A Unique Speech.

Senator Arthur P. Gorman, candidate for Governor, visited Wicomico county last week, and while there he visited a campmeeting in company with his host, Senator Jesse D. Price. Mr. Gorman is the first candidate for office who was ever invited to deliver an address to such a gathering.

When it was first suggested that Mr. Gorman make an address he demurred, as anything he might say might be misconstrued and might be interpreted as an effort to win voters. When, however, the preachers and laymen pressed the invitation and assured him that the tenters and visitors expected him to speak he yielded.

The speech Senator Gorman delivered is one of the most unique things we have read. Beautiful in its simplicity, sweet and charming in its sentiment, it immediately stamps Senator Gorman as a man of deep sentiment and deeply appreciative of the blessings of civic righteousness. His speech was as follows:

"I am deeply appreciative of your kind invitation to deliver an address," said Senator Gorman. "It is extremely gratifying to visit Wicomico county and to greet on this occasion the stalwart citizens of your thrifty section. My earliest recollections are of campmeetings. My good grandmother had an abiding faith in the campmeeting in our neighborhood, in Howard county, and thither she took her grandchildren, and there we led a delightful life under the branching oaks. The impressions there gained have ever been an inspiration.

"I realize that home is the foundation of the best that is in our lives. It is the foundation of our government. In these groves the home gathers. Here we have the best influences of our homes. Here we hear the preachers expound to us laymen in the simplest words the teachings of the Master. It is here that our boys and girls receive lasting impressions of religion.

"I am a great believer in the mother's influence. My Christian mother instilled in me true religious principles and precepts. How well we remember the mother's kiss! How well we remember her ministrations during our illness! How well we remember the gentle hand that soothed our brow! How well we remember her prayers, her admonitions of danger, her saintly advice, her sacrifices for us.

"In later life we recall our mothers as ministering angels. Think of the mother's influence upon us, how she taught us to be brave, to be courageous, to be faithful to our trusts, to be loyal in our friendships. How much we owe our mothers for our success! How much we owe them for all the good and beauty in this world!

"I am sure that this campmeeting and the teachings here will inspire us all to better deeds and better lives and will aid us in achieving a more perfect civic righteousness."

'Tis needless to add that Wicomico is all for Sentor Gorman.

What is the Matter with Queen Anne's Girls.

"Wanted, by an Eastern Shoreman who is a widower and very lonely, a German emigrant maiden between the ages of 26 and 27, who would appreciate a loving husband who owns a little cottage in the country, surrounded by a flower and vegatable garden, besides several finely smoked hams hanging in the chimney." The above is practically the substance of a communication received in Baltimore, Thursday by the officials of the United States immigration department, and the writer, who does not live 100 miles from Queenstown, is anxiously awaiting a favorable reply. In his letter the correspondent states that he thought that the department officials could aid him in getting a second spouse. The writer says in his communication that he had heard that a good many women that landed at Locust Point from Bremen were being returned, and if such were the conditions he wonld like to have one for a wife. The applicant states that he is tired of living by himself and what he particularly desires is a young German maid, 26 or 27 years of age, who would appreciate a good home. Full particulars, the letter states are anxiously awaited and the hope expressed that the department will be able to gratify the request.

Bolt Wrecks House.

The house of Capt. Harry Gill, at Centreville Landing, was almost completely wrecked on Monday morning during a severe electrical storm.

The roof was torn off, a number of partitions on the lower floor were torn out and the porch was wrecked. The kitchen stove was moved a distance of 10 feet. Mrs. Gill and her 5-year-old son, who were in the kitchen, were rendered unconcious, but neither shows any mark of the lightning's work. The bolt knocked the boy across the room and under a table and then passed out into the yard, killing a dog and two chickens. It then plunged down the well, which it so stirred up that the water has since been unfit for use.
