A CARD OF APPRECIATION.

In retiring from business, which my failing sight compels, I wish to return my grateful thanks to the many friends and patrons who have stood by me so faithfully and some of them by my father before me. It is with much feeling and great regret that I have faced the inevitable and given up the business I have been engaged in so long, and in which I have achieved a reputation that any one may well envy.

Again thanking all my friends, I desire to recommend my successor, MR. CHARLES L. DODD, to their liberal patronage, feeling sure of his ability to conduct the business in the most acceptible manner. Respectfully, m9-tf. JOHN N. DODD.

BISHOP A. A. CURTIS ILL.

Well-Known Prelate In Critical Condition at Ocean City.

GUEST OF BISHOP MONAGHAN

Assistant to Cardinal Gibbons is Said to Have Cancer of Stomach—Born in Somerset County.

A special dispatch to the Sun last week from Ocean City, Md., says:

"Bishop Alfred A. Curtis, of Baltimore, one of the most eminent prelates of the Catholic Church and former bishop of the Diocese of Wilmington, is critically ill here with cancer of the stomach. It was announced tonight that he was much weaker and will probably not survive many hours. He is the guest of Bishop Monaghan, of Wilmington, at the latter's cottage.

"Bishop Curtis who was 77 years of age today, has been with Bishop Monaghan at this seaside resort for a week. He has not been able to retain any nourishment for a fortnight, not even water. As a result he was in a state of complete exhaustion late tonight. Vicar-General John A. Lyons, of Wilmington, who was with the distinguished patient during the past five days, returned to his home this evening.

Before coming to Ocean City Bishop Curtis was removed to St. Agnes' Sanitarium, Baltimore, where a specialist of the Johns Hopkins Hospital pronounced his malady to be a cancerous growth of the stomach. Although in a state of collapse, the prelate was removed to this place, his physicians believing the sea air would prolong his life. The patient realizes that his ailment is incurable and it was on this account that he arranged to be taken to St. Agnes' Sanitarium.

Despite his serious condition, Bishop Curtis managed to celebrate pontificial mass on Pentacost Sunday in the Cathedral at Baltimore. During the following week he officiated at seminary ordinations and confirmations and also took a prominent part in the commencement exercises at St. Mary's College and at Mount St. Joseph's Convent, Emittsburg, Md. As late as June 26 he held ordinations in Washington.

The news of Bishop Curtis' critical condition has cast a gloom over the peninsula, in which is embraced the diocese of Wilmington. Bishop Monaghan is doing everything within his power to make his distinguished guest comfortable in what are probably his last hours.

Native of Eastern Shore.

Bishop Curtis was born in Somerset county on July 4, 1831. He comes of an old Maryland family and his people had been prominent on the Eastern Shore for many years. After a preliminary education in the schools of Pocomoke City, he studied for the Protestant Episcopal priesthood and was ordained in 1856. He stayed on the Eastern Shore until 1857, when he came to this city as assistant rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church. Returning to the Eastern Shore he became rector of the church at Chestertown until he was called to the rectorate of Mount Calvary Episcopal Church, which had a fashionable congregation.

For nearly nine years he remained there and endeared himself to his congregation. He was a deep student of theology and, according to one of the members of his congregation, possessed an excellent voice and a good delivery.

When he resigned from his charge the affair caused a sensation over the country. Then it was rumored that he intended to embrace the Catholic faith and some of his congregation followed him and became Catholics.

Consults Cardinal Newnam.

At that time England was astir with the Newnam movement, and thither Mr. Curtis repaired. Cardinal Manning was then the Catholic Archbishop of Westminster and Mr. Curtis was advised by him as to what course he should pursue. After the deliberation he entered the Catholic faith, being received by Bishop afterward Cardinal Newnam.

Shortly afterward he returned ty Baltimore and studied at St. Mary's Seminary. After several years' study he was ordained by Archbishop Gibbons and stationed at the Cathedral, where he became secretary to the Cardinal. At the Third Pienary Council of Baltimore he was one of the secretaries and theologians.

In 1886 he was consecrated Bishop of Wilmington by Cardinal Gibbons, assisted by the late Archbishop Kain and Bishop Moore, of St. Augustine. The sermon of the occasion was preached by the late Bishop Becker, who dwelt on the good qualities of Bishop Curtis.

Bishop Curtis resigned the bishopric in 1896 and was appointed titular Bishop of Echinus. The reason given was that his duties were of an arduous nature and his health would not permit him to undertake some of the problems which then confronted the church in the East. For a year, however, he remained administrator of the Wilmington diocese, when he was made vicar-general of the Archdiocese of Baltimore by Cardinal Gibbons.

