[COMMUNICATED.[

A CASE OF MISTAKEN IDENTITY.

Among our many departed citizens few, if any, have left a more enduring memory than Mr. William Henry Legg, originally of Kent Island, the well-known politician and good fellow whom death claimed a few years ago. Everyone knew "Bill," and no matter what company he was in, "Bill" never shut his eye nor his heart to the claims of friendship. To know him once was to know him always; to meet him once was the same as to meet him a million times, as "Bill" had but one face—and that was a good one—which he wore every day in the week, including Sunday, and which left the impression that its owner was a whole-souled, upright, square good fellow, who left sunshine and laughter in his back, and because of which it might be said, "He left the world better than he found it." If a man who has made two blades of grass grow where only one grew before is accounted a philanthropist, how much more justly can the man be so termed who makes two smiles grow where none existed—who brings even the approach of a smile to the sad and melancholy hypocondriac, and all who cannot laugh are hypocondriacs.

Few realize the value of laughter, which is dynamic common sense. It is Kinetic Faith, Hope and Charity. In it, as in the poet's flower from the cranied wall, lies implicit all the wisdom of the sages and the seers and a balm for every woe. Cultivate healthy, hearty laughter if you would be happy and spread happiness around you. This was Bill Henry Legg as all remember him. Consequently he held public office nearly all his life, and if he was living now would be still "holding on." To his credit are two terms in the Legislature; Custom House, Baltimore, four years; Cattle Scales four or five, &c., &c. Those who knew "Bill" Henry Legg will joyfully join with us in saying "Requiescat in pace," and they will also join with us in joyfully extending a welcome to Chestertown, and in extending the glad hand to his double, Mr. Rider Haggard.

If Mr. Legg was not dead, no one who has seen Mr. Haggard would doubt he was in town, such is the striking resemblance, and if any lingering doubt remained it would be at once removed by hearing Mr. Haggard laugh. Nothing it is proclaimed could be so similar as the appearance of both, except it be their healthy, hearty laughter. This has now become a familiar song with Mr. Haggard, as in many places on the Eastern Shore he has been taken for Mr. Legg. So when Mr. Clough, the well-known Chestertown liveryman, asked him a few evenings ago if he knew "Bill" Henry Legg, Mr. H. told him he was his brother, to which Mr. Clough made answer: "If he wasn't dead I'd believe you are Bill himself," and he introduced him as Mr. Legg's brother to some of his friends.

Mr. Haggard came to town last Friday. He is still tarrying with us enraptured with the scenic and intellectual beauties of Chestertown.

The writer of this article will give his impressions of Chestertown and vicinity in subsequent issues of the TRANSCRIPT, and we guarantee that they will prove interesting descriptions of the beauty and charms of Maryland's "God's acre."

Mr. Stam Discusses Filipinos.

Mr. Louis Stam, of Chestertown, spent several days in Middletown last week visiting his aunt, Miss Ada Lockwood, and other relatives and friends.

Mr. Stam spent six years in the United States Army, passing through the Aguinaldo rebellion in the Philippines, wherein he had many exciting and perilous adventures. It was a rich experince that yielded the young soldier no end of curious not to say marvelous incidents.

Mr. Stam gave one evening to a highly interested auditory a graphic portrayal of some strange scenes in that conflict. The incredible and unthinkable barbarities of these savages in the Philippine war, very clearly prove the truth of General Sherman's famous phase that "War is hell," and what is more, also prove that the horrors of war that he saw were a mild Sunday-school picnic compared with the awful atrocities committed by those savages in the Philippines, who are about as much fitted for the self-government that some of our hysterical academic statesmen wished to give them, as the inhabitants of the Cannibal Islands.

We wish Mr. Stam might give a public lecture on the subject. It would be both entertaining and instructive—though some of his gruesome descriptions might give the ladies the nightmare. It would, however, be another instance of the truth of the words of Shakespeare "That truth is stranger than fiction."—Middletown Transcript.

To Install Wireless.

The Tolchester Company is having installed on the steamer Louise a wireless telegraph system, which will be ready for use by the opening of the summer excursion season in June. This is the first Steamboat Company to install the system in Baltimore, and Superintendent Eliason has had the work done, believing that it will be of great service to the company in case of accidents to the steamer on the route, and incidentally a man may be kept at the switch board to announce to the excursionists the doings in the city and country during their trip across the bay. Capt. Eliason is a hustler, and he knows a good thing when he sees it.
