WEALTH ON THE EASTERN SHORE

A New York Agriculturist Declares Land As Rich As Any In America.

Edward Van Alstyne, a farmer of Kinderhook, N. Y., writing in the New York Tribune Farmer from the Eastern Shore, says:

"This week finds me in a region rich in history and romance—rich also in its soil and products as well as the abounding sea food in the bays and rivers. The oyster industry alone, with its fleet of boats in every cove, is yielding wealth equal to that of many of the mines of the Klondike. This was the home of the diamondback terrapin. So plentiful were they that there is still a law on the statute books prohibiting a man feeding terrapin to a slave whom he had hired more than twice a week. Alas! there is little danger of this now, for they are rare indeed.

"There are nine counties on the Shore, with Cecil on the north and Worcester on the south, in Maryland, with two Virginia counties farther South. These two counties, while as low as those just north of them in Maryland, are of a light soil. The abundant water makes this land exceedingly productive. I was told that their annual crop of potatoes, including both sweet and white, was about 5,000,000 bushels. Delaware, with its three counties, near by, is a part of this shore, and formerly belonged to Maryland.

"Many of the old families have gone from the farms, and a large proportion of the best farmers are the descendants of the overseer class of slavery days—men who knew how to make a crop and to work. They rented at first and afterward bought many of the old farms. The whole family worked. They made money, educated their children, and today are most prosperous farmers.

"The whole of these shore counties are very flat, the lower counties from 4 to 8 feet above sea level, the upper ones about 75, and the rise is gradual. They grow many strawberries. Seaford, in Delaware, last summer shipped 14 cars of them daily, with other places not far behind. Sweet potatoes are largely grown, with a good many white ones, both first and second crop.

"Tomatoes are coming to be more and more a leading crop. Doubtless, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia will be the places where tomatoes for canning will be most largely grown. Their long season enables them to grow a large tonnage, and they are not restricted to early varieties, which are small yielders. As we reach the higher levels we find many growing melons, both musk and water. Corn and wheat are staple crops from one end of the territory to the other.

"North from here we begin to find orchards of peaches, pears and apples. The Delaware peninsula was formerly the great peach section. While many are still grown and there are some fine orchards, the most profitable orchards in the State are on the mountain slopes in Western Maryland. The San Jose scale is abundant and has destroyed many trees. The thorough work done by the experiment station has put the growers in command of the situation. Predatory insects, including a large number of ladybugs, have been quite abundant the last season, feeding on the scale.

"Upper counties raise a good deal of hay, and a goodly number of cows are kept. In the lower ones they are conspicuous by their absence, and most of the cornstalks are wasted. Yet butter sells for 30 cents a pound the year around.

"There is a strip of country north of Dover, Del., from the Chesapeake to Delaware Bay, about 60 miles across and some 20 miles north and south, which I believe as fine farm land as any in the United States. This may seem a strong statement, but I make it understandingly.

"A growing season extending from March to well through October, with mild winters; a rainfall seven inches above the average of New York State, yet with abundant sunshine; level land, sandy loam easily worked and adapted to all crops grown in this latitude; within easy reach of the best markets in the world—where will we find its counterpart? Not in the much vaunted prairies of the Middle West, nor in California, far distant from our Eastern markets, nor in our Empire State, with its short seasons and cold winters.

"What is land worth? In the lower counties, where the land is low and restricted to a few crops, and some of it further north which is light sand and unimproved, from $10 to $30. In the section just described, with not very good buildings other than the houses, about $60. All this land is rising in value and will continue to rise as better methods and men are coming to the fore.

"One reason why this favored region has not come into greater prominence is the effect on the people of the mild climate and naturally favorable surroundings. Such never stimulate effort. A gentleman remarked to me last night: 'If laziness was a crime our penitentiaries would be full. Any man who will hustle can get rich here.'

"It would have required little stretch of the imagination (except the temperature was too low) to have made one think he was in Florida this morning as we sailed up the Pocomoke river to Snow Hill, the county seat of Worcester county."

FINE BASE BALL GAMES.

