Isn't It Awful?

You surely know by this time that a cream separator may even double your dairy profits, and make the work easier, too. Then why not have one?

Just take one good look at these pictures—and then a good look at your wife. The upper picture shows the simple bowl of the Dairy Tubular Separator—washed clean in one to three minutes. The other picture shows the actual insides of one of the many styles of complicated bowls used in all other separators. Which are you going to ask your wife to wash? We'll be pleased to take a Tubular apart for you. Bring your wife to see it.

CURRANT BREAD MAKING.

Prize Recipes For Methods Used by Housewives In Various Parts of the World.

Currant bread is coming into greater popularity every day. It takes the place of cake and is more economical as well as more wholesome than plain white bread. Following are a few of hundreds of recipes for making this staple received in recent competitions:

Whole Wheat Currant Bread.

Scald (do not boil) one and a half cups of sweet milk and a cup of water. When tepid add half a cake of yeast after soaking ten minutes in cool water, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and a teaspoonful of salt. Stir in enough whole wheat flour to make a stiff batter. Allow to rise. Three hours is long enough if kept warm, overnight if cool. When light add an egg, a tablespoonful of melted butter and a cup of cleaned and dried currants. Beat well, then add whole wheat flour to make a soft dough. Work well, mold into two loaves, place in greased pans, brush over with melted butter, let raise until light, and then bake in hot oven. When brown, which should take about twenty minutes, cool the oven one-half and bake thirty minutes longer.

Newport Currant Bread.

Scald two and a half cups of milk. When cool add three tablespoonfuls of sugar, a little salt and butter the size of an egg. Dissolve half of a compressed yeast cake in half a cup of warm water and add to milk. Stir in flour enough to make a batter and add a pound of currants washed and dried. Add flour. When raised knead again and place in pans for baking. Be sure to allow enough time for bread to rise in the pans.

Princeton Currant Bread.

Boil one medium sized potato in a quart of water until soft. Scald a small cup of flour with the hot potato water and add mashed potato beaten thoroughly to prevent lumps. When cold add a cake of compressed yeast soaked in a little cold water. Let stand six hours to rise, then add a pint of warm water, a pound of thoroughly washed currants, a tablespoonful of lard, salt, two beaten eggs, a cup of brown sugar, cinnamon if desired and flour to make a stiff dough. Knead ten minutes, put into covered pan in a warm place to stand overnight and bake in the usual way. This recipe will make three large or six small loaves. This bread requires more time than white bread to rise.

PROTECT OUR INTERESTS IN THE LATIN REPUBLICS.

Firm Policy Needed to Secure Fair Treatment In South American States.

It is estimated that there are a thousand million dollars of United States capital invested in Central and South America. This amount is being constantly enlarged, and with the completion of the Panama canal there will be a further large increase of United States investments.

Through the international bureau of American republics our government officially invites the investment of capital in and the increase of trade with Latin America. But there it stops. It does not protect this trade or these investments after they have been built up.

Congress adjourned without action upon the claims of five American companies which asserted that they had been despoiled by Venezuela. All the government asked was arbitration. This was refused by President Castro, and no steps were taken to compel him to give the aggrieved companies their day in court. Similar conditions with respect to American interests exist in other South American countries.

These countries might as well make up their minds that long headed American business men will not put their money where it is in constant danger from the rapacity of irresponsible dictators. Our government also might well consider that the trade of the United States with the countries of South America can best be fostered by the adoption of a policy, as just as it is firm, of insisting upon fair treatment for American interests and upon prompt redress when these interests are attacked.—Exporter, June.

TO AID NEW WIRE COMPANY?

Installation of Automatic System at National Capitol Signal For Guesses as to Government's Plans.

In view of the positive denial by the Telepost company that it is seeking to sell out its rapid automatic telegraph system to the government, there is no little interest in the search for reasons for the installation of the Telepost apparatus in the rooms of the house committee on postoffices and post roads.

