SATURDAY, JULY 3, 1909.

"THE wages of sin is death." A beautiful young woman beaten to death in Talbot county and her murderer dead by by his own hand, adds but another instance.

"Lame Bob" Eastman was not a lovable character, but when the hand that had beaten a woman to death sent a bullet crashing through the heart that actuated it, all that remained was a piece of cold clay that had once been the habitation of a human soul. Was the Church that refused its offices and the churchyards that denied a resting place following the example of the Saviour of men, who administered the scathing rebuke to the scribes and Pharisees:—"He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone?" —Cecil News.

PLANS have been completed for the fourteenth annual meeting of the Maryland State Bar Association, to be held at Old Point Comfort on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week.

With the next session of the Legislature, but a few months off, the Bar Association is expected to take some definite action at its meeting with regard to recommending new laws. One of the chief accomodations of the committee on laws is the creation of a paid commission, to which shall be referred all bills introduced into the Legislature before they are acted upon by committees. The committee also strongly recommends the appointment of a special committee of the Association to consider and report upon amending the Constitution so as to provide for a State auditing department.

Changes in the courts, for example, an increase of one circuit judge for the Federal Judicial Circuit; the abolishment of the Orphan's Court, and the appointment of a jury commissioner to select petit jurors are also recommended by the committee on laws. Employers' liability, child labor and the evils of divorce are also among the vital questions which have been recommended by the committee. Many prominent men will make addresses at the meeting of the Association.

INDEPENDENCE DAY.

Another Independence Day is here and the American eagle will scream with renewed vigor, but can the citizens of America feel that they are independent in reality? Don't the shackles of bossism, fashion and greed makes slaves of many a free-born citizen?

Supt. Stephens in his address before the State Teachers Association on Tuesday touched upon the slavery to fashion as follows:

"The graduating exercises are becoming too much of a dress parade. Our school patrons are not Harrimans and Rockfellers, and we would not expect our students to dress like their daughters A tax of $3 or $4 on each graduate for commencement invitations, a different dress to wear on each of two or three evenings of exercises, and other growing expenses to be paid by parents who have already sacrificed to the limit to make graduation possible, become a burden, and the common sense of the high school teacher must take hold of these extravagances with a firm hand and control them. Some weeks ago a class of girl graduates took much pleasure in showing me as a product of their their own handiwork, their graduating dresses. Each girl was required to make her own dress, and there was a modest limit to the amount to be spent for material.

"There is much practical education in the plan. The cultivation of simple tastes is at least a part of our instruction, and if the teachers of past generations had done their full duty in this particular we would not have to witness the Merry Widow and basket hats and other ultra styles which are an abomination, both in sight of the Lord and man.

"We have always been taught that high character and the development of honest and independent manhood and womanhood are rather the offspring of trial, hardship and denial than of ease and indulgence. But the spirt of the present in all departments of life is toward indulgence, and if it is not checked it will leave its blight on individual character and finally undermine the citadel of our national life. The school teacher must take a stand against the demoralizing tendencies and strange these extravagant school innovations."

THE dry wave is certainly sweeping the country. According to a newspaper report a prohibitionist in faraway Texas had so much literature left over that he stored it in his barn, not thinking about the cows. The cow ate the prohibition literature and every cow on the place went dry.

That's the story as printed. We can't vouch for it.

SEVERAL parties have threshed small lots of wheat this week and the yield has been fair.