Disciple Of Izaak Walton.

He has lived a quiet and austere life. He hates publicity and few know of the weekly and sometimes semi-weekly trips he makes to local fishing streams with his hook and line. Often he goes for a spin on his bicycle, which he greatly enjoys.

The Bishop cares little for society. He rarely accepts invitations out to tea. His delight is to stroll along on a sunny afternoon with his breviarly in his hand, and he will frequently stop in his walks to pet a child on the head and inquire its name.

For his years he is remarkably well preserved. In this he is similar to Cardinal Gibbons.

In public life he preserves a dignified and somewhat unapproachable manner, but this seeming reserve is thrown to the winds when in the company of the clergy. Then he is an excellent conversationalist. Despite his seclusion from the world, he keeps in touch with the affairs of the day and has great power for conversing intelligently upon them.

In the absence of Cardinal Gibbons he always presides over the affairs of the archdiocese. Like the Cardinal, he is an early riser and an early retirer. By the clergy he is loved, and many of them go to him for paternal advice.

GUARD YOUR DIGESTION

The Health Officers' Bulletin for May, issued by the State Board of Health, gives the following seasonable suggestions:

"With the advent of warm, even torrid weather, the usual seasonal increase in the number of cases of intestinal disorders is to be expected and warded off, as far as it is possible. Cholera infantum, "the bane of the second summer," is especially to be dreaded in infants, while similar troubles prevail among children of larger growth and in men and women of maturer years. Statistics show that one-third of all children born die before reaching the age of three months, and three-fourths of all deaths in the first year occur during the first six months. This frightful mortality is largely due to improper methods of infant feeding. Pediatrists and diatetists are agreed that mother's milk is the best food for an infant. Unfortunately, in many instances artificial feeding must be resorted to. In such cases cow's milk, the usual substitute for mother's milk, should be preferably taken from a mixed herd and properly diluted and pasteurized before using. This very materially minimizes the danger.

"In adults the most potent factors in the causation of intestinal disease are: (1) drinking water, (2) eating unripe fruit, and (3) undue exposure to the sun's rays. Undue exposure to the scorching rays of a summer sun has sealed the fate of many a man and many a woman 'full of years.' The venerable William Cullen Bryant, father of American poetry, is an illustrious example. Bryant, whose days had been bounteously prolonged, having refused the shelter of an umbrella while delivering an address at the unveiling of a bust of Mazzin, the Italian patroit, in Central Park, New York city, on the afternoon of May 29, 1878, was overcome by the excessive heat, from the effects of which he died two weeks later."

ON THE ORIGIN AND MEANING OF THE AMERICAN "O. K."

O. K. is a popular American abbreviation used not only in current talk, but in serious business, as in the marking of documents, etc., and means "all right." There are several explanations of its meaning, and quite a few legends are to explain it.

It is plausibly held that in early Colonial days the best rum and tobacco imported came from Aux Cayes, in Santo Domingo. Hence, the best of anything came to be known locally as Aux Cayes, or O. K.

The term did not, however, pass into general use until the Presidential campaign of 1828, when the supposed illiteracy of Andrew Jackson, the Democratic candidate, was the stock in trade of his Whig opponents. Seba Smith, the humorist, writing under the name of Major Jack Downing started the story that Jackson indorsed his papers O. K. under the impression that they formed the initials of "Oll Korrect." It is not at all impossible that the General did use this indorsement, and that it was used by other people also.

But Mr. Parton has discovered in the records of the Nashville court, of which Jackson was a judge before he became President, numerous documents indorsed "O. R.," meaning Order Recorded. He urges, therefore, that it was a record of that court with some belated business that Major Downing saw on the desk of the Presidential candidate.

However this may be, the Democrats in lieu of denying the charge, adopted the letters O. K. as a sort of party cry and fastened them on their banners.

LARGE SWORD FISH CAUGHT.

A sword fish 13 feet 8 inches long was caught in a net about three miles off the shore at Ocean City Thursday afternoon. In the same net a shark was caught weighing about 500 pounds. Both fish were captured in a sturgeon seine and there was a lively tussle among the fishermen to kill the monsters and land them on the shore. Sharks have frequently been seen in the ocean off the Ocean City beach and a few have been caught, but this is the first time a sword fish has ever been known to inhabit the waters along the coast. Several persons returning from the summer resort yesterday stated that preparations were being made to exhibit both fish Sunday and it is expected that large crowds of spectators will examine the curiosities.

MRS. GROVER CLEVELAND is now said to have been "left in comfortable circumstances," the estate of her husband being sufficient to provide for needs of herself and children. This is well.
