OCTOBER 1, 1938.

The Democratic State Convention in Baltimore on Wednesday Every available seat in the spacious theatre was filled throughout the six hour session. All of the losing candidates except Congressman David J. Lewis were present and pledged support to the nominees. Mayor Jackson, who received hearty applause, appeared upon the platform and occupied a seat beside his successful opponent, and later addressing the convention, pledged his support to candidate O'Conor and the rest of the ticket. After the nominations were formally made the nominees were presented and each made short addresses. Enthusiastic applause greeted Senator Tydings and Candidate O'Conor when they arose to acknowledge the honors.

Health Trailer Tour.

Child health conferences on wheels were held in eleven counties in connection with the summer tour of the health trailer of the bureau of child hygiene of the State Department of Health. The trailer started on its rounds on Child Health Day—May 1—and remained in the field until the end of August, visiting sections of the State not ordinarily reached by the child health conferences held regularly throughout the year.

Over 180 places were visited and over 7,000 miles traveled. One or more clinics was held at each place for the examination of babies and their older sisters and brothers, not under medical care, and for conferences with the mothers about the health needs of their children. The staff of the trailer included a doctor, a dentist, a public health nurse and the driver of the car, who had charge of the health movies shown in the evenings.

The tour started in Cecil county and ended in Somerset. The other counties visited included Charles, St. Mary's, Calvert and Prince George's in southern Maryland; Kent, Queen Anne's, Caroline, Talbot and Worcester on the Eastern Shore. Arrangements in each county were under the direction of the county health officer.

Over 2,400 children, ranging in age from babies a few weeks old to youngsters nearing school age, were brought to the conferences by their mothers or others interested. The older children—over 1,000 five and six year olds—were examined in preparation for admission to school. Special attention was given to the general health of each child to the relations of malnutrition, heart conditions, to the throat, nose, tonsils and teeth, and to evident defects of vision and hearing. Children in need of corrective care were referred to their own physicians.

One out of every three of the children measured up to all of the health standards. The rest needed attention, some more so than others. Approximately one out of seven was underweight and needed building up. Nearly as many had to be added conditions of the nose or throat, and about a third of the total needed dental attention. The trailer is divided into compartments, one for the general physical examination and the other for the dental. The child's state dental chart had great attraction for the youngsters, who submitted with the course of the great adventurer to extractions and treatments. Nearly 1700 of the children had the benefit of corrective dental care. Fillings or other treatments totaled over 700 and more than 1,000 "first" or "baby" teeth were extracted from their owners.

About one third of the children had received protection against diphtheria and vaccination against smallpox had been neglected for one half of the children who were getting ready to enter school. Supplemental doses for protection against this disease were arranged all along the tour for the benefit of the children for whom immunization was need. In connection with the clinics, over 1,000 of the children were immunized against diphtheria and 670 were vaccinated against smallpox.

The traveling conferences supplemented the child health conferences held as usual during the summer months in other parts of the State. The fall and winter schedule, now in effect, makes provision for periodical conferences in every section of the State.

Good Oyster Crop Is Due This Year.

This year's oysters are in better condition than those of the past several seasons, Edgar Marine, seafood auditor of the Conservation Commission, reported Monday.

Mr. Marine, who recently toured oyster areas, said that Eastern Shore tributaries of the bay are "filled with a fine crop of oysters.

"Field observations indicate that the crop is in better condition than for several seasons," he added. He attributed the better condition in part to the gradual increase in the planting of shells and to the transplanting of seed oysters.

During the past six years the production of oysters has increased greatly, revenue collections showed. From September, 1937, to last April a total of 3,492,577 bushels were produced, as compared to 3,962,107 bushels for a corresponding period ending in April, 1936.

A successful season ending this fall depends entirely upon the demand for oysters, Mr. Marine said. The oyster industry suffered a recession last winter principally because the working man did not purchase his usual quantity of oysters, he declared.

The increase in the production of oysters was attributed in part by Mr. Marine, to the 1,151,725 bushels of oyster shells which were planted in 1936. The 1,236,165 bushels of shell planted in 1937 should cause increase during 1939, he explained.

A total of 472,596 bushels of oysters were transplanted from the seed beds at the head of the bay to fattening areas this year. Approximately 167,000 bushels of oysters were moved similarly during 1937.—Sun.

Weddings, deaths, accidents and personals of live interest in Calvert will be sent to the Baltimore Sunday Evening Star for publication if they are identified immediately, and in the case of weddings arranged event it would be necessary to send in ahead of time.

