Help in trouble.

Nearly every woman can recall from her own experiences some emergency when a ready knowledge of the best thing to do, would have saved days or perhaps months of anxiety and suffering. No family ought to be without the constant safeguard and ever-present help of that wonderful free book the Common Sense Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. It tells what to do in emergency or accident or sudden sickness. It contains over one thousand pages, profusely illustrated with engravings and colored plates. It gives receipts for several hundred simple, well-tried home remedies. It instructs the mother in the care of her ailing children or husband, and gives invaluable suggestions for the preservation of her own health and condition in all those critical and delicate periods to which women are subject. The author of this great work has had a wider practical experience in treating obstinate diseases than any other physician in this country. His medicines are world-renowned for their marvelous efficacy.

Mrs. H. M. Hanerote, of Magnolia, Morgan Co., W. Va., in a letter to Dr. Pierce says: "My husband is a locomotive engineer. He came home about a year ago and just dropped in the doorway. He was burning up with fever and he commenced with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery according to directions and in two weeks he was able to go to work, without having a doctor. I commenced to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription something over two years ago, and am glad to testify that it is a God-send to womankind. I have been out of health for years, and am now able to say your medicine has cured me entirely. The three children who were born before I commenced to take your medicine did not live long, they were very delicate, but those born since (three in all) are very hearty, and that convinces me that your medicine is just what it is said to be and a great deal more."

By simply enclosing 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only to World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y., a paper-bound volume of Dr. Pierce's great book will be sent absolutely free, or for ten stamps extra a heavier and handsomer cloth-bound copy will be sent. A whole medical library in one 1000-page volume.

FARM AND GARDEN

A HAY DERRICK.

Easily Moved and Can Be Taken Apart After Use and Put Under Shelter.

This hay derrick for field stacking, of which The National Stockman and Farmer gives a cut, is reported by a correspondent of that journal as having worked satisfactorily last year. The frame can be bolted together if the maker wishes to take it down and put under shelter for use in after years or spiked together if he wishes to let it stand in the field. A pulley is used at each end of the long arm across the top. The pulleys can be best attached to the arm by clevises of suitable size. A third pulley is attached to one of the lower corners of the frame as most convenient when the derrick is in position for stacking. The base of the frame illustrated is 10 feet square, 10 feet high and 5 feet square at the top. Lumber 10 feet in length can be used for the whole of it, cutting pieces in half for the top part of the frame. The illustration shows three sides cross braced. The fourth side is not, as it makes it more convenient to take the pole down.

A HAY DERRICK.

The sills for the frame are 2 inch by 10 inch by 10 foot joists, with the ends sloped from under part up, so that they will slide like a sled when it is desired to move the derrick by hitching a team to it. The pole is 25 feet long. It should be 7 inches in diameter at base and 5 inches at top. Across the runners at center use a piece of timber 2 inches by 12 inches, 10 feet long, with 2 inch hole—or larger—in center for tenon, cut at end of pole to rest in, the shoulder around the tenon resting on the timber.

The long arm is 15 feet long, and the correspondent thinks it should be two feet longer. Short end is 5½ feet long, long end 11½ feet. This long arm should be 2 inches by 5 inches, 17 feet long, good solid timber, using brace for short end 8 feet long, 2 inch by 4 inch scantling, and long brace same kind of material, 14 feet long. Two pieces, 2 inches by 6 inches, 5 feet long, should be used across the top of the frame with circular notches to fit the pole and hold it in place. The braces on the long arm should both be fastened on the same side of arm and pole then when the rope is in the pulleys it will run directly beneath the long arm and between the braces and the pole.

About three feet from the base of the pole will be noticed a projecting rod. This is one inch iron about four feet long, fitting in an auger hole in the pole. This is used as a lever to turn the arm around over the stack when loaded. The high end of the long arm as shown in the illustration is about 28 feet from the ground. The frame must set close to the butt of stack or rick, the bulge of the stack coming out against the frame.

Turnips For Home Use.

Where only a few choice turnips are wanted for table use Orange Judd Farmer advises: Prepare ground from which early vegetables have been removed. Lettuce, onion or radish beds are usually available first. Remove all rubbish, spade up and pulverize the ground thoroughly. See that it is well compacted, then loosened upon the surface. It must be in the best possible condition to resist drought, as there are likely to be short periods of dry weather at this season. If the seed can be put into the ground just before a rain, there will be much more likelihood of its growing. Sow at rate of one to two pounds per acre. Cover lightly with a rake. The crop will need no further attention except to pull the weeds which start before the turnips are large enough to shade the ground and thus smother them. If a heavy shower should cause a crust to form before the young plants are up, break this up with a light garden rake. Continue to stir the soil until the growth of the plants prevents further work. Some of the following varieties will prove desirable: Early Snowball, Early Flat Dutch, Long White, Early White Milan.

