Men of Oak

Timbers of oak keep the old homestead standing through the years. It pays to use the right stuff.

"Men of oak" are men in rugged health, men whose bodies are made of the soundest materials.

Childhood is the time to lay the foundation for a sturdy constitution that will last for years.

Scott's Emulsion is the right stuff.

Scott's Emulsion stimulates the growing powers of children, helps them build a firm foundation for a sturdy constitution.

THE IRREPRESSIBLE BOY.

Altogether Out of Reason.

Employer—An office boy should be modest, reserved and unobtrusive.

Office Boy—Well, say, I can't do all that fer $2 a week.—Puck.

Shirked the Responsibility.

"A good name, my son, is rather to be chosen than great riches."

"That's all right pop, but what sort of a show did I have at choosing a name, I'd like to know?"—Yonkers Statesman.

A Place for Everything.

Tailor—Do you want padded shoulders, my little man.

Willie—Naw; pad de pants! Dat's where I need it most.—Chicago News.

Everybody's Target.

"Sakes alive!" shrieked Grandmother Podger, "what ails you, Johnny? Why, you look like you'd been run through a thrashin' machine."

"Yes'm" replied little Johnny, "you see we was playin' 'All Nations,' grandma, an, I was China."

Knew His Weakness.

Mrs. Younger—How do you give your little boy his health food?

Mrs. Oldhand—Oh, I put it on the mantelpiece and tell him not to touch it.—Puck.

Wrong Nine.

Teacher—Now, children, who can name the nine muses? Can you name them, Absalom Smith?

Absalom—Betcher life, I kin.

Teacher—Well, what are they?

Absalom—De ketcher, de pitcher, de firstbaster—

Teacher—That will do. School is dismissed. Absalom Smith will remain in and write the word 'ignorant' 600 times'" the newcomer, "and we got lost said Tommy. Then they heard the sound of sleigh-bells coming back, and while the driver slowed up the horses, a gentleman was walking ahead. "It was about here that we lost him," he said, and then he spied the children under the shed, and the dog that they were holding, and "Oh! papa, here I am with two lost children, I'm all right. Won't you take them in the sleigh. They are lost and they've had no supper only what the little dog brought in a bag." It was but a few minutes for Mr. St. John to gather up the lost ones dog and all and wrap them in warm blankets and speed away homeward.

ST. NICHOLAS.

That night there were three stockings hanging in the elegant nursery for St. Nicholas to fill, and three curly heds slumbered in the innocence and faith of childhood in the St. John mansion. The next morning with shouts of glee, mingled with the tooting of horns, whistles and drums from the joyous children, Mrs. St. John showed a little card to her husband that the maid had found in Tommy's pocket—"No. 10 Broom street." "We must find their mother at once," she said.

It was very early, but this good man did not wait for breakfast, but taking Tom went at once into the city. With the aid of a policeman No. 10 Broom street was found. The door was opened by a stout pleasant faced woman, who, spying Tommy said "God be praised, your mother is well nigh dead with trouble at the loss o' ye" Tommy was heard in the next room telling his wonderful story to his mother.

"I am Mrs. McBride, sir" to Mr. St. John, "I just live next door, and I heard the poor soul bewailing her children all the night, and ye found them, sir, bless the Lord.

When the sleigh containing Tommy and his mother left No 10 Broom St., it also left Mrs. McBride looking at the $20 gold piece "that he told me to get a Christmas dinner wid for me and the children. God bless him."

Later in the day Maurice came running into the parlor leading a well-washed lovely little dog, his long hair soft and curly, a blue ribbon around his neck and his beaming eyes full of intelligence, "we are going to call him St. Nicholas, papa, and Nick for short, because he found the children and gave them some bread, and now I have some body to play horse and Indian."

The dog looked from one to the other and then jumped into the lap of Mrs. St. John, and nestled its curly head under her hand.

"Maurice, do you know who this lady is?" pointing to Tommy's mama. "No sir. Why she is your own dear aunt, my sister Evelyn, and St. Nicholas has brought her to us to stay always, and Tom and Bella are your cousins to stay also." How wonderful are the ways of Providence.