About 500 persons witnessed the Washington College-St. Johns game on Saturday afternoon last at Washington College. It was a great game and up to the seventh inning the score was 1 to 0 in St. Johns favor. In the seventh the Annapolis boys scored 3 runs, but they were well earned and made from hits well bunched. It was a fast game of base ball. In the last inning Washington scored her only run. The fielding of the Washington team was giltedged and Prof. Thompson the W. C. Coach deserves high praise for bringing the youngsters to such a high state of excellence. The best playing for St. Johns was done by Bosley, Austin and Robinson, three men who are said to be as close to professionals as possible.

Johns pitched a fine game for W. C. White caught everything that came near first base as did Wilson at second. Thos. Massey was umpire. Washington's inability to hit was the cause of her losing the game.

Chestertown High School base ball team added another victory to their unbroken record on Saturday last when they vanquished the Church Hill team. Fifteen of the Church Hill batsmen fanned the air; Jarman had complete control and speed. The score was 5 to 1.

The P. O. S. of A. base ball team anticipate an exciting game Saturday afternoon on the home grounds at the old railroad, when they will cross sticks with the best team of Rock Hall.

Chestertown High School will return the Kennedyville school team's game Saturday The C. H. S. boys are in good form and feel confident of victory.

The P. O. S. of A. base ball team hope to go on the field Saturday all clad in new suits of blue. The boys have raised a sufficient amount of cash by subscription to furnish a full team with fine suits; their order was placed with Marshall E. Smith, the sporting goods man of Philadelphia and they hope to receive the same by Saturday. The suits will be blue with the letters P. O. S. of A. in white across the breast.

THE POULTRY YARD.

The deadly louse is at work.

Do not expect the stock to thrive without any green food.

June is a hot month; do not neglect the supply of fresh water.

Look out for rats. Do not allow them to have any hiding places near the coops.

Cut down the quantity of heating food in the ration, such as corn, and feed plenty of green stuff.

If you give your hens plenty of mixed feed, so arranged that they can sort it over, they will balance their own ration.

Placing slatted racks over the water troughs is a good way to keep the festive ducks from wasting their drinking water.

Put everything drinkable into shallow vessels. Fix it so that the chicks can drink and still not get their feet into the water or milk.

Don't be afraid to give the chicks all the sour milk they will eat. Good for them. If there is anything better I have never found it.

Are your chicks bothered with gapes? Well, spade up a portion of the yards each morning and induce the chicks to burrow in the freshly-turned earth, rather than to allow them access to the rotten wood yard, where the trouble lies.

Now is the time when the roosts of most hen houses are more or less alive with the terrible little mites. In kerosene we have a cheap and never-failing remedy. Soak the roosts with it from time to time; or, still better, spray it all over the inside of the building, reaching every crack and crevice. It kills wherever it touches, and the treatment will save much suffering to the poor fowls, and money for the owner.

DEATH OF MRS. JOSEPH WRIGHT.

Mrs. Joseph Wright died at midnight last Monday after a lingering illness of more than three months, at her home on Dover street, Easton. Her death, while particularly sad, was not unexpected. Mrs. Wright had many friends in this community as well as in her native county, Queen Anne's. She possessed a pleasing personality and charming manners. She was foremost in church and charitable work; responded gladly whenever she could be of any assistance.

She was a daughter of the late W. E. Faithful. Her husband, a brother, W. E. Burke Faithful, of Church Hill, three sisters, Mrs. George E. Hadaway, of Easton, Mrs. Edwin S. Valliant, of Church Hill, and Mrs. W. D. Coe, of Baltimore, and a daughter by her first husband Mrs. Victor Valliant, of New York, formerly Miss Ethel Aldridge, survive her.

Funeral services were held at Christ Church at noon Thursday Rev. Dr. Davies officiating, assisted by Bishop Adams. Interment was in Spring Hill cemetery. The pallbearers were Edwin S. Valliant, W. E. Valliant, Burke Faithful, M. T. Goldsborough, Drs. Edward R. Trippe and Charles F. Davidson. N. E. Clark, funeral director.