Shallow Culture and Root Tearing.

Criticising the declaration made by some advocates of shallow corn culture that this is always best, a correspondent of Farm, Field and Fireside says: There are times when we need to cultivate deep, as a piece of fall plowing on clay ground often gets so hard that the roots will not penetrate the ground readily. Such ground should be cultivated deep early to allow the corn roots to go deep enough so a dust blanket can be formed above them by shallow cultivation later in the season, as only shallow culture on such grounds would cause the roots to grow on the surface of the soil and be torn off at each cultivation of the soil, and root tearing should be avoided as much as possible.

Water Cress Grown In Shade.

When the spring season is bright and sunny, as in America, water cress soon becomes bitter. Its best season is in the early spring months, when it first commences to grow and before many of the leaves have spread over the surface of the water, but some have had great success in cultivating it in boxes. Though it is usually found in water, it grows fairly well out of it, and a box of water cress growing in a comparatively shady place is devoid of a hot, peppery character, which, even when the plant is grown in water, it sometimes acquires. —Meehan's Monthly.

Thinning Out Vegetables.

Beets, turnips, carrots, salsify, parsnips and such things should be thinned out as soon as the plants are large enough to handle. If left to attain size, the thinning operation will prove hurtful to the plants that are left through being loosened and disturbed. Frequent stirrings with the hoe, besides keeping down the weeds, help to retain the moisture in the soil and thus materially assist in promoting more vigorous growth.—American Gardening.

The Bearden Process.

The national department of agriculture sends us the results of one examination of the recently patented Bearden process of butter making, the object of which is to combine with the oleaginous portion of cream "all those elements, heretofore discarded, in such proportions that the resultant thereof will be a compound that has all the useful characteristics of butter."

Elizabeth, N. J., Oct. 19, 1896.

ELY BROS., Bear Sirs:—Please accept my thanks for your favor in the gift of a bottle of Cream Balm. Let me say I have used it for years and can thoroughly recommend it for what it claims, if directions are followed.

Yours truly,
(Rev.) H. W. HATHWAY.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems of Truth Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

The great need of the hour in the church is "an intense inward longing and earnest outward living Christward."—Rev. William Runyan, D. D., Methodist, Northside, O.

God Comes to Crown Humanity.

Man has vindicated the world and humanity for God. God comes to crown humanity and put him in legal and final possession.—Bishop Hugh Miller Thompson, Episcopal, Mississippi.

Christ's Atonement.

The extent of Christ's atonement may reach out in saving influence to the untold millions that never heard of him as a Saviour if they accept the offer of mercy extended.—Rev. Paul C. Curnick, Methodist, Cincinnati.

Divine Truth.

Divine truth, like divine love, is of God—infinite, eternal, unchangeable, indestructible, as it was in the beginning, is now and ever shall be, world without end.—Rev. Dr. Charles Cuthbert Hall, Presbyterian, New York.

A Man's Place In the World.

A man's place in the appreciation of the world seems to be determined by a law which eschews partiality and favoritism and fixes one's place on the historic page according to intellectual and moral achievement.—Rev. Dr. W. W. Ramsay, Methodist, Philadelphia.

Judge Not, That Ye Be Not Judged.

We so plainly see the faults of men and we so dimly see their virtues, our first impulse is to be uncharitable, and it is sometimes difficult to overcome that impulse. We seldom judge as we would like to be judged.—Rev. George H. Hepworth, Congregationalist, New York.

Our Heart's Purposes.

May our hearts' purposes be so accordant with the life of heaven that whatever may have been our sentiments or creeds or professions here they will become like white raiments, the clothing of a pure and righteous heart.—Rev. John Goddard, Church of the New Jerusalem, Cincinnati.

Christ on the Battlefield.

In these days Christ is on the battlefield. As of old loving women bound up the dead Christ's brows, so still they are to be found patiently biding their time until the battle is done, and then ministering to those in whom still they recognize him who said, "I was sick and ye visited me."—Rev. Dr. George D. Baker, Presbyterian, Philadelphia.

