MARYLAND WILDLIFE

Prepared by the MARYLAND GAME & INLAND FISH COMMISSION

WHITE-TAILED DEER

(Odocoileus virginianus virginianus. Derivation, "odous" from Greek meaning tooth, and "kilo" meaning hollow, and "virginianus" from Latin meaning of Virginia.)

RANGE: Found in all 23 counties of Maryland; most abundant in the Western and Eastern Shore counties; increasing in Southern and Central Maryland.

BREEDING: One male forms a herd with 2-3 females, fighting rival bucks; breeds in October- November; 1-3 spotted fawns born seven months later, each weighing, at birth, about 3¾ lbs. Young hidden and nursed every 4 hours; (people should not disturb fawns) by 4-5 weeks follow mother; weaned and lose spotted coat at 4 months; doe have no antlers, follow mother 2 years or breed first year; bucks follow mother 1 year, have antlers which are shed annually, first set in most cases have no prongs or branches; animals are then called "spike bucks"; succeeding years, the branches increase snow large development after the first year depending on food quality and quantity. The points do not necessarily increase with the years unless feed is A-1 every year. But the health of deer have more to do with it. Average span of life is about 10 years.

HABITS: Raising the tail and showing the white underside when disturbed is considered [illegible] gesture to others. C[illegible] [illegible]nt County.

MANAGEMENT: Much controversy among public as to what deer eat. In Spring and Summer they nip the tender buds and leaves of grasses, legumes, vines, wild flowers and trees. In the Fall, store away layers of fat for coming cold and gorge on acorns and other mast. In Winter, subsist on what is at hand; pick and nibble on twigs, needles, buds, catkins and other native vegetation. Nearly all native grasses are heavily utilized. Food patch plantings of common grains, grasses and legumes within woodlands and establishing large refuges have been effective in building the population in Maryland and at the same time helping farmers protect crops against deer damage. Screw-worm and botfly infestation may take a greater yearly toll than is generally realized.

VALUE: A most valuable game animal providing sport, flesh, hide, and trophies of high grade. About 1500 or more killed annually in [illegible]d; record weight—232 lbs., [illegible]nt County.