Pasture and Scratch Grain Make Mature Turkeys Fat.

The cheapest way to fatten mature turkeys is to allow them to range on a fenced-in green pasture and feed them liberally on a scratch grain mixture made of equal parts of corn, barley, wheat and oats, says Wade H. Rice, poultry specialists for the University Extension service.

Mr. Rice calls attention to experiments by the United States Department of Agriculture which show that a combination of pasture and scratch grain started in September will add weight and finish to mature turkeys in plenty of time for the Thanksgiving market. Rye, wheat, kaffir, velvet bean, cowpea and rape sown in a mixture make excellent pasturage if clover, bluegrass or alfalfa pasture are not available.

Either white or yellow corn may be used in the grain mixture, depending upon the kind of finish desired. Yellow corn definitely gives a yellow tinge to turkey skin. The skin remains white when white corn is fed, although plenty of green pasture also is available. Turkeys fed white corn so that they will have an ample amount of vitamin A that the birds otherwise get from green pasture. If pasture is not available, mature turkeys may be fattened on regular mash and scratch feed commonly fed to grown turkeys, says Mr. Rice.

NUMBER OF TELEPHONE CALLS REACHED NEW RECORD IN 1937

Overseas and Ship-to-Shore Service Extended; New Transcontinental Line Completed

Long distance telephone calls in the United States during 1937 reached a new peak with a total of about 55,630,000 calls. This was about 4,500,000 more than in any previous year, and 7,450,000 more than in 1936.

Teletypewriter service also continued to show steady improvement. There were about 3,550,000 teletypewriter messages in 1937, which was an increase of 638,000 over 1936.

A new record was also established for overseas radio-telephone service, when about 59,000 messages were transmitted, exceeding by 19,000 the number sent in 1936, which was the previous high year. During the year service was extended to Damascus, Syria; Bagdad, Iraq; Sofia, Bulgaria; Port au Prince, Haiti; Juneau, Alaska, and to two additional ocean liners.

Bell System telephones may now be connected with about 36,000,000 of the world's 39,000,000 telephones, and communication is possible with 72 different countries and localities.

Another important achievement of the Long Lines Department of The American Telephone and Telegraph Company in 1937 was the completion of the fourth transcontinental telephone line, which provides additional telephone facilities over a new route to the Pacific coast. This project involved a big engineering construction job between Amarillo, Tex., and Kingman, Ariz., and added one more route for the constantly increasing telephone traffic between the east and west coasts.

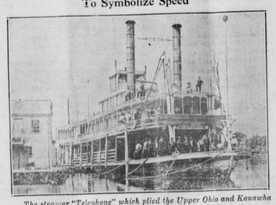
STEAMBOAT "TELEPHONE" QUEEN OF OHIO WHEN INDUSTRY WAS YOUNG

Ancient Stern-wheeler Named for New Invention in 1878 To Symbolize Speed



The steamer "Telephone" which plied the Upper Ohio and Kanawha Rivers from 1878 to 1885.

Sixty years ago the "Telephone," a stern-wheel steamboat 150 feet in length, left Portsmouth, Ohio, on her maiden trip to Pittsburgh. At that time fast boats had often been called the "Telegraph" but only two months after the first commercial telephone exchange in the world had been opened in New Haven, Conn.,—the name "Telephone" was an innovation. Alexander Graham Bell's invention was new and mysterious and the name "telephone" stirred the imaginations of the residents along the upper Ohio River. It was then six months before the first telephone exchange was to be opened in the state, and, of course, long before the telephone was in general use.

The three Maddy brothers, who in 1876 had become prominent in steamboat circles on the upper Ohio River through their ownership and operation of the steamers "Salt Valley" and "Exchange," sought a fitting name for their new boat.

The telephone was a topic of much discussion and on March 4, 1878, the Maddy brothers announced that they had selected a very appropriate name for their new steamboat—"The Telephone." Oddly enough, the bell which they placed on the "Telephone" was formerly in use on the steamer "Exchange," on which they had served and had been financially interested. The ship was launched at Ironton, Ohio, April 27, 1878, and about a month later began her run between Cincinnati and Pittsburgh.

On November 1, 1878, the "Telephone" permanently abandoned her Cincinnati and Pittsburgh schedule and entered the trade for which she was built, that between Wheeling and Charleston, W. Va., the latter port being on the Kanawha River. On December 2, the Maddy brothers sold the "Telephone" to the Kanawha Valley Packet Company, and the following week she entered the Charleston and Gallipolis trade. The "Telephone" was queen of the upper Ohio and Great Kanawha rivers and did much to publicize the instrument from which she derived her name in the early pioneer days of the telephone industry.