It was originally stated that the exhibit of this system in working operation, sending and receiving at the rate of 1,000 words a minute, was placed on view for the purpose of showing what could be accomplished by automatic telegraphy should it be determined to carry out government experiments looking to the establishment of a national telegraph system as a part of the postal service.

It is now suggested that the government may aid in the establishment of the Telepost system with a view to building up a better and cheaper telegraph service. While a government telegraph has some strong advocates in congress, the majority opinion is in favor of leaving the improvement of wire service to private enterprise.

Meanwhile the Telepost company is going ahead with the building of its lines and seems prepared to put its service in operation with a flat rate of twenty-five words for 25 cents without regard to distance, whether or not it receives aid from congress.

DEAD TRUST USED TO PREVENT U. S. ACTION AGAINST VENEZUELA.

Bogy Resurrected by Asphalt Promoter to Forestall Move on Behalf of Claimants Against President Castro's Government.

Little or nothing had been heard about the asphalt trust since its collapse in 1901 until the recent recrudescence of the Venezuelan controversy. Then it was suddenly discovered that the trust was at its devilish work again. This time it was trying to embroil the United States in war with President Castro—or so said his representatives here—and in horrified tones his press agents asked, "Shall the United States go to war for a trust?"

Perish the thought! Especially should the nation avoid going to war for a dead trust, one that seven years ago was laid in the tomb bearing the inscription: "National Asphalt Company; born 1900—died 1901. Gone, but not forgotten by the stockholders."

It is one of fate's choicest ironies that the unsavory reputation of the National Asphalt trust has lately been dragged forth and used as a bogy to scare off action on behalf of the American claimants against Venezuela, one of these claimants being the New York and Bermudez company, a subsidiary concern of the General Asphalt company that survived the bursting of the asphalt bubble in 1901.

For the resurrectionist is no other than Amzi L. Barber, promoter of the National Asphalt company and since its failure the associate of President Castro in the asphalt business.

In all the annals of high finance there is no spectacle to equal that of a parent holding up the dissolute life of a bankrupt offspring as an argument to show that he (the said parent) should remain in possession of an important part of the deceased bankrupt's estate.

With the horrible example of the Asphalt Company of America and the National Asphalt company before them the reorganizers who took hold of the Barber wrecks gave up the trust idea. They reduced the capitalization from $58,000,000 to $31,000,000, of which only $24,000,000 have been issued, ended the era of collusive bidding and closed specifications for municipal contracts and have succeeded in living a life free from scandal.

But still the sins of the fathers of the old asphalt trust continue to be visited on a company and a management who are in no way responsible for these sins. The General Asphalt company, still referred to as the trust, is not only a legatee of the odium of the old regime, but the victim of the deal whereby its Venezuela property is held in the possession of the Castro-Barber combination awaiting President Castro's pleasure in referring the Bermudez and other claims to arbitration.

TEXTILE MILL OUTPUT IS OVER A BILLION A YEAR.

Big Increase Coming From Addition of Linen Making to American Fiber and Fabric Production.

Linen does not figure at all in the valuation of $1,200,000,000 that the government places upon the output of the textile mills of the United States—cotton, wool, silk and other fiber goods, including the product of finishing and dyeing mills. Linen appears only in the list of imports at a valuation of about $22,000,000.

It is a striking fact that the value of the annual output of the American textile mills amounts to very nearly as much as the total capital invested in this industry, which is estimated at $1,343,324,605. The value of the textile output of the United States is exceeded only by the value of food products and iron and steel manufactures.

The annual dividends of textile mills exceed $80,000,000 a year, or $7,000,000 a month, not a dollar of which has been until now earned from the manufacture of linen from American flax. The next figures for textile production, however, will include the output of the Oxford linen mills just established in Massachusetts. These are the pioneer mills in the United States, employing a new process of American invention which overcomes the obstacles heretofore presented to the making of American linens in competition with the cheaper labor of Russia, Belgium, Ireland and other foreign countries.

In addition to fiber and fabrics the Oxford mills make a linen machinery "waste" and "oxolint" for surgical purposes. The latter product is one for which the medical profession has long been looking as a substitute for surgical cottons now in general use. Linen is preferred for the reason that it is more highly absorbent and non-irritating.