The Greatest Hero of All.

There will come times, young men, when all the joy of living will seem to have gone out of life for you and you will have nothing to do but keep on the dusty road where there is no water. It is the greatest hero of all who can keep on walking when the road is dry and the day is hot and not faint.—Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, Congregationalist, Brooklyn.

Prayer For Our Country.

From the graves of the dead heroes comes a call to us today to stand by the flag. We look from the mounds underneath which they sleep up to the flag for which they died and from that beloved standard we look to the God of battles praying that into his keeping shall be committed the interest of the nation.—Rev. John W. Sayers, Methodist, Philadelphia.

Enduring Injustice.

It is not sweet to the heart of any man to endure injustice, but we should be unworthy of our calling if we were not willing to endure it manfully and patiently, when such a mighty privilege is ours, the privilege of serving Christ's living and progressive church, as she steers her homeward way along the splendid shore of truth.—Rev. Dr. Charles Cuthbert Hall, Presbyterian, New York.

Silent Heroes and Heroines.

There are fathers who grandly struggle against the tide of fate and never lisp the secret of their despair, whose young dreams have all faded, but who patiently bear their allotted burden with what tries to be resignation. There are noble women whose domestic afflictions of all sorts would crush them if they were not heroines, who silently suffer and make the best of their disappointed years. They sing in the minor key, but still they sing, and so the world thinks them happy when they are only brave.—Rev. George H. Hepworth, Congregationalist, New York.

Creeds Fall Like Leaves.

Creeds, like leaves, fall beneath the changing winds of opinion. The beauties of rituals are fading flowers. They pass, they wither, they are renewed when the light shines full and warm. But our practical age, demanding permanence, crying for help, crying for strength, goes down to the root, lays its hand upon the living basis and asks religion: Can you harden fiber? Can you strengthen vital tissue? Can you hold this towering growth in the rock ribbed earth, proof against tempest and disaster, defying storm and wind, wrestling with the elements and standing upright in spite of every unseen blow—a monument of strength?—Dr. Leon Harrison, Rabbi, St. Louis.

The Veils We Wear.

There are those who move upon this earth without any apparent heavenliness on their features who have really a divine glow on their souls. They live near the heart of Christ. They commune with God. These same Christians mingle with us in life's common ways, join with us in work and fellowship, and they are not greatly different from the other people we meet so far as our eyes can see. There may be a gentleness and thoughtfulness about them, a silent influence which is full of inspiration, but there is no radiance, no halo of saintliness about them. They wear a veil which conceals the glory from human eyes. They do not try to hide the grace of God that is in them. But it is in the nature of heavenly goodness to veil itself from human eyes.—Dr. J. R. Miller, Holland Church, Philadelphia.

The Child as a Social Factor.

One of the evidences showing society's high estimate of the child is our school system, costing great sums of money and employing large forces of teachers. It is true that the child in a very remarkable sense leads the man. The influence of the child is such as very often turns parents away from things that are evil and leads them toward things that are better and truer. —Rev. S. T. Warner, Methodist, Kansas City.

Problems of Advancing Civilization.

More and more the world is coming to recognize the principle that a community or a state is but an aggregation of individuals in which the welfare of one is the welfare of all and the hurt of one the hurt of all. The truly loyal man does not close his eyes to the problems presented by an enlightened and advancing civilization, but is swift to recognize them and brave and true in the attempt to solve them.—Dr. Gumbart, Baptist, Boston.

Our Flag a Sacred Emblem.

Carry the flag bravely, for you can behold in it the rejoicing spirits of the brave men of every age and clime who loved liberty and hated tyranny, who went down the red gap of death joyfully, with shining eyes, because they died for freedom. It is the incarnation of their hopes; because that banner is, they have not died in vain. In it is the song of Harmodius. There is the glory of Thermopylæ; there is the great heart of Tell; there the pierced breast of the martyr of Sempach, Winkelried; there is the desire of poor Poland, the desire of poor Cuba, the desire of poor Ireland. Carry it religiously, for it is indeed a sacred emblem.—Father Ryan, Catholic, Denver.

HAPPY!

WHY NOT?

Our customers are satisfied and well-to-do people. Why? Because they know they get the best work for the least money at our place. Trade is good, and we are always busy. Remember, we Hoop your Wheels and do not dish them, and make no charge for extra bolts.

☞ We are glad to see how our Horseshoeing is appreciated. We claim to know how to do it. Bring us your horses and you will be happy