After an interesting career on the Kanawha and Ohio Rivers, she was damaged by ice on January 2, 1885, and sank. After having difficulties in trying to raise her, the job was abandoned and the ship was sold to wreckers.

The interesting story of the "Telephone" was dug out of musty newspaper files and historical material by Clarence A. Swayze, of Columbus, Ohio, chairman of the historical research committee of the N. C. Kingsbury Chapter No. 2, Telephone Pioneers of America. He became interested in the historical material during the course of his research into the early history of the telephone industry in Ohio.

WINDMILLS TO SUPPLY POWER ON DESERT LINK OF TRANSCONTINENTAL 'PHONE LINE

"Booster Current" Obtained From Air On Oklahoma-California Section

Windmills will supply power for transmitting telephone conversations over some sections of the recently completed "fourth transcontinental" telephone line where it crosses desert lands in the southwest. This first-known use of such machinery for this purpose was recently decided upon after the Bell Telephone Laboratories in New York City had made tests with an experimental windmill in New Jersey.

The windmills will drive generators which will charge batteries supplying current to the vacuum tube amplifiers or repeaters stationed at intervals along the line between Oklahoma City and Whitewater, Calif., to "boost" human voices on their way. Ordinary power lines not being available in certain sections of the desert country, it was decided that a windmill at each repeater station would produce the power most satisfactorily.

There is an almost constant breeze in these regions, but should a prolonged calm or any break in the windmill machinery interrupt this source of power, a gasoline-operated generator will automatically start when the battery reaches a certain stage of discharge. Should this equipment fail, another automatic device will sound an alarm to the nearest "inhabited" repeater station, sixty or seventy miles away.

On this important new voice highway to the Pacific, a new type of "carrier current" telephone channel, recently developed by the Bell Laboratories, will be used. This system, with a wide frequency range, makes it possible to carry on as many as sixteen conversations simultaneously over one pair of wires. In addition to telephone channels, the new route will also provide circuits for broadcasting networks, telegraph and teletypewriter service and picture transmission.

T. B. Fight Being Won in Maryland Through Seal Sale

Deaths From Tuberculosis Reduced More Than Two-Thirds

A winning fight against tuberculosis, "the Great White Plague" of several years ago, is gradually being won in Maryland. No longer is tuberculosis considered a hopeless disease if one should be afflicted with it. Most cases can now be arrested and if discovered early enough, they can be cured quickly and easily. Tuberculosis is also a preventable disease.

This is certainly encouraging news considering that tuberculosis led all other diseases as a cause of death only a few years ago. In Maryland alone, since the organized effort to eradicate the disease was commenced in 1904, the death rate has been reduced from 214.2 per hundred thousand population to 31.9 per hundred thousand. These gains, to a great extent, have been accomplished by the Maryland Tuberculosis Association and the public-minded citizens who have supported them in their work by buying and using Christmas Seals.

Fight Must Go On

The fight, however, is far from won. Tuberculosis is still dangerous. It is the leading cause of death between the ages of 15 and 45, a period of great economic importance. Four sections of people need increased attention. They are: men in industry; young women; Negroes of all ages; and adolescent school children. Any let-up in the anti-tuberculosis program now would undo much that has been accomplished and the death rate would probably rise.

In order to completely eradicate the disease the Maryland Tuberculosis Association maintains, by means of the annual Christmas Seal sale, many activities to combat it. Among these are: a state-wide program of free, best clinics; the Miracle House, a tuberculosis preventorium for white children who have lived in contact with the disease; medical research; a year round program of health education; a clinic for teaching tuberculosis diagnosis to colored physicians; and the purchase of diagnostic equipment.

Early Diagnosis Now Possible

All of the above activities make possible the early discovery of tuberculosis. To discover the disease early not only makes the cure more sure; but also enables the person who has it to go to a sanatorium before he has infected all those near to him. Many people delay in consulting a physician, explaining away any feeling of illness that they might have, with disastrous results to themselves and those around them. Sometimes a cough that hangs on, loss of weight or appetite, tiredness, and indigestion hint the presence of tuberculosis; although in many instances early tuberculosis has no manifestations.

Public health officials the country over, believe that tuberculosis can be eventually wiped out. The great advances that have been made give strength to this contention. If the people continue to support the work that is being done, both in prevention and cure, the goal should be reached before many years have passed.