Town Gains Fame From Its Cakes.

The town of Eccles, near Manchester, England, has gained considerable fame from the fact that it is the home of a currant cake that is now known the world over by the name of Eccles cake. It is made in the following manner:

Rub into one pound of flour a quarter of a pound of lard, one teaspoonful of baking powder and a pinch of salt. Make into a paste with ice cold water, then roll out thin and spread little bits of butter over, and fold over and roll out again and spread butter over once more, and roll and then fold up. Take a pound of currants; wash and dry them. Then add a teaspoonful of vanilla; roll out a piece of paste about the size of a large saucer, put in the center two tablespoonfuls of currants, a piece of butter about the size of a small nut and a tablespoonful of sugar. Wet the edges of the paste and gather them together, turn over on the board and roll to a round cake. Bake in a hot oven twenty minutes.

DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS

The undersigned, as Treasurer of the Committee of One Hundred, a political organization throughout the State of Maryland for the purpose of electing Bryan and Kern and the regular Congressional candidates of the Democratic party, having duly given bond to the State of Maryland and filed the same with the Secretary of State, as provided under chapter 122 of the Acts of the General Assembly of Maryland of 1908 for the purpose of preventing corrupt practices, is now in position to receive and account for, according to law, such contributions as may be made by all citizens; and has also been appointed by the Democratic National Committee member of the Finance Committee of the National Organization for the State of Maryland.

This new law, which throws much labor on political treasures, directs the names of all contributors and the amounts to be made a public record in the Circuit Court Clerk's office of the respective counties or Baltimore City. No subscriptions without the name of the giver can be received. Any person who subscribes in any other name than his own, and every treasurer who knowingly receives such a subscription, is subject to fine and imprisonment and will be ineligible to public office for four years from the date of the offence. A detailed account of expenditures is required. The law prohibits subscriptions from corporations. The publicity thus given to all subscriptions is apparently intended to discourage them from the special interests for improper purposes and also correspondingly to encourage the party leaders and beneficiaries, including the rank and file of the people, whose interests are served by honest government, to bear the campaign expenses of the party which they choose to support. The public record of contributions will thus serve as an index of the individuals who give financial support to the Democratic party in this important campaign.

Every Democrat in the State of Maryland, who is financially able, should at once make a contribution for the couse either to a local Treasurer, to the Treasurer of the State Central Committee, Hon. Murray Vandiver, or to the undersigned and the name of the contributor will be placed on the Roll of Honor to be recorded in the courts of record as directed by the Statute.

If the people desire to rule and throw off the yoke of the special interests, they should respond to this lawful opporpunity and contribute to necessary and proper political expenses.

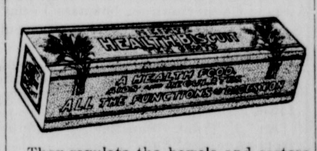
WHY SUFFER

When relief can be obtained at small cost and with little trouble, ask your grocer for a 10c package of Heintz Health Biscuits. These biscuits are a combination of cereals-oats, wheat, barley and rye ground into meals leaving all the nutritive elements for the building of muscle, bone, teeth, and nerves, and at the same time possessing laxative qualities.



They regulate the bowels and restore the stomach to its natural condition. They are delicious as well as nourishing. Doctor George Le Fevre of Muskegon, Mich. says, "I have been using your Health Biscuits in my practise and have had remarkable success with them. My patients are delighted at this wonderful food. If you knew the merits of these biscuits, you would not be without them. Everybody should eat Heintz Health Biscuits to keep well. They cost but 10c per package at your grocer. If he does not keep them, have him order them for you.

Have You Seen the 1908 Ford Auto?

IF YOU HAVEN'T, you must call on us and get a demonstration. Its the most powerful; the smoothest running; the easiest of control; the noiseless, and the most economical machine on the market today, both in first cost and in running expenses.

I will be in Chestertown in a few days to give a demonstration and prove all this to be true.

Don't buy an Auto until you see the FAMOUS FORD.
