LET all the people give thanks for the refreshing showers. It has been the longest drougth in our experience—one shower in seven weeks.

THE ISSUES IN MARYLAND.

Balt. Sun, Wednesday, Sept. 8, 1909.

With the formal notification of Dr. Joshua W. Hering last Thursday of his renomination for Comptroller by the Democratic State Convention the campaign in Maryland has passed its initial stage and will soon enter the warmer zones of political conflict. The Sun has up to this time purposely refrained from defining its position with regard to the pending State contest, because of the unusual number of important issues presented by the platforms of the two parts and because it desired to consider them carefully, deliberately and thoroughly. Having done so, it feels that it would be lacking in its duty to itself, as well as to the people of the State, to defer any longer the statement of its attitude.

In announcing, as it does now, that it will support the Democratic candidates and the Democratic platform it is not by any means to be understood as expressing entire satisfaction with all the planks in that platform.

We do not hesitate to say that the plank on legislative representation for Baltimore is not what this city had a right to expect and to claim at the hands of the Democratic party; and that the Republican plank on that subject is far more satisfactory. But in the political world as in the business world, it is not always a question of what we want, or what we have an abstract right to, but what we can get. Unfortunately for the Republican party, it is not in a position to carry out its promise on this point, except by the aid of a political tidal wave, of which there is not the slightest indication. The Democrats have ten holdover Senators, and without such a tidal wave the Repvblicans cannot control the Senate even if they should carry the House of Delegates. With a Democratic Senate and a Democratic Governor, the Republicans would be helpless to pass any disputed legislature. So that if Baltimore is to get the promise of increased representation from the next Legislature, it is safer to depend on the Democratic party than on the Republican.

There is also another practical consideration. The county voters—Democratic and Republican alike—are not disposed to look with favor upon the bill of the Just Representation League. The bill to be passed by the Legislature will have to be submitted for ratification to the voters of the State. There were in 1908 171,730 registered voters in the counties and 115,986 in the city. If that bill arouses the suspicion and antagonism of the county voters by giving Baltimore what those voters consider undue representation, the result will be that it will be defeated when it is submitted to them, and that we shall get no increase at all in our representation. It is therefore, a condition, not a theory, which confronts us—a question of arithmetic and facts, rather than of abstract right. It is a case of half a loaf or no bread, and it seems wiser to make sure of half a loaf.

On the issue of direct popular primaries both platforms sin alike. But here again there is more to be hoped for from the Democrats than from the Republicans. In the matter of local nominations, city and county, the Democrats have made a beginning, and not an altogether bad beginning. In a large number of counties, as well as the city of Baltimore, they adopted this year the plan of direct popular nominations, and as Governor Crothers and many leading Democrats are in favor of making this system compulsory, there is good reason for believing that with the Democrats in power at Annapolis the people will secure their full rights in this matter. The Republicans naturally fight shy of this issue, as the elements which make up their electorate are not homogeneous, and the results which might ensue from direct primaries would prove disastrous to the party.

On the issue of a public utilities commission both parties are unreservedly committed to the creation of such an agency as will control all public service corporations alike, so that on that question, other things being equal, there is nothing to choose between them.

We come now to the suffrage amendment, which both parties have declared to be the paramount issue of the campaign. We are frank to say that if the pending suffrage amendment contained the objectionable features of what is known as the Poe amendment, defeated in 1905, The Sun could not support it. But it is free from the objections urged to that amendment, and as far as the qualifications prescribed for the colored voter are concerned, is very similar in principle to the amendment advocated by ex-Governor Warfield. It will not disfranchise any white voter in the State, native or foreign-born. It will have the effect of disfranchising most colored voters, and it is frankly intended to do this. But under it many colored voters will still be able to vote—all can do so, in fact, who have $500 worth of property or who can answer a limited number of designated questions, none of which are inherently difficult. Nor does it close the door of hope against the masses of the colored electorate. It, in fact, holds it open by the property and educational qualifications and offers a stimulus to thrift and literacy which would, in the end, prove a valuable aid to negro advancement. Without dwelling in detail at present upon all the arguments in favor of the amendment, we believe that its general effect would be not only to promote good government in Maryland, but to promote the best interests of the colored people of the State and to advance them ultimately to a higher plane of citizenship.

Thus believing, The Sun unreservedly advocates the passage of this amendment as an important step in the creation of a purer and more intelligent electorate and the elimination of elements which have hampered progress in certain sections of the State and which might easily prove dangerous in the hands of unscrupulous leaders.

NORTH POLE REACHED.

The most interesting news of the week in scientific circles has been the reported reaching of the North Pole by two different Americans. Last Wednesday news was received from Dr. Frederick A. Cook, of Brooklyn, that he had on April 21, 1908, attained the Pole, and on Monday word came from Lieutenant Robert E. Peary, U. S. N., that on April 6, 1909, he had also reached the long sought spot. The claims of the two explorers are yet to be substantiated, and scientists are already beginning to wrangle as to which one is entitled to the honors.

It seems a pity that there should be any wrangle over it, as there is glory enough for both explorers. "Old Glory" could enwrap a dozen explorers and certainly its folds are sufficient for these two. It is evident that the navy clique lean toward Peary. Cook, being a protege of Peary, has aroused his jealousy, and instead of Peary being fond of his "scholar" he shows his weakness by trying to prove his claim false. Cook has proven himself a man—magnanimous and brave. Peary has proven himself brave and heroic, but lacking in other qualities that make up a man.
