith, and it was agreed that the wedding would not take place until Wells had made his fortune. He left England for Alaska a few weeks later.

"Miss Askwith comes from an estimable family in London," said Mr. Patmore. "She and Mr. Wells have been friends since childhood. They were schoolmates for several years and never were apart from each other for any length of time."

YOUNG TREES IN TOWN.

Course of Real Estate Operators That is Worthy of Emulation.

It is noted in Brooklyn that a few surburban real estate operators are setting trees on property which is on the market for building purposes or on which the builders themselves intend to erect dwellings. This is so obviously a wise problem that it is a wonder only "a few" are following it says the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle. Having purchased a tract of land and divided it into streets and building lots, the wise owner will at once plant trees in suitable places and start them growing before a cellar is dug. The property is thus made more attractive and salable, for nothing can be much more dreary than a residence district without trees.

As a result of rapid growth in population and building, the tendency is to deprive city streets of shade which they have long enjoyed. The sacrifice of a noble oak or maple or elm is always a cause of mourning, but the slaughter goes on in the name of "improvement." The only compensation is to plant and foster trees on new streets and lots. Those who perform this task diligently will earn the thanks of future generations.
